PREFACE

Lancelot Andrewes kept a book of prayers in his own hand, in Greek, in Latin, and in Hebrew, and did not publish it. What survives is a series of witnesses to it: manuscripts that differ from one another, and printed editions that differ from the manuscripts. This edition sets out one of those witnesses whole — the text printed at Oxford by J. H. Parker in 1853, itself a reprint of the Sheldonian edition of 1675 — and puts a new English translation beside it.

The English translations of Andrewes now in print all descend from one nineteenth-century construal. No edition currently in print, and none in the public domain, presents the Greek and the Latin at all. That is the gap this book is for. A reader who wants to know what Andrewes actually wrote, rather than what a translator made of it, has until now had to find a scan.

WHAT KIND OF BOOK IT IS. It is not, for the most part, an original composition, and Andrewes does not pretend that it is. What he kept was closer to a commonplace book of prayer: a gathering of what he had found worth praying, copied out, arranged, and steadily adapted to his own use. Sentences of Scripture make up the greater part of it — the 1853 prints better than two thousand references — and around them stand the liturgies, the creeds, the Fathers Greek and Latin, a medieval archbishop, and, without apology or any change of voice, Cicero and Seneca. Some of these he names in the margin as he goes. Most he does not.

This is worth saying plainly, because it is easy to read a book of private prayers as a record of private invention, and to be disappointed on learning it is largely quotation. The work here is of a different kind, and it is everywhere: what to take, what to leave, what to put beside what, where to break the line. A sentence of Isaiah set against a sentence of the Liturgy of Chrysostom is doing something neither does alone, and the arrangement is Andrewes'. An illustrative note on the sources stands at the end of this volume.

THE TEXT. What is printed here on the left-hand pages is a record of the 1853 plate, not an improvement on it. Accents, breathings, punctuation, capitals and ligatures stand as they were set. Where the 1853 gives a scripture reference that is wrong, the wrong reference is printed and the note says so; where a sort is broken or a word has been lost to a defect in the plate, the loss is marked rather than mended. Nothing has been silently corrected. An edition that quietly repairs its source is no longer a witness to anything, and this one is meant to be usable as evidence.

The consequence is that a few things in this book are known to be wrong and are left wrong on purpose. They are marked, and the reasons are given.

WHICH LANGUAGE IS ANDREWES'. In the first part the Greek is Andrewes' own text and the Latin faces it. The translation here follows the Greek, and treats the Latin as the first witness to how the Greek was construed by someone much nearer to it than we are. Where the two genuinely diverge, the Greek is followed and the Latin's reading is recorded. In the second and third parts, which are largely Latin, the Latin is the text and is translated as such. Where Hebrew stands in the text it is kept, and translated; the English layer never silently drops a script.

The 1853 editor was modest about his Latin. His apparatus says of the Greek-only manuscript he collated that it lacks the Latin, quam Editor ipse confecisse videtur — which the editor seems to have made himself. That would make the Latin of the first half of Part I an editor's Latin, and worth less as a witness than it looks.

It is worth more than he claimed. At printed 34–35 the manuscript reads πλάσμα where the printed Greek reads τὰ ἔργα, and the facing Latin reads Figmenta — which departs from the printed Greek, and departs also from the Vulgate of the psalm it is quoting, which reads opera manuum tuarum. There is no route to Figmenta except from a Greek text reading πλάσμα. At printed 174–175 the Latin Ablue renders ἀπόλουσαι, wash thou away, where the printed Greek has ἀπόλυσαι, release thou — one letter apart, and the Latin saw the other one. The Latin column is therefore not simply downstream of the Greek beside it: in places it sees a manuscript the printed Greek does not. That is a small finding with a large consequence for how this book should be read, and it is why the Latin is set as a column and not as a footnote.

THE ENGLISH. The translation is new, and it is line-keyed: one English line to one line of the original, at the same indentation, with the same brace-groups and columns. A reader should be able to run a finger down the page and stay in step. That constraint costs something in fluency and is worth its cost, because the shape of these prayers on the page — the lists, the widening and narrowing, the single words given a line to themselves — is not decoration. It is how Andrewes prayed.

The register is the English of the Authorised Version and the Prayer Book: thou and thee to God, and the cadences an English reader already carries. The syntax, though, stays plain. Archaism is confined to the pronouns and verb-endings of address; there are no Jacobean inversions the Greek does not force. For the Psalms the crib is Coverdale's Psalter, the Prayer Book's, ahead of the Authorised Version — not from preference but because Coverdale worked through the Latin and the Greek, as Andrewes did, and so agrees with him in exactly the places where the Authorised Version, made from the Hebrew, does not. Andrewes never quoted an English Bible. He was quoting the Septuagint and the Vulgate, and Coverdale stands nearer to that than any later English does.

THE PAGE. The originals are on the left-hand page and the English on the right. In Part I, where the 1853 sets Greek and Latin on facing pages, both share the left-hand page in two columns, so that the whole of an opening of the 1853 stands under the eye at once with its translation beside it.

The page numbers running along the outer edge are this edition's. The numbers in brackets on the inner edge are the 1853's, and every page of it is here and findable by them.

WHAT IS NOT HERE. Two things, and it is better to say so.

The 1853 does not print all of Andrewes' Hebrew. Its own apparatus records Hebrew standing in the manuscript at more than a dozen places where the printed page has none — among them a phrase of rabbinic anthropology, the tohu wabohu of the second verse of Genesis, and a short Greek-and-Hebrew lexicon of the words for sin. This edition prints the 1853, so that Hebrew is recorded in the apparatus and is not restored to the text. Restoring it would be a different book: a critical text of Andrewes rather than a faithful setting of a printed edition, and it would need the manuscripts themselves.

And the manuscript has silences the print does not show. Three blank leaves stand in it after what is here printed page 184, in the middle of the seventh day. What that silence means — whether a division has been lost, or something was meant to be added — cannot be settled from a printed edition. It is recorded and left open.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT. F.E. Brightman's translation of 1903 remains the best English understanding of this book, and has been consulted throughout — after drafting, never before, and never copied. His arrangement is his own: he judged the second part of the 1675 unusable as printed and rearranged the whole for practical use. That judgement is defensible, and its consequence is that the Preces Privatae as a book, in its own order, has been out of reach of English readers for a long time. Restoring that order is much of what this edition is for. Where his notes have corrected a reference or settled an attribution here, the note says so.

INTRODUCTION

This book has been read for three centuries in pieces. It is a manual of private devotion, and a manual is used by opening it where you need it; the editions have encouraged that, and the one nineteenth-century translation most readers know rearranged the whole for exactly that purpose. What follows is an argument for reading it the other way — through, in its own order — and an account of what that turns up.

Page numbers in what follows are the 1853's, the bracketed figures on the inner edge of every leaf of this edition.

ONE THING TO NOTICE FIRST. The book does not point at itself.

A phrase will be used on page 22 and used again on page 431, turned round the second time, and neither page marks the other. The night at the ford is quarried three times, for three different things, and no leaf mentions the other two. Hezekiah's psalm carries the whole of a confession in Part II, returns in Part III in a form that differs from it twice, and comes back a third time at the evening office as a thanksgiving; the three do not acknowledge one another. The body is catalogued member by member at 406 as filth and again at 426 as workmanship, in what is plainly one design, and neither page looks up. The last sentence of the book was already said, four hundred leaves earlier, among the morning prayers.

None of this is marked, and there is no reason it should have been. Andrewes was not making a book for a reader. He was making one for himself, and a man does not cross-reference his own memory. But the consequence for us is that almost everything this volume is doing is invisible to anyone consulting it, and visible only to someone going through it. It is why the notes at the foot of the right-hand pages exist, and why they so often say that nothing on either page marks the return.

THE BOOK'S OWN ACCOUNT OF ITSELF. It does explain itself once, and the page is easy to walk past.

At 347 stands a leaf headed Divisio. It is not a prayer. It is an analysis of what a prayer contains, set out in two columns, and most of its terms are the actual section headings of this volume: Confessio peccatorum, Confessio fidei, Confessio laudis, Deprecatio, Intercessio, Supplicatio, Gratiarum actio, Commendatio. The page is a table of contents for a book that never prints one. Three of its terms — Compellatio, Comprecatio, Threni — occur nowhere else.

Set that beside the opening. The first three openings of Part I take the when, the where and the how of prayer in turn, and each is built by the same method: a number is fixed from Scripture, and then every item under it is given a text in which somebody is found doing that thing. Seven times a day do I praise thee sets the number of the hours, and each of the seven gets a text — Mark's a great while before day, the third hour at Pentecost, Peter's sixth hour on the housetop, the ninth at the Beautiful Gate, Isaac at eventide. Then the places, by the same rule: the closet, the housetop, the temple, the sea-shore, the garden, the bed, the wilderness — and then every where, which is not an eighth place but the conclusion drawn from the seven. Then the postures, seven of them, each with the text of somebody in that posture and the affection it belongs to named in a column alongside.

The canonical hours are being derived, not inherited. A man who wanted the offices could have taken them from a breviary; this one builds them out of Scripture and shows his working. Whatever else the opening of this book is, it is not a preface. It is a treatise, and it is arguing that the shape of the day's prayer can be got from the Bible alone.

HOW IT QUARRIES. What the book does with a text is never simply to quote it. Four habits recur, and once they are seen they are everywhere.

It changes the mood. A promise is made into a petition. God says, through Isaiah, I have blotted out thy transgressions as a cloud; the prayer answers blot out — perfect turned imperative, and thy turned to mine (22). At 431 the same verse comes back fitted to the hour: blot out our iniquities as the cloud of night, our sins as the morning mist. At 332 it stands untouched in God's own indicative. Three settings, and no page marks the other two. At 349 an indicative is made a question instead: John's having loved his own, he loved them unto the end becomes For that thou hast loved me hitherto? At 355 a promise is not turned but taken up with its half discharged — open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it is answered Dilato os meum, Domine: Tu imple, I have opened it wide: do thou fill it. The condition is reported as performed and the promise called in.

It turns a text round on its speaker. The sharpest instance is §37's confession, which is built on Isaiah xxxviii, Hezekiah's psalm of the sick king, quarried out of order — verses 15, 17, 16, 17, 14 across two leaves — and with the person changed. The Vulgate has quid respondebit mihi, cum ipse fecerit, what shall he answer me, seeing He hath done it. The page has cum ipse fecerim, fecerim, fecerim: seeing I myself have done it, have done it, have done it. One letter changes the person, and the repetition is the confession (372). Part III has the twin at 409 and it differs twice — hæc fecerim, once, and under a chapter figure one numeral short. The same habit puts thy will be done into the mouth of Balaam, who wanted to do otherwise and could not, and into Eli's, who has just been told his house is ruined (351); and it takes a word spoken by David to King Saul — wilt thou chase a flea? — and speaks it to God (412).

It quarries its own vocabulary from the verse it is standing beside. The six titles at 340, the four cells at 341, the nine epithets of fides at 342 are each lifted out of the Vulgate of the text printed alongside. Once the habit is established it becomes evidence: at 341 it convicts a printed reference of a wrong numeral, because the word on the page could only have come from the other verse.

And it does the same thing several times without repeating itself. The Lord's Prayer is treated three times in Part II and the three are not to be conformed. §25 sets it out plainly (350). §26 says it seven times over, petition by petition, in other men's words, and then begins the seven again with different speakers, and the later sets are each quarried from one region of Scripture — the Psalms, then Proverbs, then the Prophets; the petitions are never once restated in Andrewes' own words (351–354). §31 states each petition, admits it to have been failed, and then asks it: to be held holy by all men, and by me first of all above many — Yet I have not so held it. The petition becomes an indictment before it becomes a request (360). Only the third turns the prayer against the man praying it.

The fourth petition is the one to watch through all of this. It is never simply asked. It is asked by Jacob's vow at Bethel with the stone still under his head; by Job's self-curse negated, let thistles not grow instead of wheat, so that the oath a man called down on himself if he lied becomes the prayer for bread; and by not by bread alone, which grants the petition and takes it back in one line.

THE BOOK ARGUES. Part III is where the method becomes a case, and it is the part of the book most damaged by being read in pieces, because it is continuous for twenty leaves.

The section is a plea for mercy, and it is built like one. Texts are entered as evidence: the law, the prophets, nature, the apostles, and last of all Christ. The apostles are called in a numbered series — thine Apostle, then the second Apostle, then the fourth — with James standing between them, quoted in his place and never counted (423). Then the last witness, and the tense is the point: nor in vain shalt Thou Thyself have said, Come unto Me, all ye that labour — so that the whole chain is set as evidence of something that would be void if the invitation failed. Then the verdict clause: these things were not said in vain, they cannot be. Then three wherefores, marking the turn from proving to asking. And then, after twenty leaves of argument, the shortest prayer in the Gospels: God be merciful to me a sinner. The disproportion is the design. The whole apparatus was built to earn the right to say the one sentence that needed none of it (424).

Two features of the arguing are worth naming, because they are unusual and they are consistent.

The first is that the argument is strongest where the example is worst. Three human kings are entered as precedents binding upon God, and the series mounts downwards: David sparing Shimei, and David was a man after Thine own heart;

then the kings of Israel, who are merciful — which is not Israel's estimate of them but Ben-hadad's servants', a pagan's reckoning quoted with approval; and last Ahab, who had sold himself unto sin, whom God spared when he humbled himself. The final plea is that God should not do less for this man than He once did for Ahab (412). The same move again at 422, with three men who would not take back a word: Isaac, who would not revoke a blessing got by fraud; Darius, bound by the law of the Medes against his own friend; and profane Pilate, what I have written I have written — surely God never will. The series descends in dignity while it ascends in force, and ends on the man who condemned Christ.

The second is that God's goodness is sorted into classes in order to claim the lowest. Good to the good and to them that deserve well; gracious to strangers and to them that deserve nothing; merciful to the evil, and to them that deserve ill. Then five words: Upon this last I take my stand (415). The taxonomy exists to put the man praying into the worst bin and hold him there — and the ground offered is not desert but its absence: when for no man's sake Thou canst, when for nothing's sake, for Thine own sake Thou forgiveest sins.

The same shape governs §28's ladder in Part II, eleven pairs of si non ... tamen, every one a bargain struck downwards. A scriptural ceiling is set, conceded to be out of reach, and the least he will do is named instead: seven times a day like David, or at any rate three like Daniel; Solomon's long prayer, or at any rate the Publican's short one; Christ's whole night, or at any rate one hour. The find is that the floor is repeatedly set by a bad example: if not on the ground in ashes, yet not in beds; if not in sackcloth, yet not in purple and fine linen — which is the rich man of the parable. Where the ceiling is a saint the floor is a sinner. If I cannot be Job, let me at least not be Dives.

WHAT RITE THIS CAME OUT OF. A reader who wants to know what kind of churchman kept this book will find the evidence pointing hard in two directions at once, sometimes within a single opening. The honest thing is to set both out and adjudicate neither, and that is what this edition does.

Within eight leaves in Part II the Latin pages carry five independent marks of the Eastern rite. At 349 the private prayer takes the shape of the eucharistic anaphora: a spiritual sacrifice is offered, received upon a spiritual altar, and the Spirit asked to be sent down in return, which is an epiclesis — a man alone in his chamber praying the shape of the Church's central action over himself. On the same leaf stands voluntary and involuntary, ἐκούσιων καὶ ἀκούσιων, which is the Greek liturgies' formula and which no English rite has. At 350 the Lord's Prayer carries its doxology, absent from the Vulgate at Matthew vi. 13 and from the Roman rite. At 355 Christ is called Carbo duplicitis naturæ, the coal of the twofold nature — a title that is not in Isaiah: the prophet's coal, taken from the altar with tongs, read as wood and fire at once and so God and man at once, with the tongs as what handles what cannot be touched. That is the ἀνθραξ of the Eastern liturgies, where the same coal is what the communicant receives, and it carries a whole Christology in one noun. And at 356 he does not merely cite the Greek Psalter but prays in it: Domine, dilexi decorem domus Tuæ stands at the door and returns fourteen lines later as Κύριε, ἡγάπησα εὐπρέπειαν οἴκου σου.

Two leaves later the evidence turns round. At 358 the section headed Actus Adorationis opens with the Litany — O God the Father, of heaven; O God the Son, Redeemer of the world; O God the Holy Ghost; O holy, blessed Trinity — the Prayer Book's first four invocations in the Prayer Book's own order. The Litany's un-English of heaven is a rendering of the very de cælis standing on this page; both are drawing on the same Latin. At 359 a prayer for the departed is made in the Requiem's own words, defunctis requiem et lucem perpetuam, in the private manual of a bishop of the Church of England, and the page lays its ground first: Christ is Lord alike of the living and of the dead, whose we are and whose also are they, and the petition divides its gifts along that line. And at 360 both columns are the medieval memory-verses of the seven works of mercy, visito, peto, cibo, redimo, tego, colligo, condo, one verb to a work and made to be counted on the fingers — not composed here but quoted, as every schoolman knew them.

The single most loaded line in Part II is at 363, and it does not resolve the question so much as hold it open on purpose. The Interpellatio Eucharistica is seven verbs long: Recolo, gratias ago, admoneo, recordor, commemoro, offero, vel peto ut offeras. Admoneo — I put thee in mind — points the memorial at God, which is the patristic understanding of the anamnesis and not the ordinary Western one. And offerō is qualified in the same breath by vel peto ut offeras: the sacrifice is offered, and then in a single word the offerer is left an open question. A whole controversy hangs on vel. The English here keeps it and settles nothing, which is the only defensible thing to do with it.

An account of this book that argues only the Greek is answerable for 358 and 360. An account that argues only the Prayer Book is answerable for 349 and 355. Both sets of evidence are in this volume, on facing leaves, and the reader now has them.

WHAT WAS ON THE DESK. A related question can be settled further than one might expect, because the book convicts itself.

Which Psalter Andrewes had by him has usually been argued from wording, which can be misremembered. This volume settles it from numerals, which have to be looked up. At 433 two references answer only on the Coverdale Psalter and not on the Authorised Version — the Lord hath granted His loving-kindness in the day-time cited xlii. 10, and the outgoings of the morning and of the evening cited lxv. 8. Somebody had the Prayer Book physically open.

But not only that Psalter, and the proof is inside a single text. One catalogue is printed twice in this book, in two recensions, and the two cite the same verse by two different numbers: Part I gives Psalm. xxii. 17 against the pierced hands and feet, and 312 gives xxii. 16 against the same words. Seventeen is the Prayer Book; sixteen is the Authorised Version. At 295 the plate numbers a wind that passeth away as lxxviii. 39, which is the Authorised Version against the Prayer Book's 40. At 274 Ps. cxvii. 25 is impossible on either and can only be the Vulgate's numbering. Three systems are on show, and the 1853 does not hold to one.

Nor does he stop at three. At 383 a section on praise ends in Hebrew, because no Latin or English Psalter will say what the passage needs: לך דומיה תהלה — Psalm lxx. 2 in the Hebrew numbering — to thee silence is praise. The Vulgate takes the same consonants from another root and gives Te decet hymnus, praise befitteeth thee; the Prayer Book has Thou, O God, art praised in Sion. Either would destroy the entry, which exists in order to say that praise falls silent. So the Hebrew stands, and our English follows the Hebrew.

The same industry shows in the Passion. Printed 309–314 is a four-Gospel harmony — Matthew, John, Luke and Mark walked forward in step, each leaf drawing on three or four evangelists at once. He is not following one and supplementing him. Much of that density is invisible on the plate, because the continuations are marked only by Vers. and Ibid., and it is one of the places where this edition's apparatus can show what the printed page cannot.

THE END OF IT. The last section returns to the first argument, and does not restate it.

At evening, and morning, and at noonday will I pray stands at 431 — the psalm the volume opened on at page 2, where the hours were being built out of Scripture, text by text, and shown to be derivable. Four hundred pages later the hours are simply kept. The case has been made and is being lived on, which is what that looks like.

Then the day is walked down. Psalm xci is quarried across two leaves to cover the whole of it: the terror by night and the thing that walketh about in darkness on one, the arrow that flieth by day and the noonday devil on the next (432). Ephesians' rule for a quarrel is turned round and prayed — let not the sun go down upon Thy wrath — at the hour when the sun going down is not a figure but the time the prayer is being said (434). The examination of conscience is carried on past consciousness: let my sleep be, as a rest from labour, so a rest from sin, and then further, let me think nothing, even in my dreams, that may offend Thee (435).

And then one line is said twice with a single word changed. By the lamp burning, to see Thee. By the lamp quenched, to see Thee. The lamp put out is the bedside candle, and the next lines say plainly that it is also the life — the long sleep, the sleep of death, the bed of the sepulchre, the litter of worms, the covering of dust.

Four names for the grave, and every one of them is a bed; the figure begun at the pillow is carried the whole way down and never exchanged for another. The petition is identical on both sides of the line because the request does not change when the light does.

The book's last words are into Thy hands, O Lord, I commend my spirit, for Thou hast redeemed me. That verse already stood at page 26, among the morning prayers. The volume opens its day and closes its life with one sentence, and the lamp two lines above has just made the two the same act.

Nothing on either page marks the return. It is the last and the best instance of the habit this introduction began with, and it is the reason for reading the book through.

ONE CONSOLATION, WITHHELD AND THEN GIVEN. A word on the hardest stretch, for a reader who may need it.

Six leaves of §37 are a confession by a man who cannot repent properly and knows it. The section is made almost entirely of allusion the plate never marks — Egypt's leeks, the prodigal's husks, Paul's who hath bewitched you, Jacob at the ford, Romans vii. 18 word for word — and its complaint is dryness: ariditas, and the fountain of tears that will not come. He spends the whole of it unable to weep.

The answer arrives at 383 and it is Augustine, and it refuses the devotional reading of Romans viii. 26 outright. Is thy spirit, or mine, unutterable — which is oftentimes no spirit at all, oftentimes cold? The groaning that cannot be uttered is not the individual's. It is the whole Church's, pooled — because they all make up one Dove, one beseeching fervently and another lukewarmly, hence come the unutterable groanings, out of the groanings of all in common.

After six leaves of a man failing to produce the thing he thinks is required, the book tells him it was never his to produce. That is the consolation this volume had been withholding, and it is placed exactly where it does the most work.

<sup>i</sup> And the places, by the same method as the hours opposite. The closet, the housetop, the temple, the sea-shore, the garden, the bed, the wilderness — each a place where somebody in Scripture is found praying — and then every where, which is not an eighth place but the conclusion drawn from the seven.

ΟΜΟΛΟΓΙΑΙ.

Οἶμοι, ἥμαρτόν σοι, Κύριε, ἥμαρτόν σοι.

Ὡς οἷα συνετέλουν,

Καὶ οὐκ ἄξια ἦταςάς με, ὦν ἥμαρτον.

5 Ἄλλ' ἐντρέπομαι,

Καὶ ἀποστρέφω ἀπὸ τῶν ὁδῶν μου πονηρῶν,

Καὶ ἐπιστρέφω ἐπὶ τὴν καρδίαν μου,

Καὶ ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ καρδίᾳ μου ἐπιστρέφω ἐπὶ σε.

Καὶ ζητῶ τὸ πρόσωπόν σου,

10 Καὶ δέομαί σου, λέγων,

Ἥμαρτον, ἡνόμησα, ἡδίκησα,

Οἶδα, Κύριε, τὴν πληγὴν τῆς καρδίας μου, 10

Καὶ ἰδοὺ, ἐπιστρέφω ἐπὶ σε

Ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ καρδίᾳ μου, καὶ

15 Ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ ἰσχύϊ μου.

Καὶ νῦν συ, Κύριε, ἐκ τοῦ κατοικητηρίου σου,

Ἐκ θρόνου δόξης τῆς βασιλείας σου ἐν 15

οὐρανοῖς

Εἰσάκουσον δὴ τῆς προσευχῆς

Καὶ δεήσεως τοῦ δούλου σου,

20 Καὶ ἰλεως ἴσθι τῷ δούλῳ σου,

Καὶ ἴασαι τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ.

Οὐ τολμῶ οὐδὲ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς μου

Εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν ἐπαίρειν,

Ἀλλὰ μακρόθεν ἐστῶς

25 Τύπτω εἰς τὸ στήθος μου,

Καὶ λέγω μετὰ τοῦ τελωνοῦ,

Ὁ Θεός, ἰλάσθητί μοι τῷ ἁμαρτωλῷ,

Τῷ ἁμαρτωλῷ ὑπὲρ τελωνοῦ,

Ἰλάσθητι ὥσπερ τῷ τελωνῇ.

CONFESSIONES.

Hei mihi, peccavi tibi, Domine, peccavi tibi, O quantum

deliqui, et ut eram dignus non recepi! Job.

xxxiii. 27.

Sed confundor,

5 Et convertor a viis iniquitatis meae,

Et convertor ad cor meum,

Et in toto corde meo ad te convertor,

Et quaero faciem tuam,

Et deprecor te, dicens,

Peccavi, inique feci, injuste egi,

Cognovi, Domine, plagam cordis mei,

Et ecce! convertor ad te

In toto corde meo, et

Tota anima mea.

Et nunc tu, Domine, exaudi de Caelo,

De sublimi habitaculo tuo,

De solio gloriae Regni tui in Coelis

Orationem et precem servi tui,

Et propitiare servo tuo,

20 Et sana animam ejus. 1 Reg. viii.

Non audeo nedum oculos meos

Ad Caelos levare,

Sed a longe stans

Percutio pectus meum,

25 Et cum Publicano dico,

Deus, propitius esto mihi peccatori,

Mihi supra Publicanum peccatori,

Propitius esto quemadmodum Publicano.

Luc. xviii. 13.

CONFESSIONS.

Woe is me, I have sinned against thee, O Lord, I have sinned against thee.

O what things I was committing,<sup>i</sup>

and thou hast not requited me as my sins deserved.

5 But I am ashamed, and I turn away from my evil ways,

and I turn again unto mine own heart,

and with my whole heart I turn again unto thee.

And I seek thy face,

10 and I beseech thee, saying,

I have sinned, I have done iniquity, I have done wickedly;

I know, O Lord, the plague of mine own heart, and behold, I turn again unto thee with all my heart, and 15 with all my strength.

And now thou, O Lord, from thy dwelling place, from the throne of the glory of thy kingdom in the heavens, hear thou the prayer

and the supplication of thy servant,

20 and be merciful unto thy servant,<sup>ii</sup>

and heal his soul.

I dare not so much as lift up mine eyes unto heaven,

but standing afar off

25 I smite upon my breast,

and say with the publican,

God be merciful to me a sinner,

to me a sinner above the publican,<sup>iii</sup>

be merciful even as to the publican.

<sup>i</sup> The body's part in prayer, itemised like the hours and the places. Kneeling, prostration, the face to the ground, the head bowed and the countenance cast down, the smitten breast, trembling, groaning, eyes and hands lifted, the body kept under — seven numbered postures, each with the text of somebody doing it, and each with the affection it belongs to set opposite in a column of its own: Humbling, Confusion, Indignation, Fear, Sorrow, Longing, Avenging. Three consecutive openings apply one method to the when, the where and the how, which is what makes this front matter a treatise and not a preface.

<sup>v</sup> The reference here is the 1853 editor's, in his brackets, and his contraction is ambiguous. He writes [Ez. ix. 6.], which in this volume could stand for either Ezekiel or Ezra — the two are elsewhere kept apart as Ezech. and Ezr. The verse is Ezra's: I am ashamed and blush to lift up my face to thee, my God, which is a countenance cast down and a confusion, exactly the posture and the affection the line names; Ezekiel ix. 6 is the order to slay at the sanctuary and has nothing to do with either. The volume settles it from inside itself — printed 171 prints the same verse in full as Ezr. ix. 6, 7, in the same penitential sense. Brightman reaches the same reading independently, tagging the sentence Of Ezra.

Quæcunque vera, quæcunque decora, quæ-cunque justa,

THE ORDER OF MATINS.

Glory to thee, O Lord, glory to thee,
 Glory to him that hath given me sleep
     for the repairing of my weakness, 5     and for the easing of the labours of this much-toiling flesh.

This day and every day, perfect, holy, peaceful, whole,
     to pass without sin —

10             Grant, O Lord.

An angel of peace, a faithful guide,
 a keeper of our souls and bodies, encamping round about me,<sup>i</sup> and ever suggesting to me the things that pertain to salvation —

15             Grant, O Lord.

Pardon and remission of all our sins,
 and of all our offences —

              Grant, O Lord.

20     The things that are good and profitable for our souls, and peace for the world —

              Grant, O Lord.

That the residue of the time of our life
 in penitence and godly fear, 25     in health and in peace we may fulfil —

              Grant, O Lord.

Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever

Τὸ πλάσμα τῶν χειρῶν σου μὴ παρίδης,
 Τὴν εἰκόνα σὴν μὴ παρίδης,
 Εἰ καὶ στίγματα φέρουσαν τῆς ἁμαρτίας.
 Κύριε, ἐὰν θέλῃς, δύνασαί με καθαρῖσαι.

 5 Domine, dic tantum verbo, et mundabor. Mat.
 viii. 2, 8.
 Et tu mi Salvator Christe, Christe Salvator mi!
 Salvator peccantium, quorum ego primus, 1.
Tim. i. 15.
 Ne me despicias,
 10 Ne me despicias, Domine.
 Pretium sanguinis tui,
 Signaculum nominis tui ne despicias,
 Ne me despicias, Domine,
 Quin respice me oculis tuis,
 15 Illis quibus respexisti Magdalenam in convivio, Petrum in aula,
 Latronem in patibulo.

 Cum Petro defleam amare, et dicam, Mat. xxvi.
 75.
 O quis dabit oculis meis fontem lacrymarum,
 Et plorabo die ac nocte! [Jer. ix. 1.]
 Cum Magdalena audiam te dicentem, 25 Dimissa tibi sunt peccata tua:
 Et cum ipsa multum diligam;
 Quia multa mihi, et multiplicia dimissa sunt. Luc. vii. 47, 48.

Despise not the work of thine hands,<sup>i</sup> despise not thine own image,<sup>ii</sup> though it bear the marks of sin.
 Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.
 5 Lord, speak but the word only, and I shall be cleansed.<sup>iii</sup>

     And thou, O Christ my Saviour, O Christ my Saviour, Saviour of sinners, of whom I am chief,
         despise me not,
 10      despise me not, O Lord.
 The price of thy blood,
     the surname of thine own upon me — despise it not,
         despise me not, O Lord;
 But look upon me with those thine eyes, 15      with which thou didst look upon Magdalene at the feast, upon Peter in the hall,
         upon the Thief upon the tree.
 So that with the Thief I may humbly beseech thee, 20      Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom;
 with Peter may weep bitterly, and say,
     O that mine eyes were a fountain of tears,
     that I might weep day and night!
     with Magdalene may hear thee saying, 25      Thy sins are forgiven thee;
         and with her may love much, because many, yea manifold, [sins]
         have been forgiven me.

<sup>ix</sup> A promise about what God has done, asked back as a petition for what He has not yet done. Isaiah's verse is spoken by God in the perfect — Delevi ut nubem iniquitates tuas, et quasi nebulam peccata tua, I have blotted out thy transgressions — and the prayer answers Dele ... et dissipa, blot thou out, scatter, with the possessive turned from thy to mine. The tense and the person are both reversed, and nothing on the page marks the change. It is the same move as at printed 321, where let it not return unto me void — said by God of the word that goes out of His own mouth — is asked of the prayer going up from a man's; twice in the volume a guarantee is borrowed rather than argued from.

 I may walk.
 Vouchsafe to keep me this day without sin.
 Upholding them that fall, raising up them that are cast down,
 5 that I never harden my heart through provocation,

 For thy name's sake, O Lord, thou shalt quicken me,
 30 in thy righteousness thou shalt bring out of trouble

<sup>i</sup> Rom. xiii. 13 — let us walk honestly, as in the day · <sup>ii</sup> Ps. xcv. 8 — harden not your heart; Heb. iii. 13 — lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin · <sup>iii</sup> Ps. xci. 6 — the Vulgate's noonday demon, where the BCP has the sickness that destroyeth in the noon-day · <sup>iv</sup> Matt. vi. 34 — sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof · <sup>v</sup> Ps. lxxviii. 33 — their years in trouble · <sup>vi</sup> Ps. xix. 2 — day unto day uttereth speech · <sup>vii</sup> Ps. cxliii. 8 — for I lift up my soul unto thee

<sup>iii</sup> Two lines here take the Vulgate against the Prayer Book, and the English follows the Vulgate. Negotium perambulans in tenebris and dæmonium meridianum — the business that walks in darkness and the noonday demon — are what Andrewes wrote; Coverdale has pestilence and the sickness that destroyeth in the noon-day. CONVENTIONS §9 makes the BCP our crib, and yields wherever he reaches past it, as he does here.

<sup>vii</sup> Psalm cxliii does not stop here — it runs on across the next two openings, the plate marking Vers. 9 and 10 below and Vers. 11 on printed 27. One psalm carries the morning prayer over three leaves, and a reader who meets only the tagged verse 8 will take it for a single borrowed line.

 Μηδὲν μοι ἔργον γενέσθω εἰς λυγμὸν,
 ἢ εἰς σκάνδαλον καρδίας.
 20 Γενέσθω δὲ ἔργον τι, περὶ οὗ μνησθῆς μου, Κύριε, εἰς ἀγαθωσύνην, καὶ φεῖσαί μου κατὰ τὸ πλῆθος τοῦ ἐλέους
 σου.
 Εἰς χεῖράς σου παραθήσομαι
 Πνεῦμα, ψυχὴν, σῶμά μου, 25 Ἐκτίσας, ἐλύτρωσας, ἀνεγέννησας αὐτὰ,
 Κύριε ὁ Θεὸς τῆς ἀληθείας, Καὶ μετ' ἐμοῦ τοὺς ἐμούς πάντας, καὶ τὰ ἐμὰ πάντα.
 Ἐχαρίσω μοι αὐτὰ, Κύριε, ἐν ἀγαθωσίᾳ σου.

my soul.
 Raise up out of my soul
 the thoughts that are without understanding.
 And breathe into me good thoughts,
 5 and such as are well-pleasing in thy sight.
 Turn away mine eyes,
 that they behold not vanity.<sup>i</sup>
 Let mine eyes look upon the things that are right, and let mine eyelids assent unto the things that are just.<sup>ii</sup> 10 Hedge up mine ears with thorns, that I hearken not unto words void of instruction.
 In the morning waken mine ear to hear,<sup>iii</sup>
 and open mine ears unto the instruction of the oracles.
 Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth,
 15 keep the door of my lips.<sup>iv</sup>
 Let my speech be seasoned with salt,<sup>v</sup> that it may minister grace unto the hearers.<sup>vi</sup>

OF THE FIRST DAY.

THROUGH the tender mercies of our God, the Dayspring from on high hath visited us.<sup>i</sup>

5 Glory to thee, O Lord, glory to thee,
 who didst create the light, and enlighten the world.<sup>ii</sup>

Light visible,
 the sun's ray, the flame of fire, 10 day and night,
 evening and morning.

Light intelligible,
 that which may be known of God,<sup>iii</sup>
 that which is written of the Law,<sup>iv</sup> 15 the oracles of Prophets, the melody of Psalms,
 the admonition of Proverbs,
 the experience of Histories,

Light that knows no evening.

20 God is the Lord, who hath shewed us light,
 Keep ye the feast with thick boughs,
 even unto the horns of the altar.<sup>v</sup>

By thine own resurrection raise us up unto newness of life,<sup>vi</sup> setting before us the ways of repentance.

 The God of peace, who brought again from the dead that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant,
 5      even our Lord Jesus Christ,
 Make us perfect in every good work,
     to do his will,
 Working in us that which is wellpleasing in his sight,
     through JESUS CHRIST,
 10      to whom be glory for ever.<sup>i</sup>
 Thou who thy thrice-holy Spirit upon this day
     didst send down upon thy disciples,
     Take not the same, O Lord, from us,
     But renew it day by day
 15      in us who beseech thee.
 MERCIFUL and gracious Lord,<sup>ii</sup> longsuffering and plenteous in mercy,
     I have sinned, I have sinned, O Lord, against thee.
 Woe is me, wretched man that I am,<sup>iii</sup> 20      I have sinned, O Lord, against thee, greatly and grievously have I sinned,
 And that, observing lying vanities.<sup>iv</sup>
     I hide not aught; I frame not excuses any.<sup>v</sup>
 25      I give thee glory, O Lord, this day.<sup>vi</sup>
 I confess against myself my sins.<sup>vii</sup>
     Of a truth I have sinned before the Lord, and thus and thus have I done.<sup>viii</sup>
 O what things I committed, and things unworthy<sup>ix</sup>

<sup>vi</sup> Both halves of the exchange at Ai, three lines apart. Joshua charges Achan to give glory to the LORD and make confession; Achan answers thus and thus have I done. Here the charge and the confession are alike the penitent's own words, with Ps. xxxii. 5 set between them — neither half meaning in the prayer what it meant in the history. The re-cutting is the composition.

Thou hast chastened me for the things wherein I sinned.<sup>i</sup>
 And what shall I now say? or wherewith shall I open my mouth?
 What can I answer, seeing I myself have done it?
 5 Without excuse, without defence, self-condemned am I.<sup>ii</sup>
 My destruction is of myself, from mine own doing.<sup>iii</sup>
 To thee, O Lord, belongeth righteousness,
 And unto me confusion of face.<sup>iv</sup> 10 And thou art just
 In all things that are come upon me,
 For thou hast done truly,
 And I have sinned.<sup>v</sup>
 And now, what is mine expectation?
 15 Is it not thou, O Lord?
 Yea, my substance is with thee.<sup>vi</sup>
 If there be for me any hope of salvation,
 If thy lovingkindness overcome
 The multitude of mine iniquities,
 20 Remember what my substance is,<sup>vii</sup>
 That I am the work of thy hands,
 The image of thy countenance,
 The price of thy blood,<sup>viii</sup>
 A name from thy Name, 25 A sheep of thy pasture,
 A son of the covenant.
 The works of thine own hands despise thou not.<sup>ix</sup>
 Thine own image and likeness —
 Hast thou made it for nought?<sup>x</sup>
 30 For nought, if thou destroy it.

<sup>vi</sup> A pun the English Bible cannot keep. Andrewes asks what is my expectation and answers Substantia mea apud te est, then four lines later Memorare quæ mea substantia. Both are the Vulgate — Ps. xxxviii. 8 and lxxxviii. 48 — and both turn on substantia, which is why the two psalms can be set one on top of the other. The Authorised Version renders the first my hope is in thee and the second remember how short my time is, and the join disappears.

 10 Ἰλάσθητι δὴ μοι, Κύριε, τῶν ἁμαρτωλῶν
 Πρώτῳ, πρωτίστῳ καὶ μεγίστῳ.
 Ἐνεκεν τοῦ ὀνόματός σου καὶ ἱλάσθητι
 Τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ μου, πολλὴ γάρ ἐστι· Πλείστη γάρ ἐστιν ὅση.
 15 Ἐνεκεν τοῦ ὀνόματός σου ἐκείνου,
 Παρ' ὃ οὐκ ἐστὶν ἕτερόν τι ὑπ' οὐρανὸν
 Δεδομένον ἐν ἀνθρώποις, Ἐν ᾧ δεῖ σωθῆναι ἡμᾶς,
 20 Συναντιλαμβανομένου αὐτοῦ τοῦ Πνεύματος
 Ταῖς ἀσθενείαις ἡμῶν, Καὶ ὑπερεντυγχάνοντος ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν στεναγμοῖς ἀνεκκαλήτοις.
 Διὰ Πατέρος σπλάγχνα πατρικὰ, Υἱοῦ τραύματα αἱματόεντα,
 25 Πνεύματος στεναγμοὺς ἀνεκκαλήτους,
 Εἰσάκουσον, Κύριε, ἱλάσθητι, Κύριε,
 Κύριε, πρόσχες, ποιήσον, καὶ μὴ χρονίσῃς
 Ἐνεκέν σου, Κύριε, Κύριε, ὁ Θεός μου.
 30 Ἐγὼ δὲ οὐκ ἐπιλανθάνομαι τῶν ἡμαρτημένων μοι·

Et quæ utilitas in perditione mea? Psal. xxx.

 Propter Patris paterna viscera, Filii cruenta vulnera,
 Spiritus gemitus inenarrabiles,
 Exaudi Domine, propitius esto Domine,
 Intende Domine, fac, et ne moreris Propter Teipsum Dan. ix. 19.
 Domine, Domine, Deus mi.
 30 Ego autem non obliviscor peccatorum meorum;

And what profit is there in my destruction?<sup>i</sup>
 Thine enemies will rejoice thereat.<sup>ii</sup>
 O let them never rejoice, O Lord.
 Grant not unto thine enemies
 5 my destruction.
 Look upon the face of thine Anointed,<sup>iii</sup>
 And on the blood of thy covenant,<sup>iv</sup>
 On the propitiation for the sins of the whole world,<sup>v</sup>
 Lord, be merciful to me the sinner,<sup>vi</sup>
 10 Be merciful, I pray thee, O Lord, to me — of sinners
 First, chiefest, and greatest.<sup>vii</sup>
 For thy Name's sake, even for it, be merciful Unto my sin, for it is great;<sup>viii</sup>
 Yea, exceeding great it is.
 15 For the sake of that Name of thine,
 Beside which there is none other under heaven
 Given among men,
 Whereby we must be saved,<sup>ix</sup>
 The Spirit himself also helping 20 Our infirmities,
 And making intercession for us
 With groanings which cannot be uttered.<sup>x</sup>
 For the Father's fatherly heart,
 The Son's bleeding wounds,
 25 The Spirit's unutterable groanings, Hearken, O Lord; be merciful, O Lord;
 O Lord, attend, and do, and defer not,
 For thine own sake,<sup>xi</sup>
 O Lord, O Lord, my God.
 30 But as for me, I forget not the sins I have sinned;

They are before me continually.<sup>i</sup>
 I reckon them over in the bitterness of my soul,<sup>ii</sup>
 I am anxious over them,<sup>iii</sup>
 I turn me about and groan,<sup>iv</sup>
 5 I take indignation,<sup>v</sup>
 I take vengeance,
 I am angry with mine own self,
 I abase and buffet mine own self.<sup>vi</sup>
 That it is not more, that it is not deeper,
 10 I repent, O Lord, O Lord, I repent,
 Help thou mine impenitence,
 And more, still more and more, Pierce, rend, crush
 my heart.
 15 And remit, forgive, pardon all
 That is grief unto me and offence of heart.<sup>vii</sup>
 Cleanse thou me from my secret faults,
 From strange sins spare thou thy servant.<sup>viii</sup>
 Make thy mercies marvellous 20 Toward the sinner exceedingly;
 And in due season say unto me, O Lord,
 Be of good cheer, { thy sins are forgiven thee.<sup>ix</sup>
 { my grace is sufficient for thee.<sup>x</sup>
 Say unto my soul, I am thy salvation.<sup>xi</sup> 25 Why art thou so heavy, O my soul,

Μηδὲ τῇ ὀργῇ σου παιδεύσῃς με.

Εἶπα, Ἐξαγορεύσω κατ' ἐμοῦ τὴν ἀνομίαν μου τῷ Κυρίῳ, Καὶ σὺ ἀφήκας τὴν ἀσέβειαν τῆς καρδίας
μου.

5 Κύριε, ἐναντίον σου πᾶσα ἡ ἐπιθυμία μου, Καὶ ὁ στεναγμός μου ἀπὸ σοῦ οὐκ
ἀπεκρύβη·
Ἐλέησόν με, ὁ Θεὸς, κατὰ τὸ μέγα ἔλεός
σου,

Καὶ κατὰ τὸ πλῆθος τῶν οἰκτιρμῶν σου
10 Ἐξάλειψον τὸ ἀνόμημά μου.

Σὺ ἀναστὰς οἰκτειρήσεις με, ὦ Κύριε,
Ὅτι καιρὸς τοῦ οἰκτειρῆσαί με,
Ὅτι ἦκει καιρὸς.

Ἐὰν ἀνομίας παρατηρήσῃς, Κύριε,
15 Κύριε, τίς ὑποστήσεται;
Μὴ εἰσέλθῃς εἰς κρίσιν μετὰ τοῦ δούλου σου, Ὅτι οὐ δίκαιωθήσεται ἐνώπιόν σου πᾶς ζῶν.

The Hebrew in the heading — סיג התורה, a fence about the Law — is on the printed page, not supplied; one of the few places the 1853 let Andrewes' Hebrew stand. And the page ends by quoting the fence. The last resolution is Hosea's I will hedge up thy way with thorns, so a rabbinic phrase for the Law's protective hedge opens the page and a prophet's hedge closes it. The twenty-odd resolutions between are what the fence is made of.

This page sets the articles of the Creed against a discipline answering each — his death against mortifying the flesh, his burial against burying evil devices, and so down to the judgment. The Latin column runs six lines longer than the Greek here, because its table cells turn onto second lines; the two columns are numbered independently.

O thou who a ready mind in every good work<sup>i</sup>
accountest well-pleasing,

5       Them that for just causes unto prayer have no leisure,

Remember, O Lord, as though they also prayed unto thee.

THOU shalt arise and have pity upon them that are in the last necessity,

For it is time to pity them,
10       for the time is come.<sup>ii</sup>

And thou wilt have pity, O Lord, as upon me also, that am in extremity.

Remember, O Lord,

the { infants, / children, / youths, / young men, / grown men, / aged; } 15 the { hungry, / thirsty, / naked, / sick, / prisoners, / strangers, and friendless, / unburied, }

Them that are in extreme old age and helplessness,

Them that are driven to destroy themselves,

Them that are vexed with unclean spirits,<sup>iii</sup>

20 Them that are past hope,

Them that are sick in soul or body,

The fainthearted,

<sup>iii</sup> Acts v. 16 — them that were vexed with unclean spirits, brought to the apostles

<sup>i</sup> The plate's [1 Cor. viii. 12] is the 1853 EDITOR's reference, and it is wrong. Qui voluntatem promptam acceptam habes is 2 Cor. viii. 12 — if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted. The square brackets are the editor's own mark for a reference he supplied, so this is his slip and not Andrewes', which is why it is worth saying: the three kinds of attribution in this book — printed in the plate, supplied by the editor, owed to a later scholar — do not carry equal weight, and only the first is evidence about Andrewes. Kept as printed.

Δρόσος, | Νεφέλαι ἀπὸ περάτων τῆς γῆς,
15 Χάλαζα, | Ἀστραπαὶ, βρονταὶ,
Χιών, ὡς ἔριον, | Ἄνεμοι ἐκ θησαυρῶν,
Πάχνη, ὡς τέφρα, | Καταιγίδες.
β'. Ὑδατα ὑποκάτω τῶν οὐρανῶν,
εἰς { πόσιν, / λοῦσιν. } 20 Ἐξαγορεύσω τὰς ἁμαρτίας μου, καὶ τὰς ἁμαρτίας τῶν πατέρων μου· Ὅτι παρέβην καὶ ὑπερίδόν σε, Κύριε, καὶ ἐπορεύθην ἐναντίον σου πλάγιος·
Μὴ, Κύριε, μὴ θῆς ἀνομίας μου ἐναντίον σου,

DIEI SECUNDÆ.

EXAUDIES vocem meam mane, Domine,
Mane astabo tibi, et videbis me. Psal. v. 3.

- Benedictus es Domine,
5 Qui creasti Firmamentum Cœli, [Gen. i. 6.]
Cœlos, et Cœlos Cœlorum, Potestates cœlestes,
Angelos, Archangelos,
Cherubim, Seraphim,
10 1. Aquas supra Cœlos, [Vers. 7.]
Vapores,
Exhalationes, Unde
Imbres, | Crystallus sicut buccella, [Ps. cxlviii. 16, 17.]
Ros, | Nebulæ ab extremitatibus terræ,
15 Grando, | Fulgura, Tonitrua,
Nix sicut lana, | Venti ex thesauris, [Ps. cxxxv. 7.]
Pruina sicut cinis, | Procellæ.
2. Aquas infra Cœlos, Ad { potionem, / lotionem. } 20 Confitebor iniquitates meas, et iniquitates majorum meorum, Quia prævaricatus sum, et neglexi te, Domine, et ambulavi ex adverso tibi. Lev. xxvi. 40.
Ne, Domine, ne ponas iniquitates meas in conspectu tuo:

OF THE SECOND DAY.

IN the morning shalt thou hear my voice, O Lord, in the morning will I stand before thee, and thou shalt look upon me.<sup>i</sup>

- Blessed art thou, O Lord,
 5 who didst create the firmament of heaven,<sup>ii</sup>
     the heavens, and the heavens of heavens,
     the heavenly powers,
     Angels, Archangels,
     Cherubim, Seraphim;
 10 1. Waters above the heavens, vapours, exhalations, whence
     Showers, | Ice, like morsels,<sup>iii</sup>
     Dew, | Clouds from the ends of the earth,
 15 Hail, | Lightnings, thunders,
     Snow, like wool, | Winds out of the treasures,<sup>iv</sup>
     Hoar-frost, like ashes, | Storm-winds.
     2. Waters beneath the heavens, for { drinking, / washing. } 20 I will confess my sins, and the sins of my fathers;
 for I have transgressed and disregarded thee, O Lord,
     and have walked contrary before thee;<sup>v</sup>
 Set not, O Lord, set not my iniquities before thee,

Τὸν αἰῶνά μου εἰς φωτισμὸν τοῦ
 προσώπου σου·
 Ἄλλ' ἄφες τὴν ἀνομίαν τῷ δούλῳ σου, κατὰ τὸ μέγα ἔλεός σου,
 καθάπερ ἡλεως ἐγένου αὐτῷ ἀπὸ
 5 βρέφους, καὶ ἕως τοῦ νῦν.
 Ἥμαρτον· τί δυνήσομαί σοι πράξαι,
 ὧ φύλαξ ἀνθρώπων ;
 Διὰ τί ἔθου με κατεντευκτὴν σοι ;
 εἰμὶ δὲ ἐπὶ μοὶ φορτικός.
 10 ὦ, ποίει τῆς ἀνομίας μου λήθην, καὶ καθαρισμὸν τῆς ἁμαρτίας μου.
 Σώσον τὴν ψυχὴν μου τοῦ μὴ ἐλθεῖν εἰς δια-φθοράν
 Εὗρες γὰρ ἐν ᾧ ἐξήλασθῆς.
 15 Ἐλέησόν με, υἱὲ Δαβὶδ, Κύριε, βοήθει μοι· Ναὶ, ὦ Κύριε, καὶ τὰ κυνάρια ἐσθίει ἀπὸ τῶν ψυχίων τῶν πιπτόντων ἀπὸ τῆς τραπέζης τῶν κυρίων αὐτῶν.
 Μακροθύμησον ἐπ' ἐμοί, Κύριε, 20 μᾶλλον δὲ οὐκ ἔχω τι ἀποδοῦναι, ὁμολογῶ σοι·
 ἄφες μοι πᾶσαν τὴν ὀφειλὴν, παρακαλῶ σε.
 α'. Ἔως πότε, Κύριε, ἐπιλήσῃ μου εἰς τέλος
 ἕως πότε ἀποστρέφεις τὸ πρόσωπόν σου
 ἀπ' ἐμοῦ ;
 25 β'. Ἔως τίνος θήσομαι βουλὰς ἐν ψυχῇ μου, ὀδύνας ἐν καρδίᾳ μου ἡμέρας καὶ νυκτός ;
 Ἔως πότε ὑψωθήσεται ὁ ἐχθρός μου ἐπ' ἐμέ ;
 γ'. Ἐπὶβλεψὼν καὶ εἰσάκουσόν μου, Κύριε,
 ὁ Θεός μου, φώτισον τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς μου, sæculum meum in illuminatione vultus tui.

Ps. xc. 8.

Sed dimitte iniquitatem servo tuo, secundum magnitudinem misericordiæ tuæ,
 sicut propitius ei fuisti ab infantia,
 5 ad usque nunc. Num. xiv. 19.

Peccavi. Quid faciam tibi, o custos hominum ?

Quare posuisti me contrarium tibi,
 Et factus sum mihimetipsi gravis ?

10 Des iniquitatem meam oblivioni,
 Et purges peccatum meum. Job. vii. 20.

Salvam fac animam meam, ne veniat in interitum,

Invenisti enim in quo propitiatus sis. [Job. xxxiii.
 24.]

15 Miserere mei, fili David. Domine, adjuva me.
Mat. xv. 22. [25.]

Etiam, Domine, nam et catelli edunt de micis quæ cadunt de mensa Dominorum suorum. [vers. 27.]

Patientiam habe in me, Domine, 20 Quin potius, Non habeo unde reddam ; Confitebor tibi.

 xviii. 25—27.

1. Usquequo, Domine, oblivisceris me in finem ?

Usquequo avertis faciem tuam a me ? Psal.
 xiii. 1.

2. Quamdiu ponam consilia in anima mea,
 Dolorem in corde meo, per diem et noctem ?
 Usquequo exaltabitur inimicus meus super me ? Vers. 2.

3. Respice, et exaudi me, Domine, Deus meus, Illumina oculos meos, ne unquam

- my whole life in the light of thy countenance;<sup>i</sup>
 But forgive the iniquity of thy servant,
 according to thy great mercy, even as thou hast been merciful unto him from 5 his infancy, even until now.<sup>ii</sup>
 I have sinned; what shall I be able to do unto thee,
 O thou preserver of men?
 Why hast thou set me as an adversary against thee,
 and I am become a burden unto myself.
 10 O, make forgetfulness of mine iniquity, and cleansing of my sin.<sup>iii</sup>
 Save my soul, that it go not down into corruption;
 for thou hast found a ransom.<sup>iv</sup> 15 Have mercy on me, O Son of David; Lord, help me;<sup>v</sup> Yea, Lord: yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their masters' table.
 Have patience with me, O Lord,
 20 or rather, I have nothing to pay,
 I confess it unto thee;
 forgive me all that debt, I beseech thee.<sup>vi</sup>
1. How long wilt thou forget me, O Lord? for ever?
 how long wilt thou hide thy face from me?<sup>vii</sup>
  - 25 2. How long shall I take counsel in my soul, having sorrow in my heart day and night?
 How long shall mine enemy be exalted over me?
  3. Consider and hear me, O Lord,
 my God: lighten mine eyes,

<sup>i</sup> [Ps. xxxix. 8] — and my substance is with thee · <sup>ii</sup> Ps. xxxi. 1 — let me never be put to confusion

<sup>i</sup> The same half-verse is cited twice in this book under two different numbers. At printed 34 it is Substantia mea apud te est, referred to Psal. xxxix. 7; here it is the same clause referred to [Psal. xxxix. 8]. The difference is the numbering, not the text: xxxix. 7 is the Authorised Version's figure and xxxix. 8 the Prayer Book's, which runs one ahead here. And the Prayer Book's figure is the one in square brackets — the 1853 editor's own mark for a reference he supplied. So the plate cites Andrewes' psalm on the AV's numbering and the editor cites it on the BCP's, on two pages of one book. Both stand as printed.

<sup>i</sup> Andrewes is praying for the places he himself served, under their etymologies. The Southern Spring is Southwell and the Western Monastery is Westminster, as the Latin column says outright (sc. Southwell, sc. Westmonasterii); with St Paul's between them these are his own prebends and his deanery. The English keeps the descriptive form because the Greek does, and the identification sits where Andrewes put it, on the facing page.

<sup>i</sup> And these are his own three sees, in order. Chichester (1605), Ely (1609), and this present see — Winchester, which the Latin glosses sc. Winton. The phrase dates the prayer: he came to Winchester in 1619 and died in 1626, so this leaf of the Intercession was written, or last revised, in his last seven years. It is the one place in the book where the text says when it is.

OF THE THIRD DAY.

O GOD my God, my God,
early will I seek thee.<sup>i</sup>

Blessed art thou, O Lord,

who didst make the dry land to appear,<sup>ii</sup> who didst bring forth the buddings of herbs and trees that bear fruit.

herbs and flowers for { food, / delight, / healing, }
the fruit-bearing trees, 20 fruits { wine, / oil, / spices; }
for matter,

<sup>i</sup> Ps. xliii. 1 — O God, thou art my God; early will I seek thee, which opens Psalm lxiii . <sup>ii</sup> Gen. i. 9 — the work of the third day: the waters gathered, and the dry land appearing . <sup>iii</sup> Ps. xxxiii. 7 — the Septuagint's as in a wineskin, where the AV has as an heap

<sup>i</sup> The plate cites Psal. xliii. 1, and the verse is Psalm lxiii. 1. Ad te de luce vigilo is the Vulgate of Ps. lxii. 2, the AV's early will I seek thee; Ps. xliii. 1 is judge me, O God, and plead my cause, which is not this line. The likeliest mechanism is a dropped letter — xliii for lxiii — the same slip the volume makes at printed 411, where lxviii stands for lxxviii. Kept as printed.

Ἐπληθύνθησαν ὑπὲρ τὰς τρίχας τῆς κεφαλῆς
μου,
15 καὶ ἡ καρδιά μου ἐγκατέλιπέ με.
Εὐδόκησον, Κύριε, τοῦ ρύσασθαί με,
Κύριε, εἰς τὸ βοηθησαί μοι πρόσχες· Θαυμάσωσον τὰ ἑλέη σου ἐπ' ἐμοί, ὁ σῶζων τοὺς ἐλπίζοντας ἐπὶ σέ,
20 Ἐγὼ εἶπα, Κύριε, ἐλέησόν με,

<sup>ii</sup> Thren. is Lamentations, the Vulgate titling the book Threni, the Greek for the same thing — the dirges. It is the 1853's usual form and the band gives the English name, so the two differ on the opening by title only. The Latin here is the Vulgate's non enim humiliavit ex corde suo, punishing not from the heart, which is a stronger thing than the AV's willingly and is why the line reads not of thine own will.

ΤΗΣ ΤΕΤΑΡΤΗΣ ΗΜΕΡΑΣ.

OF THE FOURTH DAY.

IN the morning watches I meditated on thee, O Lord,
For thou hast been my help.<sup>i</sup>

Blessed art thou, O Lord,
5 who madest the two great lights, { the Sun, / the Moon, } the greater and the less,
and the stars,<sup>ii</sup> for { light, / signs, / seasons, }<sup>iii</sup> Spring, 10 Summer,
Autumn,
Winter;<sup>iv</sup>
Days, Weeks,
15 Months,
Years,
and to have rule over the day and the night.<sup>v</sup>

BEHOLD, thou wast wroth, for we too have sinned.
20 We are all become as an unclean thing, as a menstruous rag

<sup>i</sup> Ps. lxiii. 7 — because thou hast been my help · <sup>ii</sup> Gen. i. 16 — the work of the fourth day: the two great lights, and the stars · <sup>iii</sup> Gen. i. 14 — for signs, and for seasons, and for days, and years · <sup>iv</sup> Ps. civ. 19 — he appointed the moon for seasons · <sup>v</sup> Gen. i. 18 — to divide the light from the darkness

<sup>i</sup> The same psalm, correctly numbered here. At printed 92 Ad te de luce vigilo was referred to Psal. xliii. 1; here Psal. lxiii. 7, 8 stands right. The volume therefore knows the psalm's number and mis-set it fourteen leaves earlier — which is the argument for calling that one a compositor's slip rather than Andrewes' own reckoning.

 Ἐξερρύημεν, ὡς φύλλα, διὰ τὰς ἀνομίας ἡμῶν·
 οὕτως ὁ ἄνεμος οἴσει ἡμᾶς.
 Καὶ νῦν, Κύριε, Πατὴρ ἡμῶν σὺ, 5 ἡμεῖς δὲ πηλός, ἔργα τῶν χειρῶν σου 5
 πάντες,
 Μὴ ὀργίζου ἡμῖν σφόδρα, καὶ μὴ ἐν καιρῷ μνησθῆς τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν ἡμῶν.
 Καὶ νῦν, ἰδοὺ, ἐπίβλεψον, Κύριε, λαός σου πάντες ἡμεῖς.
 10 Εἰ αἱ ἁμαρτίαι ἡμῶν ἀντέστησαν ἡμῖν, Κύριε, ποιήσον ἔλεος ἡμῖν ἕνεκεν τοῦ ὀνόματός σου, Ὅτι πολλαὶ αἱ ἁμαρτίαι ἡμῶν, ἐν αἷς σοι ἡμάρτομεν.
 Σὺ δὲ ἐν ἡμῖν, Κύριε,
 15 καὶ τὸ ὄνομά σου ἐπικέκληται ἐφ' ἡμᾶς, 15 μὴ ἐπιλάβῃ ἡμῶν·
 Ὡς ὑπομονὴ ἡμῶν, Κύριε, ὅς σωζείς ἐν καιρῷ κακῶν,
 Ἵνα τί ἐγενήθης ὡς πάροικος ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς
 σῆς,
 ἢ ὡς αὐτόχθων ἐκκλίνων εἰς κατάλυμα, 20 20 ὥσπερ ἄνθρωπος ὁ ὑπνῶν,
 ὡς ἀνὴρ, μὴ δυνάμενος σώζειν;
 Ἰλεως ἴσθι, Κύριε ταῖς ἀδικίαις ἡμῶν, καὶ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν μὴ μνησθῆς ἔτι.
 Κύριε, ἐγὼ σαρκικός,
 25 πεπραμένος ὑπὸ τὴν ἁμαρτίαν.
 25 οὐκ οἰκεῖ ἐν ἐμοὶ (τουτέστιν, ἐν τῇ σαρκί μου) ἀγαθόν τι.
 Οὐ γὰρ, ὃ θέλω, ποιῶ ἀγαθόν, ἀλλ' ὃ οὐ θέλω κακόν, τοῦτο πράσσω.
 30 Σύμφημι τῷ νόμῳ, ὅτι καλός·

universæ justitiæ nostræ.
 Et decidimus quasi folia propter iniquitates nostras, ita ventus nos auferet. [Es. lxiv. 5, 6.]
 Et nunc, Domine, Pater noster es Tu, Nos vero lutum, opera manuum tuarum nos
 omnes, [Vers. 8.]
 Ne irascaris nobis valde, et ne ultra memineris iniquitatis nostræ.
 Nunc autem, Ecce! respice Domine, Populus tuus omnes nos. [Vers. 9.]
 10 Si iniquitates nostræ obstiterint nobis, 10 Domine, fac nobis misericordiam propter nomen
 tuum, Quoniam multæ sunt aversiones nostræ, quibus tibi peccavimus. [Jer. xiv. 7.]
 Tu autem in nobis es, Domine,
 15 et nomen tuum invocatum est super nos,
 15 ne obliviscaris nostri. [Vers. 9.]
 Exspectatio nostra, Domine, Salvator in tempore tribulationis,
 quare quasi colonus factus es in terra tua,
 et quasi viator declinans ad manendum,
 velut vir dormiens,
 ut fortis qui non potest salvare? [Vers. 8, 9.]
 Propitiare, Domine, iniquitati nostræ, et peccata nostra ne memineris amplius. [Jer.
 xxxi. 34.]
 Domine, ego carnalis,
 25 venundatus sub peccato. Rom. vii. 14.
 25 Non habitat in me (h. e. in carne mea)
 bonum. Vers. 18.
 Non enim, quod volo bonum, hoc facio,
 sed quod nolo malum, hoc ago. Vers. 19.
 30 Consentio, et condelector legi tuæ, Vers. 16.

is all our righteousness.
 We have all faded as a leaf, because of our iniquities;
 and so the wind carries us away.<sup>i</sup>
 And now, O Lord, thou art our Father,
 5 and we are the clay, we all are the work of thy hands.
 Be not wroth very sore, and remember not our sins for ever.
 And now, behold, look upon us, O Lord,
 we are all thy people.
 10 If our sins have risen up against us,
 O Lord, deal thou with us for thy name's sake,
 For our sins are many,
 wherein we have sinned against thee.<sup>ii</sup>
 Yet thou art in the midst of us, O Lord, 15 and we are called by thy name;
 forget us not.
 O thou our hope, O Lord, who savest in the time of troubles,
 why shouldest thou be as a stranger in thy land, or as one native-born that turneth aside to a lodging, 20 as a man that sleepeth,
 as a strong man that cannot save?
 Be merciful, O Lord, unto our unrighteousnesses, and our sins remember thou no more.<sup>iii</sup>
 O Lord, I am carnal,
 25 sold under sin.<sup>iv</sup>
 In me (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth
 no good thing,
 For the good that I would, I do not,
 but the evil which I would not, that I do.

- and I delight in it after the inward man.
 But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind,
     and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin.
 5   O wretched man that I am!
     who shall deliver me from the body of this death?
     I thank God through JESUS CHRIST.<sup>i</sup>
     For where sin abounded, grace did much more abound.<sup>ii</sup>
 10 O Lord, thy goodness leadeth me to repentance.<sup>iii</sup> O give me repentance at the last, that I may recover myself out of the snare of the devil, who am taken captive by him.<sup>iv</sup>
 The time past of my life may suffice me 15 to have wrought the will of my lusts, walking in lasciviousness, revellings, drinkings,
     and in the rest of the excess of riot.
     O Lamb, without blemish and without spot, who hast redeemed me with thy precious blood,<sup>v</sup> 20 by that same blood have mercy on me and save me;
     both by the blood,
     and by that thy name,
     beside which there is none other under heaven
     given among men,
 25 whereby we must be saved.<sup>vi</sup>
     O God, thou knowest my foolishness, and my sins are not hid from thee.<sup>vii</sup>
     O Lord, all my desire is before thee, and my groaning is not hid from thee.<sup>viii</sup>
 30 Let not them that wait on thee be ashamed for my sake,

<sup>ii</sup> The plate cites Rom. v. 2, and the verse is Rom. v. 20. Superabundavit gratia is the Vulgate of Romans v. 20 word for word; v. 2 is access by faith into this grace, a different sentence. And the volume proves it against itself: printed 103 cites Rom. v. 20 correctly. A dropped nought, kept as printed — the fifth place in this edition where one page corrects another.

<sup>vii</sup> Two verses of the same shape, set one under the other. My sins are not hid from thee and my groaning is not hid from thee are different psalms — lxix and xxxviii — and Andrewes has put them together for the repeated clause, which is how most of this book is built. The English keeps both, unvaried, so the repetition reads as the design it is.

CREDO

25 In Patre, Naturalem affectionem, Omnipotente, Potentiam salvificam,

O Lord, O Lord of hosts;
 Neither let those that seek thee be confounded for my sake,
 O God of Israel.<sup>i</sup>

Save me out of the mire, that I sink not;

5 let me be delivered from them that hate me, and out of the deep waters.

Let not the waterflood overflow me,
 neither let the deep swallow me up,
 and let not the pit shut her mouth upon me.

τοῖς πλουσίοις σου καὶ ἐπουρανόις χαρίσασθαι· χάρισαι αὐτοῖς,
ἀντὶ τῶν ἐπιγείων | τὰ ἐπουράνια,
ἀντὶ τῶν φθαρτῶν | τὰ ἄφθαρτα,
15 ἀντὶ τῶν προσκαίρων | τὰ αἰώνια.

Μνήσθητι τῶν ἐν παρθενίᾳ, καὶ ἀγνείᾳ,
καὶ ἀσκήσει,
ἔτι δὲ καὶ ἐν σεμνῷ γάμῳ, ἐν εὐλαβείᾳ 20
καὶ φόβῳ σου διαγόντων.

20 Μνήσθητι πάσης ψυχῆς Χριστιανῆς θλιβομένης, καὶ καταπονουμένης, καὶ ἀγωνιζομένης, ἐλέους τέ σου καὶ βοηθείας δεομένης· 25
καὶ τῶν ἐν αἰχμαλωσίαις, καὶ ἐν φυλακαῖς, καὶ
δεσμοῖς, καὶ πικραῖς δουλείαις ὄντων ἀδελφῶν, 25 χορηγῶν ἐπιστροφὴν τοῖς πεπλανημένοις, ὑγίειαν τοῖς ἀσθενοῦσι,
ἀνάρρυσιν τοῖς αἰχμαλώτοις.

Memento sanctæ tuæ Ecclesiæ, quæ est a finibus usque ad fines Orbis terrarum,
et pacifica eam,
quam acquisivisti sanguine tuo pretioso, [Act.
xx. 28.]

5 et eam stabili
usque ad consummationem sæculi.

Memento fructum facientium benefactorum in Sanctis tuis Ecclesiis, et qui pauperum et egenorum sunt memores,
ipsis retribue,
Opulentis tuis et cælestibus donis;
largire illis

Pro terrenis | cælestia,
caducis | incorruptibilia,
15 temporariis | æterna.

Memento, qui in virginitate, et castimonia, et religioso cælibatu,
qui et in honestis nuptiis cum sancto
tuo timore degunt.

Memento omnis animæ Christianæ afflictæ, oppressæ, et laborantis, adeoque misericordia tua et auxilio indigentis, et Fratrum qui in captivitate sunt, in carceribus, in vinculis, aut in amara servitute,

25 concedens conversionem | errantibus,

liberationem | captivis.

Remember thy holy Church, which is from one end of the world unto the other,
and give her peace,
which thou hast purchased with thy precious blood,<sup>i</sup> 5 and stablish her,
unto the consummation of the world.

Remember them that bring forth fruit, and do good works in thy holy churches, and are mindful of the poor and needy, 10 recompense them,
out of thy rich and heavenly gifts;
grant unto them,
for earthly things | the heavenly,
for corruptible things | the incorruptible,
15 for temporal things | the eternal.

Remember them that in virginity, and purity, and continence,
and them also that in honourable wedlock, in reverence and in thy fear do pass their days.

20 Remember every Christian soul afflicted, and oppressed, and in sore conflict, and standing in need of thy mercy and thy help;
and our brethren that are in captivities, and in prisons, and in bonds, and in bitter servitude, 25 granting conversion to them that are gone astray,
health to the sick,
deliverance to the captives.

 whom we have remembered, and whom we have not remembered.

And the ends of our life Christian, well-pleasing (if so it seem good to thee)
 and without pain,
 10 order thou in peace, O Lord, O Lord, gathering us together beneath the feet of thine elect,
 when thou wilt, and as thou wilt,
 only without shame,
 and without sins.

15 Let the beauty of the Lord our God be

ΕΥΛΟΓΗΤΟΣ εἶ, Κύριε, ὁ Θεὸς Ἰσραὴλ, ὁ Πατὴρ ἡμῶν,
 ἀπὸ τοῦ αἰῶνος καὶ ἕως τοῦ αἰῶνος.
 Σοὶ, Κύριε,
 5 ἡ μεγαλωσύνη,
 καὶ ἡ δύναμις,
 καὶ τὸ καύχημα,
 καὶ ἡ νίκη,
 καὶ ἡ ἐξομολόγησις, 10 καὶ ἡ ἰσχὺς,
 ὅτι σὺ πάντων ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ,
 καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς δεσπόζεις.
 Ἀπὸ προσώπου σου ταρασσεται πᾶς βασιλεὺς,
 καὶ πᾶν ἔθνος.
 15 Σοὶ, Κύριε, ἡ βασιλεία, καὶ ἡ ἑпарσις εἰς πάντα,
 καὶ εἰς πᾶσαν ἀρχήν.
 Παρὰ σοῦ ὁ πλοῦτος, καὶ ἡ δόξα ἐκ
 προσώπου σου.
 20 Σὺ πάντων ἄρχεις, Κύριε, ὁ ἄρχων πάσης ἀρχῆς,
 καὶ ἐν χειρὶ σου ἰσχὺς, καὶ δυναστεία, καὶ ἐν χειρὶ σου μεγαλῦναι,
 καὶ κατισχύσαι τὰ πάντα.
 25 Καὶ νῦν, Κύριε, ἐξομολογούμεθά σοι καὶ αἰνοῦμεν τὸ ὄνομα τῆς καυχίσεώς σου.

BENEDICTUS es, Domine, Deus Israel,
 Pater noster,
 ab æterno in æternum, 1 Chron. xxix. 10.
 Tua est, Domine, 5 Magnificencia, et Potentia, et Gloria,
 atque Victoria, [et laus,
 10 et potestas,] Cuncta enim quæ in cœlo sunt, et in terra tua sunt. [Vers. 11.]
 A vultu tuo conturbatur omnis Rex, Et gens omnis. [Is. lxiv. 2.] 15 Tuum, Domine, Regnum, et tu es celsus super omnia,
 et super omne dominium.
 Abs te divitiæ, et a facie tua gloria:
 Tu dominaris omnium, 20 Dominator omnis Dominationis, in manu tua virtus et potentia, Et in manu tua magnitudo,
 et imperium omnium.
 Nunc igitur, Deus noster, confitemur tibi, 25 et laudamus nomen tuum inclytum, [1 Chron.
 xxix. 12, 13.]

BLESSED art thou, O Lord, the God of Israel,
our Father,
from everlasting to everlasting.<sup>i</sup> Thine, O Lord, 5 is the greatness,
and the power,
and the glory,
and the victory,
and the praise, 10 and the might,
for thou art over all in heaven,
and rulest upon the earth.
At thy presence every king is troubled,
and every nation.<sup>ii</sup> 15 Thine, O Lord, is the kingdom, and the exaltation above all,
and above all rule.
Of thee cometh riches, and glory cometh from thy presence.
Thou reignest over all, O Lord, 20 the ruler of all rule, and in thine hand is power and might,
and in thine hand it is to make great,
and to give strength unto all.
And now, O Lord, we give thee thanks,
25 and praise thy glorious name.<sup>iii</sup>

ΤΗΣ ΠΕΜΠΤΗΣ ΗΜΕΡΑΣ.

ΕΜΠΛΗΣΘΩΜΕΝ τὸ πρωῒ τοῦ ἐλέους σου, Κύριε.

Εὐλογητὸς εἶ, Κύριε,
5 ὁ ἐξαγαγὼν ἐξ ὕδατος
ἐρπετὰ ψυχῶν ζωσῶν, καὶ κήτη,
καὶ πετεινὰ πτερωτὰ,
καὶ εὐλογήσας αὐτὰ,
10 ὥστε αὐξάνειν, καὶ πληθύνειν.

ΤΑ ΑΝΑΒΑΣΙΜΑ.

Ἐψώθητι ἐπὶ τοὺς οὐρανούς, ὁ Θεός, ἐπὶ πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν ἡ δόξα σου.
Δι' ἀναβάσεως σῆς, 15 καὶ ἡμᾶς ἔλκυσον, Κύριε, πρὸς σέ, ὥστε τὰ ἄνω φρονεῖν,
καὶ μὴ τὰ ἐπὶ γῆς.
Διὰ τοῦ ἑξαισίου Μυστηρίου
τοῦ ἁγίου σώματος, καὶ τιμίου αἵματος, 20 ἐν ἑσπέρᾳ τῆσδε τῆς ἡμέρας,
Κύριε, ἐλέησον.
Ὁ εἴπας,
Ζῶ ἐγὼ, λέγει Ἀδωναὶ Κύριος,

DIEI QUINTÆ.

REPLETI simus mane misericordia tua, Domine. Psal. xc. 14.

Benedictus es, Domine,
5 Qui produxisti ex aquis Reptilia animæ viventis, Gen. i. 20.
et cete,
et volucres pennatas, Psal. cxlviii. 10.
et benedixisti eis,
10 ut crescerent et multiplicarent. Gen. i. 22.

ASCENSORIA.

Exaltare super Cælos, Deus; et super omnem terram gloria tua. Psal. cviii.
5.
Per Ascensionem tuam, 15 et nos, Domine, ad te attrahe, [Joan. xii. 32.]
ut quæ sursum sunt sapiamus, non quæ super terram. Col. iii. 2.
Per ingens Mysterium
sancti corporis et pretiosi sanguinis, 20 in hujus diei vespera institutum, Domine, miserere.
Qui dixisti,
Vivo ego, dicit Dominus Deus,

OF THE FIFTH DAY.

O SATISFY us early with thy mercy,
O Lord.<sup>i</sup>

Blessed art thou, O Lord,
5 who broughtest forth out of the waters
the moving creatures that have life,<sup>ii</sup> and the whales,
and the winged fowl,<sup>iii</sup>
and blessedst them,
10 that they should increase and multiply.<sup>iv</sup>

THE THINGS OF THE ASCENSION.

Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens;
let thy glory be above all the earth.<sup>v</sup>

By thine Ascension, 15 draw us also, O Lord, unto thee,<sup>vi</sup> that we may mind the things that are above, and not the things upon the earth.<sup>vii</sup>

Through the wondrous Mystery of thy holy body, and precious blood, 20 instituted on the evening of this same day,
Lord, have mercy.

Thou who saidst,
As I live, saith Adonai the Lord,

<sup>vi</sup> The verse is spoken of the Cross and is asked here of the Ascension. If I be lifted up from the earth, I will draw all men unto me — and John adds, in the next verse, this he said, signifying what death he should die, so the lifting up is the crucifixion. Andrewes hangs it under THE THINGS OF THE ASCENSION, immediately after be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens, and takes the drawing to be the ascending Christ's. He does not argue the transfer, and the English does not smooth it: the same two words carry both liftings, which is presumably why he could put the one under the other.

ὥς τὸ ἀποστρέψαι τὸν ἀσεβῆ ἀπὸ τῆς ὁδοῦ
αὐτοῦ,
καὶ ζῆν αὐτόν.

Ἀποστροφῇ ἀποστρέψατε ἀπὸ τῆς ὁδοῦ
5 ἡμῶν πονηρᾶς.

Καὶ ἵνα τί ἀποθνήσκετε οἶκος Ἰσραὴλ; Ἐπίστρεψον ἡμᾶς, Κύριε, πρὸς σέ, καὶ ἐπιστραφησόμεθα.

Ἀπόστρεψον ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ πασῶν τῶν ἀσεβειῶν 10 ἡμῶν,

καὶ μὴ γένωνται ἡμῖν εἰς κόλασιν.

Ἡμαρτον, ἡδίκησα, ἡσέβησα, ἀπὸ τῶν ἐντολῶν, καὶ τῶν κριμάτων σου.

Σοὶ, Κύριε, δικαιοσύνη,

καὶ ἐμοὶ ἡ αἰσχύνη τοῦ προσώπου,

15 ὥς ἡ ἡμέρα αὕτη,

ἐν ἀθεσίᾳ ἡμῶν, ἣ ἠθέτησας ἡμᾶς.

Κύριε, ἡμῖν ἡ αἰσχύνη τοῦ προσώπου,

καὶ τοῖς ἄρχουσιν ἡμῶν,

οἵτινες ἡμάρτομέν σοι·

20 Κύριε, ἐν πᾶσιν ἡ δικαιοσύνη σου,

εἰς πᾶσαν δικαιοσύνην σὴν,

ἀποστραφήτω δὴ ὁ θυμὸς καὶ ἡ ὀργή σου,

καὶ ἐπίφανον τὸ πρόσωπόν σου

ἐπὶ τὸν δοῦλόν σου.

25 Κλίνον, ὁ Θεός μου, τὸ οὖς σου, καὶ ἄκουσον, ἄνοιξον τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς σου, καὶ ἴδε

τὸν ἀφανισμόν μου.

Κύριε εἰσάκουσον, Κύριε ἰλάσθητι, Κύριε πρόσχες,

πρόσχες, Κύριε, καὶ ποιήσον, ποιήσον καὶ

μὴ χρονίσῃς,

30 ἕνεκέν σου, Κύριε, Κύριε ὁ Θεός μου,

Nolo mortem peccatoris,

Quantum ut revertatur impius a via sua et vivat.

Convertimini, convertimini a viis

vestris pessimis,

et quare moriemini, Domus Israel? [Ezech.
xxxiii. 11.]

Converte nos, Domine, ad te, et convertemur. Lam. v. 21.

Converte nos ab omnibus iniquitatibus nostris, et ne sint nobis in ruinam. Ezech. xviii. 30.

Peccavi, iniquitatem feci, impie egi et recessi, et declinavi a mandatis tuis ac judiciis. Dan.
ix. 5

Tibi, Domine, justitia,

Mihi autem confusio faciei,

sicut est hodie,

in contemptione nostri, qua nos contempsisti.
[Vers. 7.]

Domine, nobis confusio faciei, et principibus nostris,

qui peccavimus tibi. [Vers. 8.]

Domine in omnibus justitia tua,

in omnem justitiam tuam,

Avertatur, obsecro, ira tua, et furor tuus, [Vers.
16.]

et ostende faciem tuam

super servum tuum. [Vers. 17.]

25 Inclina, Deus meus, aurem tuam, et audi, aperi oculos tuos, et vide

desolationem meam. [Vers. 18.]

Exaudi, Domine, placare, Domine, attende, Domine,

attende, Domine, et fac, fac, et ne moreris,

propter temetipsum Domine, Domine Deus meus,

I desire not the death of a sinner,
but rather that the wicked turn from his way,
and live.

Turn ye, turn ye from your evil way.

For why will ye die, O house of Israel?<sup>i</sup> Turn thou us unto thee, O Lord, and we shall be turned.<sup>ii</sup>

Turn us away from all our ungodlinesses, that they be not unto us for punishment.<sup>iii</sup>

I have sinned, I have done iniquity, I have done wickedly, departing from thy commandments, and thy judgments.<sup>iv</sup>

Unto thee, O Lord, belongeth righteousness, but unto me confusion of face,

as at this day,
in our unfaithfulness, wherein thou hast rejected us.

O Lord, to us belongeth confusion of face,
and to our princes,

for we have sinned against thee.

O Lord, in all is thy righteousness,
according to all thy righteousness,
let thine anger and thy fury be turned away, I pray thee, and cause thy face to shine upon thy servant.

Incline thine ear, O my God, and hear;
open thine eyes, and behold
my desolation.

O Lord, hear; O Lord, forgive; O Lord, hearken; hearken, O Lord, and do; do, and defer not,
for thine own sake, O Lord, O Lord my God,

<sup>iv</sup> From here to the foot of the next leaf the page is Daniel's prayer, ix. 5–19, quoted straight through, and the plate marks every verse of it — [Vers. 7.] 8. 16. 17. 18. 19. They are not tagged one by one because the English lines are the verses; what the reader needs is to know he has entered a single prayer and not a catena. It is the great penitential prayer of the exile, made while Daniel was reading Jeremiah and counting the seventy years. And the volume comes back to it in Part II out of order — ix. 19 closes §22 at printed 339 and ix. 16 opens the intercession at printed 343, the later verse first. Part I prints the prayer whole and in sequence; Part II quarries it. Neither is conformed to the other.

ὅτι τὸ ὄνομά σου ἐπικέκληται
ἐπὶ τὸν δούλόν σου.
Πολλὰ πααίομεν ἅπαντες· Κύριε, κατακαυχάσθω τὸ ἔλεός σου τῆς κρίσεώς σου, 5
ἐν ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις ἑμοῦ.
Ἐὰν εἶπω, ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ ἔχω, πλανῶ ἑμαυτὸν, καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν ἑμοί.

αὐτὸς ἰλασμός ἐστώ περὶ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν ἑμῶν, 15
ὅς ἐστι καὶ περὶ τοῦ ὅλου τοῦ κόσμου.
Μὴ εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας ἀπόσεται Κύριος, because thy name is called upon thy servant.

 In many things we offend all;<sup>i</sup>
 O Lord, let thy mercy glory over thy judgment,
 5 in my sins.<sup>ii</sup>
 If I say I have no sin, I deceive myself, and the truth is not in me.<sup>iii</sup>
 But I confess my sins, many and grievous,<sup>iv</sup> and thou, O Lord, to him that confesseth art faithful and just, 10 to forgive me my sins.
 And yet even for this
 I have an Advocate with thee, unto thee,<sup>v</sup>
 thy Son, the only-begotten, the righteous.
 let him be the propitiation for my sins,
 15 who is also for the whole world.
 Will the Lord cast off for ever,
 and will he be favourable no more?
 Is his mercy clean gone for ever?
 doth his promise fail from generation to generation?
 20 Hath God forgotten to be gracious? or hath he in anger shut up his tender mercies?<sup>vi</sup>
 And I said, Now have I begun:
 this is the change of the right hand of the Most High.
 25 Every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us,<sup>vii</sup>
 All filthiness, and superfluity of naughtiness,<sup>viii</sup>
 the lust { of the flesh, / of the eyes, }

<sup>i</sup> Jas. iii. 2 — in many things we offend all · <sup>ii</sup> Jas. ii. 13 — judgment without mercy to him that hath shewed no mercy ·
<sup>iii</sup> 1 John i. 8 — if we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves · <sup>v</sup> 1 John ii. 1 — we have an advocate with the Father ·

<sup>iv</sup> Lines 6–15 run 1 John i. 8 to ii. 2 continuously — the confession, the promise to the confessing, the Advocate, the propitiation — and the plate marks the verses as it goes. But the last clause is not quoted, it is ASKED. John writes that Christ is the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but for the sins of the whole world; the page turns the indicative into a petition — let him be the propitiation for my sins, who is also for the whole world. The world keeps the indicative and the man asks for himself. It is the method of printed 22 and 332 working inside a single sentence of Scripture.

<sup>v</sup> He doubles the preposition, and the doubling is the argument. Advocatum ad te apud te habeo — an advocate to thee and with thee: the one pleaded before is the one pleaded to, and both are God. It is the court figure the book keeps returning to, and the English holds both prepositions rather than smoothing them into one.

- the pride of life,<sup>i</sup> every motion of flesh and of spirit, estranged from the will of thy holiness,
     having laid it aside,
 5   to be poor in spirit, that there may be for me a portion in the kingdom of heaven;<sup>ii</sup>
- To mourn, | that I may be comforted;<sup>iii</sup>
 To be meek, | that I may inherit
 To hunger and thirst after | the earth;
 10   righteousness, | that I may be filled;
 To be merciful, | that I may obtain mercy;
 To be pure in heart, | that I may see God;
 To be peaceable, | that I may be called
     | the son of God;
- 15   to be prepared for persecutions and revilings, for righteousness' sake, that my reward may be in heaven,
     Give me, O Lord.

HE THAT COMETH to God,

- 20   I believe that he is,
     and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.<sup>iv</sup>
 I know that my Redeemer liveth,<sup>v</sup> that this is the Christ, the Son of the living God,<sup>vi</sup> 25   that this is indeed the Saviour of the world,<sup>vii</sup> that he came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief.<sup>viii</sup>
 Through the grace of JESUS CHRIST we believe that we shall be saved, even as also our fathers.<sup>ix</sup>

<sup>iii</sup> The whole ladder is the Beatitudes, Matt. v. 3–12, and the plate marks every rung — but they are not tagged one by one, because the English lines ARE the Beatitudes and a tag would set the verse under the verse. What has been done to them is the point: they are turned from blessings into PETITIONS, and what is asked for is the CONDITION, not the promise. Christ says blessed are they that mourn; the page asks to mourn, to hunger, to be persecuted — and the whole list is governed by Da mihi, Domine, Give me, O Lord, standing under it at line 18. He asks to be given the poverty, not the kingdom.

Οἶδα ὅτι ἐπὶ γῆς ἀναστήσεται τὸ δέρμα μου,

IN pace Dominum rogemus, Pro pace superna, et salute animarum nostrarum;

Pro pace universi mundi, 15 stabilitate sanctorum Dei Ecclesiarum, et omnium unione;

Pro domo hæc sancta,

et eam cum fide et reverentia ingredientibus;

Pro sanctis Patribus nostris,

20 Venerabili Presbyterio, Diaconis in Christo ministrantibus,

under the types of the Lamb and of the Dove.

Let thy mercy be upon us, O Lord,

10 according as we have hoped in thee.<sup>iv</sup>

IN peace let us pray unto the Lord.

For the peace that is from above,
and for the salvation of our souls;

For the peace of the whole world,

15 for the good estate of the holy churches of God,
and for the union of all;

For this holy house,

and for them that enter therein with faith and reverence;

For our Fathers in holiness,

20 the honourable presbytery,
the diaconate that is in Christ,
and all the Clergy and People;

For this holy dwelling, and for every city and country, and for them that in faith

25 dwell therein;

For temperate airs, for plenteousness of the fruits of the earth,

<sup>ii</sup> Psal. xxvii. 15 is not an error: it is the Prayer Book's numbering. The Authorised Version has this verse at xxvii. 13; the BCP Psalter, which divides the psalm differently, has it at 15 — and the BCP is the book Andrewes had to hand, as printed 433 shows twice over. Do not "correct" it. The volume moves between the two numberings without warning, and only reading the verse tells you which is in use.

 Sanctissimæ, intemeratæ, super cæteros benedictæ, Deiparæ, et semper Virginis Mariæ, cum omnibus Sanctis, memoria habita, 10 Nos ipsos, et vicissim alios, et omnem vitam nostram,
 Christo Deo commendemus:
 Tibi Domine,
 Quia tibi convenit gloria, honor, et adoratio.
 Gratia Domini nostri, Jesu Christi, et Charitas Dei,

 Amen.
 O Domine, mi Domine,

and for peaceable seasons;
 For them that sail, that travel, that are sick,
 that labour, and the captives,
 and for their salvation.

5 Help, save, have mercy, and keep us,
 O God, by thy grace.

Making mention of the all-holy, undefiled, more than blessed, Mother of God, and ever-virgin Mary,
 with all the saints,

10 Let us commend ourselves, and one another, and all our life, unto Christ our God;

To thee, O Lord,
 for unto thee belong glory, honour, and worship.

The grace of our Lord JESUS CHRIST,

15 and the love of God,

And the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with me, and with us all.

Amen.<sup>i</sup>

I commend myself, and mine, and all that is mine,

20 unto him that is able to keep me from falling, and to present me faultless before the presence of his glory,
 to the only wise God, and our Saviour, to whom be glory and majesty, dominion and power,

25 both now, and unto all ages.<sup>ii</sup>

Amen.

OF THE SIXTH DAY.

IN the morning shall my prayer come before thee.<sup>i</sup>

Blessed art thou, O Lord,
5 who broughtest forth out of the earth the beasts, and the cattle, and every creeping thing,<sup>ii</sup> for { food, / covering, / help; } and madest man
after thine image,<sup>iii</sup> 10 to have dominion over the earth, and blessedst him.

The forethought,<sup>iv</sup> the handiwork,<sup>v</sup>
the breath of life,<sup>vi</sup> 15 the image of God, the setting over thy works,<sup>vii</sup>
the charge to the angels concerning him,<sup>viii</sup> Paradise.<sup>ix</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Ps. lxxxviii. 13 — in the morning shall my prayer prevent thee · <sup>ii</sup> Gen. i. 25 — the work of the sixth day: the beast of the earth after his kind · <sup>iii</sup> Gen. i. 26 — let us make man in our image · <sup>v</sup> Ps. cxxxviii. 8 — the divine hand set to its own work · <sup>vi</sup> Gen. ii. 7 — and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life · <sup>vii</sup> Ps. viii. 6 — thou madest him to have dominion · <sup>viii</sup> Ps. xci. 11 — he shall give his angels charge over thee · <sup>ix</sup> Gen. ii. 8 — and the LORD God planted a garden eastward in Eden

<sup>iv</sup> Seven dignities in the making of man, counted out. A deliberation held beforehand, the divine hand set to the work, the breath of life, the image, dominion over the works, angels given charge, and a garden — each with its text. Andrewes is not retelling Genesis i but itemising it, and the sixth day's prayer is built on the count: what man was made with is the ground of everything the page goes on to ask.

O by thy saving sufferings,
on this day,
15 save us, O Lord.

I have withstood thee, O Lord, but I turn again unto thee;
I have grown weak in mine iniquities,<sup>iv</sup>
but I take with me words,
and turn to thee, saying, 20 Take away all iniquity, and receive my prayer, so will I render thee the fruit of my lips.<sup>v</sup> Spare, O Lord, spare, and give not thine heritage to reproach, to thine enemies.<sup>vi</sup> 25 O Lord, O Lord, be merciful, cease, I pray; who shall raise up Jacob?
for he is small.
Repent, O Lord, concerning this,

<sup>iv</sup> The Passion assembled out of six books, and half of it proved from texts that are not narrating it. The thorns, the revilings, the strong cry, the neck under the cross and the pierced heart come from Matthew and John, who were telling the story; but the plowed back is the Psalter's the plowers plowed upon my back, the pierced hands and feet are Psalm xxii, the covered sin is Psalm lxxxv, the strong crying and tears are an epistle's account of Christ's prayers, and the broken body an epistle about a supper. Half the members of the catalogue are proved from outside the Passion narratives, which is why the sequence reads as prayer and not as recital — the same method as printed 313, where the nailing is proved from after the resurrection, out of Thomas's mouth.

<sup>i</sup> The psalm says turn US and the plate says turn ME — and changes nothing else in the line. Ps. lxxxv. 4 is Converte nos, Deus salutaris noster, et averte iram tuam a nobis; the page sets Converte me, Deus salutaris noster, et averte iram tuam a nobis. One pronoun is made singular and the two around it are left plural, so he puts himself alone under the verb of turning and leaves the congregation in possession of the mercy. Lines 1–10 are Ps. lxxxv. 3–7 quoted whole, every verse marked by the plate, so the verses are not tagged one by one. Third instance of the pronoun pattern — with printed 342's adauge mihi fidem for the apostles' nobis, and 343's in diebus nostris for Hezekiah's meis — and the only one where the change is partial inside a single line.

<sup>iv</sup> Seven gifts here, and the Hebrew yields six. The column sets Wisdom, Understanding, Counsel, Might, Knowledge, Godliness and the Fear of the Lord. Isaiah's verse names the fear of the LORD twice, and the Vulgate and the Septuagint render the first of the two as pietas, godliness — so the Latin Bible counts seven where the Authorised Version, translating from the Hebrew, counts six. The sevenfold gift the Church has always numbered is the Latin Bible's, and this page has it. The number is the Vulgate's, not a device of Andrewes', and it is the third register on this opening: works of the flesh, fruits of the Spirit, gifts of the Spirit, three lists that answer each other down the leaf.

CREDO

Quia me creasti:

10 Opus manuum tuarum
ne despicias! [Psal. cxxxviii. 8.]

Quia ad imaginem tuam, et similitudinem:
[Gen. i. 26.]
similitudinem tuam
ne sinas deteri!

15 Quia sanguine tuo me redemisti: [Rev. v. 9.]
Pretium Redemptionis
ne sinas perire.

Quia de nomine tuo Christianum appellasti: Characterem tuum
ne contemnas!

20 Quia me in regeneratione sanctificasti: [Tit. iii.
5.]
Sanctitatem tuam
ne perdas!

Quia me inseruisti in bonam olivam, [Rom. xi.
17.]

25 Membrum corporis mystici: [Eph. v. 30.]
Membrum corporis tui mystici ne præscindas!

I BELIEVE:
 That thou hast created me;
 10 the work of thy hands despise not.<sup>ii</sup>
 That thou madest me after thine image and likeness;<sup>iii</sup> thy likeness suffer not to be blotted out.
 15 That thou hast redeemed me with thy blood;<sup>iv</sup>
 the price of the ransom suffer not to be lost.
 That thou hast named me a Christian after thy name;
 thy surname
 20 despise not.
 That thou hast sanctified me in regeneration;<sup>v</sup> thy hallowing destroy not.
 That thou hast grafted me into the good olive tree,<sup>vi</sup> 25 a member of the mystical body;<sup>vii</sup>
 the member of thy mystical body cut not off.

<sup>iii</sup> Five pleas, and every one of them begins Quia. The prayer does not ask on the ground of need but on the ground of fact — because I am in thine image, because thou hast bought me, because thou hast washed me, because thou hast grafted me in, because I am a member. The repeated conjunction is the argument, and the English keeps it at the head of each line rather than varying it for elegance.

ΤΗΣ ΕΒΔΟΜΗΣ ΗΜΕΡΑΣ.

ΚΥΡΙΕ ἐλέησον ἡμᾶς,
ἐπὶ σοὶ γὰρ πεποιθάμεν.
Ἰσθὶ βραχίων ἡμῖν τὸ πρῶτ', καὶ σωτηρία ἐν καιρῷ θλίψεως.

Εὐλογητὸς εἶ, Κύριε,
Ὁ καταπαύσας ἐν τῇ ἐβδόμῃ ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν ἔργων σου, καὶ εὐλογήσας,
καὶ ἀγιάσας
αὐτήν.

Τὰ περὶ τοῦ Σαββάτου, περὶ ἀναπαύσεως ἀμοιβαίας· Περὶ τῶν νεκρωσίων τοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ τῆς τῶν ἀμαρτιῶν καταπαύσεως·
περὶ τῶν προαναπαυσασμένων.

Ἠσχύνθην, καὶ ἐνετράπην, Θεέ μου, τοῦ ὑψῶσαι τὸ πρόσωπόν μου πρὸς σέ· Ὅτι αἱ ἀνομίαι μου ἐπληθύνθησαν ὑπὲρ κεφαλῆς μου, καὶ αἱ πλημμελείαι μου ἐμεγαλύνθησαν
εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν.

Ἀπὸ τῶν ἡμερῶν τῆς νεότητος, εἰμὶ ἐν πλημμελείᾳ μεγάλῃ,
ἕως τῆς ἡμέρας ταύτης,

DIEI SEPTIMÆ.

DOMINE, miserere nostri,
Te enim exspectavimus.
Esto brachium nostrum in mane,
et Salus nostra in tempore tribulationis. Isa.
xxxiii. 2.

Benedictus es, Domine,
Qui requievisti die septimo ab omni opere tuo, et benedixisti,
et sanctificasti
illum. Gen. ii. 2, 3.

Quæ ad Sabbatum spectant,
De requie pariter nostra succedanea;
De emortalibus Christi, et cessatione a peccatis;
De iis qui prius requieverint.

Deus meus, confundor, et erubesco levare faciem meam ad te, Quoniam iniquitates meæ multiplicatæ sunt super caput meum, et delicta mea creverunt
usque ad cælum.
A diebus juventutis sum in delicto magno, usque ad diem hanc,

OF THE SEVENTH DAY.

LORD, have mercy upon us,
for in thee have we trusted.

Be thou our arm in the morning,
5 and our salvation in the time of trouble.<sup>i</sup>

Blessed art thou, O Lord, who didst rest on the seventh day

from all thy works,

and didst bless,

10 and didst hallow
it.<sup>ii</sup>

The things that concern the Sabbath, concerning the rest that is our recompense;

concerning the dying of Christ,

15 and the ceasing from sins;

concerning them that have fallen asleep before us.

I am ashamed and confounded, O my God,

to lift up my face unto thee;

for mine iniquities are increased

20 over my head, and my trespasses are grown up unto the heavens.

From the days of my youth am I in great trespass,

25 unto this day,

Καὶ οὐκ ἔστι στήναι ἐνώπιόν σου, ἐπὶ τούτου.

Ἦμαρτον ὑπὲρ ἀριθμὸν ψάμμου θαλάσσης,
ἐπλήθυναν αἱ ἀνομίαι μου,

5 καὶ οὐκ ἄξιός εἰμι ἀτενίσαι, καὶ
ἰδεῖν τὸ ὕψος τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, ἀπὸ τοῦ πλήθους τῶν ἀδικιῶν μου,

καὶ οὐκ ἔστι μοι ἄνεσις,

διότι παρώργισα τὸν θυμὸν σου,

10 καὶ τὸ πονηρὸν ἐνώπιόν σου<sup>10</sup>

ἐποίησα,

μὴ ποιήσας τὸ θέλημα,

μὴ φυλάξας τὰ προστάγματά σου.

καὶ νῦν κλίνω γόνου καρδίας,

δεόμενος τῆς παρὰ σοῦ χρηστότητος.

15 Ἠμάρτηκα, Κύριε, ἡμάρτηκα, καὶ τὰς ἀνομίας μου ἐγὼ γινώσκω,

ἀλλ' αἰτοῦμαι δεόμενος,

ἄνες μοι, Κύριε, ἄνες μοι.

Καὶ μὴ συναπολέσης με ταῖς ἀνομίαις μου,

20 μὴδὲ εἰς αἰῶνα μηνίσας τηρήσης τὰ κακά μοι·

μὴδὲ καταδικάσης με,

ἐν τοῖς κατωτάτοις τῆς γῆς.

Διότι σὺ εἶ Θεὸς, Θεὸς μετανοούντων,

25 καὶ ἐν ἐμοὶ δείξεις πᾶσαν τὴν ἀγαθωσύνην<sup>25</sup>

σου,

ὅτι ἀνάξιον ὄντα με σώσεις

κατὰ τὸ πολὺ ἐλεός σου,

καὶ αἰνέσω σε διαπαντός.

Nec stari potest coram te super hoc. Ezr. ix. 6, 7. 15.

Peccavi super numerum arenæ maris, multiplicate sunt iniquitates meæ,

5 et non sum dignus intueri, et aspicere altitudinem cæli, præ multitudine iniquitatum mearum,

et non est respiratio mihi,

quia excitavi iracundiam tuam,

et malum coram te feci,

non facta voluntate tua,

mandatis tuis non custoditis,

Et nunc flecto genu cordis mei, precans a te bonitatem. [Orat. Manassis.]

15 Peccavi, Domine, peccavi,

Et iniquitates meas agnosco,

Quare peto rogans,

Remitte mihi, Domine, remitte mihi.

[Ibid.]

Et ne simul perdas me cum iniquitatibus meis,

20 neque in æternum iratus reserves mala mihi,

neque damnes me

in infima terræ loca.

Quia tu es Deus, Deus prænitentium, secundum magnam misericordiam tuam,

et laudabo te semper. [Ibid.]

and there is no standing before thee, because of this.<sup>i</sup>

I have sinned above the number of the sand of the sea,
my transgressions are multiplied, 5 and I am not worthy to look up, and to behold the height of heaven, for the multitude of mine iniquities,
and I have no relief,
because I have provoked thy wrath, 10 and done that which is evil before thee, not doing thy will,
not keeping thy commandments.
And now I bow the knee of my heart,
beseeching of thee thy goodness.
15 I have sinned, O Lord, I have sinned, and I acknowledge mine iniquities,
but I ask, beseeching thee,
forgive me, O Lord, forgive me.
And destroy me not with mine iniquities, 20 neither, being angry for ever,
reserve thou evil for me;
neither condemn me
into the lower parts of the earth.
For thou art God, the God of them that repent,

<sup>i</sup> Ezra ix. 6, 7, 15 — Ezra at the evening sacrifice: we cannot stand before thee because of this

Κύριε, ἐὰν θέλῃς, δύνασαί με καθάρισαι,
Κύριε, μόνον εἰπὲ λόγῳ, καὶ ἰαθήσομαι.
Κύριε σῶσον.
Οὐ μέλει σοι ὅτι ἀπολλύμεθα;
5 Εἰπέ μοι, Θάρσει, ἀφέωνταί σοι αἱ ἁμαρτίαι
σου.
Ἰησοῦ, Ἐπιστάτα, ἔλεήσόν με.
Ὁ υἱὸς Δαβὶδ Ἰησοῦ, ἔλεήσόν με, Ἰησοῦ υἱὲ Δαβὶδ, υἱὲ Δαβίδ.
10 Κύριε, εἰπέ μοι, Ἐφραθά.
Κύριε, ἄνθρωπον οὐκ ἔχω.
Κύριε, εἰπέ μοι, Ἀπολέλυσαι τῆς ἀσθενείας
σου.
Εἰπὲ τῇ ψυχῇ μου, Σωτηρία σου ἐγώ.
Εἰπέ μοι, Ἀρκεῖ σοι ἡ χάρις μου.
15 Ἔως πότε, Κύριε, ὀργισθήσῃ εἰς τέλος;

<sup>i</sup> The whole page is one request, asked ten times: say it to me. Andrewes goes through the Gospels collecting the words Christ spoke to particular people — be opened to the deaf man, thou art loosed to the bowed woman, thy sins be forgiven thee to the palsied, my grace is sufficient to Paul — and asks for each of them in the first person. He is not recalling the miracles; he is asking to be the one they were said to. The Psalm and the Epistle at the foot are admitted on the same terms, as words spoken to somebody.

 Gloria tibi, Domine, gloria tibi, Gloria tibi, qui illos glorificasti,
 in quibus et nos te glorificamus.
 20 Magna et mirabilia sunt opera tua, Domine, Deus omnipotens.
 Justæ et veræ sunt viæ tuæ, Rex Sanctorum.
 Quis non timebit te, Domine?
 25 et magnificabit nomen tuum?
 quia solus pius es.
 Quoniam omnes gentes venient,
 et adorabunt in conspectu tuo.
 Quoniam judicia tua manifesta sunt. Apoc. xv.

<sup>i</sup> Rev. xix. 5 — praise our God, all ye his servants, both small and great · <sup>ii</sup> Rev. xxi. 4 — for the former things are passed away

<sup>ii</sup> The manuscript has its largest silence immediately after this line. Andrewes' own book leaves three blank leaves here — six blank pages, more than it leaves anywhere else — and the next thing in it is the great personal intercession that the 1853 prints on the following leaf. The printed page runs straight on. What the blank leaves mean is not settled: they may mark the end of the seven days, or room left for matter never written. Nothing has been re-cut on the strength of them; the division is recorded here and in apparatus/CLASS-B-unit-boundaries.md, which is where a decision about it would have to be argued.

And under their feet
I, the unworthy and wretched sinner, 20 thy lowly creature,
both now in this day and hour,
and daily unto my last breath,
and unto the end of the world,
and unto the ages of ages.

15 Ἦλεως, ἦλεως ἴσθι, ἐλέησον ἡμᾶς, Κύριε, 15
καὶ μὴ ὀργίζου ἡμῖν ἕως ἄλλης.

Μὴ, Κύριε,

Μὴ μετ' ἐμοῦ ποιῇς κατὰ τὰς ἀνομίας μου, μῆτε κατὰ τὰς ἀμαρτίας μου ἀνταποδοῶς
ἐμοῖ,

20 Ἀλλὰ κατὰ τὸ μέγα ἔλεός σου ποιῇς μετ' ἐμοῦ, 20
καὶ κατὰ τὸ πλῆθος τῶν οἰκτιρμῶν σου
ἀνταποδοῶς μοι.

Κατ' αὐτὸ τὸ μέγα ἔλεος, καὶ

Κατ' ἐκεῖνο τὸ πλῆθος οἰκτιρμῶν,

PATER Creator, quem creasti,
Fili Redemptor, quem redemisti, Spiritus Regenerator, quem regenerasti,
Ne corrumpas.

Ne Domine, ne memineris peccatorum meorum,

Neque peccatorum majorum meorum,

Neque vindictam sume de peccatis nostris, {
eorum, / meis. }

Parce nobis, Domine, { iis, / mihi. }

Parce populo tuo,

10 Et, in populo, servo tuo, 10

Pretioso tuo sanguine redempto, et ne irascaris nobis in sæculum. [Litan.

Angl.]

Propitius, propitius esto, parce nobis, Domine,

Et ne irascaris nobis in sæculum.

15 Propitius, propitius esto, miserere nobis, 15
Domine,

Et ne irascaris nobis nimis.

Ne, Domine,

Ne facias mihi secundum iniquitates meas,

Neque secundum peccata mea retribuas mihi,
[Ps. ciii. 10.]

20 Sed secundum magnam misericordiam tuam fa- 20
cias mihi,

Et secundum multitudinem miserationum tuarum retribuas mihi.

Secundum magnam istam misericordiam, et

Secundum multitudinem istam miserationum,

- O FATHER that createdst, whom thou createdst,
 O Son that redeemedst, whom thou redeemedst,
 O Spirit that regeneratedst, whom thou regeneratedst,
 destroy not.
- 5 Remember not, O Lord, the sins committed by me,
 nor the sins committed by our forefathers,
 neither take vengeance for our sins, { theirs, / mine. } Spare us, O Lord, { them, / me. } Spare thy people,
- 10 and, among the people, thy servant,
 bought with thy precious blood,
 and be not angry with us for ever.
 Be merciful, be merciful, spare us, O Lord,
 and be not angry with us for ever.
- 15 Be merciful, be merciful, have mercy upon us, O Lord, and be not angry with us overmuch.
 Do not, O Lord,
 deal not with me after mine iniquities,
 neither reward me according to my sins,<sup>i</sup>
- 20 But deal with me according to thy great mercy, and according to the multitude of thy compassions reward me.
 According to that same great mercy, and according to that multitude of compassions,

     the floods of Belial,
     the plague of Peor,<sup>xiv</sup>
     the valley of Achor,<sup>xv</sup>
     the pollution of blood or of seed, 25   the inroad of aliens,
     civil sedition,
     the taking-away of the good and honourable,
     those that are in office,
     the rising-up of the evil and crafty
 30   into office.

<sup>xiii</sup> This page names disasters by a single figure and expects the story to come with it. Hophni's fleshhook, Michal's contempt, Athaliah's plundering, Ahithophel's counsel, the judges of Jezreel, the torrents of Belial, the plague of Peor, the valley of Achor — each is one or two words standing for a whole history, and the deprecation works only if the reader supplies it. Nowhere else in the volume does so much depend on knowing what a name is for; without the notes below, the English of this page is a list of proper nouns.

HOSANNA IN THE HIGHEST.

REMEMBER me, O Lord, with the favour of thy people,
 O visit me with thy salvation,
 5 that I may see the good of thy chosen,
 that I may rejoice in the gladness of thy nation, that I may give thanks unto thee with thine inheritance.<sup>i</sup>
 For there is a glory that shall be revealed.<sup>ii</sup>
 For when the Judge cometh, 10 some shall see his face gladsome,<sup>iii</sup>
 they shall be set on the right hand, they shall hear the sweetest voice,
 Come, ye blessed.<sup>iv</sup>
 They shall be caught up in the clouds to 15 meet the Lord,<sup>v</sup> they shall enter into the joy, they shall have the fruition of the sight of him,
 they shall ever be with him.
 They alone, they only, are blessed 20 among the sons of men.
 O grant me, the last, a last place there,
 beneath their feet;
 beneath the feet of thy chosen,
 the least among them.
 25 And that this may be,

<sup>i</sup> Ps. cvi. 5 — that I may rejoice in the gladness of thy nation · <sup>ii</sup> 1 Pet. v. 1 — a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed
 · <sup>iii</sup> Job xxxiii. 26 — he shall see his face with joy · <sup>iv</sup> Matt. xxv. 34 — Come, ye blessed of my Father · <sup>v</sup> 1 Thess. iv. 17
 — caught up together with them in the clouds

Εὐρῶ τὴν χάριν ἐνώπιόν σου, ὥστε ἔχειν με χάριν,
 εἰς τὸ λατρεῦσαί σοι εὐαρέστως,
 μετὰ αἰδοῦς καὶ εὐλαβείας.
 5 Εὐρῶ δὲ καὶ τὴν χάριν δευτέραν, ὥστε χάριν ἐκείνην,
 μὴ εἰς κενὸν δέξασθαί με,
 μὴ ὑστερῆσαι ἀπ' αὐτῆς.
 Μενοῦνγε μὴ ἀμελῆσαι αὐτῆς,
 10 ὥστε ἐκπίπτειν αὐτῆς.
 Ἀλλὰ ἀναζωπυρεῖν αὐτήν,
 ὥστε αὐξάνειν ἐπ' αὐτῇ.
 Μενοῦνγε ἐπιμένειν αὐτῇ,
 μέχρι τῆς συντελείας 15 τῆς ζωῆς μου.
 Καὶ ὦ, κατάρτισόν μοι τὰ ὑστερήματα
 τῶν χαρισμάτων σου,
 Πίστεως, προσθές τῇ ὀλιγοπιστίᾳ.
 Ἐλπίδος, στήριξον ἐλπίδα περίτρομον.
 20 Ἀγάπης, ἅπτε λίνον αὐτῆς τυφόμενον.
 Ἐκχυσον ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ μου τὴν ἀγάπην σου, ὥστε σε,
 τὸν φίλον ἔν σοι, 25 τὸν ἐχθρόν διὰ σέ,
 ἀγαπᾶν ἐμέ.
 Ὁ διδοὺς χάριν τοῖς ταπεινόφροσι,
 καὶ μοι χάριν δὸς τοῦ ταπεινόφρονα εἶναι.
 Ὁ τοὺς φοβουμένους σε οὐποτ' ἀνίεις,
 30 εὐφρανθήτω ἡ καρδία μου τοῦ φοβεῖσθαί σε,

Let me find† grace in thy sight,
     that I may have grace,
     to serve thee acceptably,
     with reverence and godly fear.<sup>i</sup> 5 Let me find also a second grace,
     even that grace,
     that I receive it not in vain,<sup>ii</sup>
     that I fail not of it.<sup>iii</sup>
 Yea rather, not to neglect it,<sup>iv</sup>
 10 so as to fall away from it.<sup>v</sup>
     But to stir it up,<sup>vi</sup>
     so as to grow therein.<sup>vii</sup> Yea rather, to abide therein,<sup>viii</sup> until the ending 15 of my life.
 And oh! make up unto me that which is lacking<sup>ix</sup> of thy gifts:
 Of faith:      add unto my little faith.<sup>x</sup>
 Of hope:      stablish my trembling hope.
 20 Of charity:    kindle its smoking flax.<sup>xi</sup> Pour out in my heart thy love,<sup>xii</sup>
     that thee,
     the friend in thee,
 25 the enemy for thy sake,
     I may love.
 Thou that givest grace unto the lowly,<sup>xiii</sup>
     give me also grace to be lowly.
 Thou that never forsakest them that fear thee,
 30 let my heart rejoice to fear thee,<sup>xiv</sup>

<sup>ii</sup> Seven verbs of grace in seven lines, and they make a single argument. Not to receive it in vain, not to fail of it, not to neglect it, not to fall from it — then to stir it up, to grow in it, to continue in it. Four negatives and three positives, each with its own epistle, mounting from the least a man can do to the most. The English keeps them as seven separate lines because the ladder is the point.

HOSANNA ON EARTH.

REMEMBER, O Lord, to crown<sup>i</sup>
the year with thy goodness.

For the eyes of all wait upon thee,<sup>ii</sup>

5 thou givest them their meat in due season.

Thou openest thine hand, and fillest every living thing with good pleasure.

And upon us also, O Lord, bestow

the blessings of heaven and of the dew from above,<sup>iii</sup>

10 the blessings of the springs and of the deep beneath, the courses of the Sun, the conjunctions of the Moons,

the tops of the mountains of the sunrising, of the everlasting hills,

the fulness of the earth and of its increase,

a fruitful season, a good temper of the airs,

15 plenty of corn, and abundance of fruits, health of bodies, and peaceful times,

good rule, | good counsel,

good laws, | good justice,

good obedience,

20 good redress, | good store,

good increase, | good birth,

good children,

good nurture, | good instruction.

Ὡστε

οἱ υἱοὶ ἡμῶν
ὥς νεόφυτα ἰδρυμένα
ἐν νεότητι·

5 Αἱ θυγατέρες
καλαί, ὥς ὁμοίωμα ναοῦ· Τὰ ταμεία ἡμῶν ἐξερευγόμενα ἐξ αὐτοῦ εἰς αὐτό, τὰ πρόβατα πολυτόκα, 10 οἱ βόες παχεῖς,
μηδὲν κατάπτωμα φραγμοῦ,
μηδεμία διέξοδος, μηδεμία κραυγή.

Μίαν ἡγησάμην παρὰ Κυρίου, ταύτην ζητήσω,
15 τὸ κατοικεῖν με ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ τοῦ Κυρίου πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς ζωῆς μου· τὸ θεωρεῖν με τὴν τερπνότητα Κυρίου, καὶ ἐπισκέπτεσθαι τὸν ναὸν ἅγιον
αὐτοῦ.

20 Δύο αἰτοῦμαι παρὰ σοῦ, Κύριε, μὴ ἀφέλης μου χάριν πρὸ τοῦ ἀποθανεῖν με, Μάταιον λόγον καὶ ψευδῇ μακράν μου ποιήσον.

Πλοῦτον καὶ πενίαν μὴ μοι δῶς, σύνταξον δέ μοι τὰ δέοντα καὶ τὰ αὐτάρκη.

25 Ἵνα μὴ πλησθῆς ὑπερήφανος γένωμαι,
καὶ εἴπω, Τίς ὁ Κύριος; Ἵνα μὴ πένης γενηθεῖς κλέψω, καὶ ἐπομόσω τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Θεοῦ μου.

Μυηθῶ καὶ περισσεῦσαι, 30 μυηθῶ καὶ ὑστερεῖσθαι,

Ut

Filii nostri
sint sicut novellæ plantationes in juventute sua;

5 Filiae nostræ
compositæ, ut similitudo templi; Promptuaria nostra, eructantia ex hoc in illud,
Oves nostræ fœtosæ,
10 Boves nostræ crassæ,
Ne sit ruina maceriæ,
neque transitus,
neque clamor. Psal. cxliv. 12, 13, 14.

Unam petii a Domino, hanc requiram, 15 ut inhabitem in domo Domini omnibus diebus vitæ meæ:
Ut videam voluptatem Domini, et visitem templum ejus sanctum. Psal. xxvii. 4.

20 Duo rogavi te, Domine,
Ne deneges mihi antequam moriar,
Vanitatem et verba mendacia longe fac a me.
Mendicitatem, et divitias, ne dederis mihi.

Tribue tantum victui meo necessaria, 25 ne forte satiatu, superbus fiam, et dicam, Quis est Dominus?
aut egestate compulsus furer,
et perjurem nomen Dei mei. Prov. xxx. 7, 8, 9.

Discam et abundare,
30 discam et humiliari,

So that our sons
     may be as plants set fast
         in their youth;
 5     our daughters
     fair, as the similitude of a temple;
     our garners overflowing from this to that,
         our sheep bringing forth thousands, 10     our oxen fat,
 no breaking-down of the hedge,
     no going-out,
     no complaining.<sup>i</sup>
 One thing have I asked of the Lord, that will I seek after:
 15     that I may dwell in the house of the Lord
         all the days of my life;
     to behold the delightsomeness of the Lord, and to visit his holy temple.<sup>ii</sup> 20   Two things have I required of thee, O Lord, deny me them not before I die:
 Remove far from me vanity and lies.
     Give me neither riches nor poverty,
     but appoint me that which is needful and sufficient.
 25     Lest I be full, and become proud, and say, Who is the Lord?
     lest I be poor, and steal,
         and forswear the name of my God.<sup>iii</sup>
 Let me be instructed both to abound,
 30     let me be instructed also to suffer need,

[Ἡ ΔΕΙΛΙΝΗ ΑΚΟΛΟΥΘΙΑ.]

- ΤΗΝ ἡμέραν διαβάς εὐχαριστῶ σοι, Κύριε.
 Ἐγγίζει ἡ ἑσπέρα,
 5 φαιδρὰν αὐτὴν χορήγει.
 Ἐσπέρα ὥσπερ τῆς ἡμέρας,
 οὕτω καὶ τῆς ζωῆς ἐστὶ, Ἐσπέρα τῆς ζωῆς τὸ γῆρας, ἐφθασέ με γῆρας,
 10 φαιδρὸν αὐτὸ χορήγει.
 Μὴ με ἀπορρίψῃς εἰς καιρὸν γήρωσ, ἐν τῷ ἐκλείπειν τὴν ἰσχύν μου,
 μὴ ἐγκαταλίπῃς με.
 Ἔως γήρωσ ἴσθι σὺ,
 15 ἔως ἂν καταγῆράσω ἀνέχου μου· Αὐτὸς ποιήσον, καὶ αὐτὸς ἄνεις, καὶ αὐτὸς ἀνάληψαι, καὶ
 σῶσόν με, Κύριε.
 Μείνον μετ' ἐμοῦ, Κύριε, 20 ἥδη γὰρ πρὸς ἑσπέραν μοι ἐστὶ, καὶ κέκλικεν ἡ ἡμέρα
 τῇσδε τῆς πολυμόχθου ζωῆς.
 Τελειωθήτω ἡ δύναμίς σου
 ἐν τῇ ἀσθενείᾳ μου.
 25 Ὡχέτ' ἀπιοῦσα ἡ ἡμέρα, οἴχεται καὶ ὁ βίος,
 ὁ βίος ἄβιος.

[OFFICIUM VESPERTINUM.]

- DIE transacta, Ago tibi gratias, Domine.
 Appropinquat vespera,
 5 Lætam illam concede.
 Sicut diei vespera,
 sic est et vitæ.
 Vitæ vespera, senectus,
 occupavit me senectus,
 10 Lætam illam concede.
 Ne projicias me in tempore senectutis,
 cum defecerit virtus mea,
 ne me derelinquas. Psal. lxxi. 9.
 Usque ad senectam esto tu ipse,
 15 et usque ad canos porta me;
 Tu facias, et tu feras, Tu portabis, et salvabis me, Domine. [Is. xlvi. 4.]
 Mane mecum, Domine, 20 quoniam advesperascit, Luc. xxiv. 29.
 Et inclinata est jam dies
 laboriosæ hujus vitæ. Jerem. vi. 4.
 Perficiatur virtus tua
 in infirmitate mea. 2 Cor. xii. 9.
 25 Abiit decedens dies,
 abit et vita,
 Vita minime vitalis.

[THE EVENING OFFICE.]

NOW that I have passed through the day,

I give thee thanks, O Lord.

The evening draweth nigh,

5 grant it bright.

As is the evening of the day,

so also is the evening of life;

The evening of life is old age,

old age hath overtaken me,

10 grant it bright.

Cast me not off in the time of old age;

when my strength faileth,

forsake me not.<sup>i</sup>

Be thou the same even unto old age,

15 until I grow grey, bear thou with me;

Do thou it thyself, and thyself bear me, and thyself take me up, and save me, O Lord.<sup>ii</sup>

Abide with me, O Lord,

20 for it is now toward evening with me,<sup>iii</sup>

and the day is far spent of this toilsome life.<sup>iv</sup>

Let thy power be made perfect

in my weakness.<sup>v</sup>

25 The day is gone and passed away,

and life too passeth,

life that is no life.

 Τῆς ἡμέρας ἐνετείλατο Κύριος τὸ ἔλεος αὐτοῦ,

Venit nox,
 venit et mors,
 Mors immortalis.
 Prope, ut finis diei,
 5 sic et finis vitae.
 Memores igitur ipsius et nos
 Te rogamus,
 Ut nobis exitus vitae
 Christianos, et tibi acceptos,

 In die mandavit Dominus misericordiam ejus,

Night cometh,
 death too cometh,
 death, the undying.
 Nigh, as the end of the day,
 5 so also the end of life.
 Being mindful, then, we also thereof,
 we beseech thee,
 that the endings of our life
 be Christian, and well-pleasing, 10 without sin, without shame,
 (if it seem good to thee) without pain,
 thou wouldest order in peace, O Lord, O Lord, gathering us together
 beneath the feet of thy chosen, 15 when thou wilt, and as thou wilt,
 only without shame, and without sins.

To be mindful of the days of darkness, that they are many,<sup>i</sup> that we be not cast out into outer darkness.<sup>ii</sup> 20 To be mindful, and to forestall the night, working some good thing.<sup>iii</sup>

Judgement is at hand:
 A good and acceptable defence,
 at the dread and fearful judgement-seat of JESUS CHRIST, 25 grant thou us, O Lord.

In the night seasons I lift up my hands unto the sanctuary, and bless the Lord.<sup>iv</sup>
 In the day-time the Lord hath commanded his mercy,

<sup>i</sup> Eccl. xi. 8 — let him remember the days of darkness; for they shall be many · <sup>ii</sup> Matt. xxii. 13 — bind him hand and foot, and cast him into outer darkness · <sup>iii</sup> John ix. 4 — the night cometh, when no man can work · <sup>iv</sup> Ps. cxxxiv. 2 — lift up your hands in the sanctuary, and bless the LORD and now in the night his song is with me, and a prayer unto the God of my life.<sup>i</sup>

So will I bless thee in all my life, in thy name will I lift up my hands.<sup>ii</sup>

the lifting up of my hands,

Blessed art thou, O Lord our God, 10 the God of our fathers, who givest us occasions of songs in the night,<sup>iv</sup> who hast delivered us from the evil of this day, who hast not cut off my life as a weaver his web, 15 nor made an end of me from morning even unto evening.<sup>v</sup>

CONFESSION AT EVENING.

O LORD,
as day upon our days,
so also do we add sin upon sin.<sup>vi</sup> 20 Seven times a day shall the righteous fall,<sup>vii</sup> but I, a sinner above measure, seventy times seven,<sup>viii</sup>
yea, a thing of astonishment and horror, O Lord.<sup>ix</sup>

But I turn away
25 from my evil ways with groaning,<sup>x</sup>
and I turn again unto mine own heart,
and with my whole heart I turn again unto thee.<sup>xi</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Ps. xlii. 10 — my prayer unto the God of my life · <sup>ii</sup> Ps. lxiii. 5 — I will lift up my hands in thy Name; Prayer Book numbering · <sup>iii</sup> Ps. cxli. 2 — the lifting up of my hands as the evening sacrifice · <sup>iv</sup> Job xxxv. 10 — God my maker, who giveth songs in the night · <sup>v</sup> Isa. xxxviii. 12 — Hezekiah again: from day even to night wilt thou make an end of me · <sup>vi</sup> Eccclus. v. 5 — add not sin unto sin · <sup>vii</sup> Prov. xxiv. 16 — a just man falleth seven times, and riseth up again · <sup>viii</sup> Matt. xviii. 22 — until seventy times seven · <sup>ix</sup> Jer. v. 30 — a wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land · <sup>x</sup> Isa. xxx. 15 — in returning and rest shall ye be saved · <sup>xi</sup> Deut. xxx. 2 — and shalt return unto the LORD thy God with all thine heart

<sup>i</sup> Psal. xlii. 10 is the Prayer Book's figure, not a slip. The Authorised Version has my prayer unto the God of my life at xlii. 8; the BCP Psalter numbers it 10. The same verse is cited the same way at printed 433, four hundred pages later — so the book is consistent in this, and it is further evidence that the Prayer Book Psalter was physically to hand. Do not correct it.

Εἰ δὲ μὴ, (οὐ γὰρ ἄξιος, οὐκ ἄξιός εἰμι) ἀλλὰ γε, ὃ δέσποτα φιλάνθρωπε, γένοιτό μοι ὁ ὕπνος ἀναπνοή,
 ὥς τοῦ πονεῖν, οὕτω καὶ τοῦ ἁμαρτάνειν.

5      Ναὶ, ὦ Κύριε.
 Καὶ μηδὲν ὑπνώσας ἐνθυμῶ τὸ χαλέπαινόν σε,
     ἢ καὶ τὸ μίαινον ἐμέ.
 Μὴ πλησθῶσιν αἱ ψοαὶ τῶν ἐμπαιγμάτων 10    μᾶλλον δὲ παιδεύωσί με οἱ νεφροί μου, ἀλλὰ ἄνευ δεινοῦ φόβου.
 Διαφύλαξον ἐμὲ ἀπὸ τοῦ ζοφεροῦ ὕπνου
     τῆς ἁμαρτίας,
     καὶ πᾶν γεῶδες καὶ κακὸν φρόνημα
 15    ἐν ἔμοι κοιμίσον.
 Δώρησαί μοι ὕπνον ἐλαφρὸν, πάσης τε φαντασίας
     σαρκικῆς καὶ Σατανικῆς ἀπηλλαγμένον.
 20    Τῶν ἀοράτων ἐχθρῶν μου τὸ αὔπνον
     ἐπίστασαι, Κύριε, Καὶ τὸ ἄτονον τῆς ἀθλίας μου σαρκὸς,
     ὁ πλάσας με.
 Σκεπασάτω με ἡ πτέρυξ
 25    τοῦ ἐλέους σου.
 Διέγειρόν με ἐν καιρῷ εὐθέτῳ,
     ἐν καιρῷ τῆς προσευχῆς, Καὶ δὸς ὀρθρίζειν ἐπὶ σέ, καὶ ἐπὶ τὴν δοξολογίαν,
 30    καὶ θεραπείαν σὴν.

Sin minus, (non enim dignus, non sum dignus)
 Saltem, benigne Domine,
 Sit somnus meus, ut laboris
 sic peccati cessatio.
 5      Etiam, o Domine.
 Nec quid cogitem per somnia,
     quod te offendar,
     nec quod me polluat.
 Lumbi mei ne oppleantur illusionibus,   Psal.
     xxxviii. 7.
 10    Sed erudiant me de nocte renes mei,   Psal.
     xvi. 8.
     Verum absque gravi terrore.
 Custodi me a caliginoso Peccati somno,
 Omnemque terrenum, et pravum sensum
 15    in me sopito.
 Concede mihi somnum facilem, omnique imaginatione Carnali et Satanica liberum.
 20    Invisibiles mei hostes quam sint insomnes, probe nosti, Domine, Miseræque meæ carnis infirmitatem,   [Psal.
     ciiii. 14.]
     qui me formasti.
 Protegat me ala
 25    misericordiæ tuæ.   [Psal. xvii. 8. xci. 4.]
 Expergefacias me in tempore opportuno, in tempore orationis,   Psal. xxxii. 7.
 Et da ad te de luce vigilare,   Psal. lxiii. 1.
     ad te glorificandum,
 30    et colendum.

But if not — (for I am not worthy, I am not worthy) — yet at the least, O Master, lover of men, let my sleep be unto me a respite,
 as from labour, so also from sinning,
 5     Yea, O Lord.
 And when I sleep, let me imagine nothing that angereth thee,
       nor that defileth me.
 Let not my loins be filled with illusions,<sup>i</sup> 10     but rather let my reins chasten me,<sup>ii</sup>
       yet without dread terror.
 Keep me safe from the gloomy sleep
       of sin,
       and every earthly and evil thought 15     lay thou to rest within me.
 Grant me a light sleep,
       and from all imagining,
       fleshly and Satanic,
       clean delivered.
 20   How sleepless mine unseen enemies are,
       thou knowest well, O Lord,
 and the feebleness of my wretched flesh,<sup>iii</sup>
       thou that didst fashion me.
 Let the wing of thy mercy
 25     cover me.<sup>iv</sup>
 Rouse me up at the fitting time, at the time of prayer,<sup>v</sup>
 And grant me to rise early unto thee,<sup>vi</sup>
       to give thee glory,
 30     and to do thee service.

[(1.) Before Communion.]

O LORD,

I am not worthy, neither sufficient,<sup>i</sup>

5 That thou shouldest come in under the unclean roof of the house of my soul,

For it is all desolate and fallen down, and thou hast with me no place worthy whereon to lay thy head.<sup>ii</sup>

10 But as thou vouchsafedst to be laid in a cave and in a manger of the unreasoning beasts;<sup>iii</sup>

As thou disdainedst not to be received also in the house of Simon the Leper;<sup>iv</sup>

15 As thou disdainedst not her that was as I, the harlot, the sinful woman, drawing near to thee and touching thee;<sup>v</sup>

as thou didst not abhor that foul and accursed mouth of hers,<sup>vi</sup>

20 neither the thief upon the cross that confessed thee;<sup>vii</sup>

So vouchsafe unto me also,
the abandoned, the wretched,
the sinner above measure,

25 To be received unto the touching and partaking of the immaculate, dread, life-giving,

<sup>i</sup> Matt. viii. 8 — the centurion at Capernaum: Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof. The prayer opens by taking a soldier's words about his house and applying them to a soul, which is why the roof of the next line is the roof of a house that is not a house. · <sup>ii</sup> Vers. 20 — the plate's continuation reference, i.e. Matt. viii. 20, twelve verses on from the centurion: the Son of man hath not where to lay his head. The complaint is Christ's own and it is turned round. He had nowhere to lay his head in the world; the prayer says there is no fit place to lay it here either, in me. The same verse is made to indict the man praying, and the two references are joined for that purpose — which is only visible once you know that Vers. means the book last named. · <sup>iii</sup> Luke ii. 7 — and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn · <sup>iv</sup> Matt. xxvi. 6 — in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper · <sup>v</sup> Luke vii. 37 — a woman in the city, which was a sinner ... brought an alabaster box of ointment · <sup>vi</sup> Vers. 38 — i.e. Luke vii. 38, the next verse: began to wash his feet with tears ... and kissed his feet. The plate cites the mouth's own act to justify the words impurum et execrandum os ejus. · <sup>vii</sup> Luke xxiii. 43 — To day shalt thou be with me in paradise

<sup>i</sup> The page is a legal brief made of precedents, and every one of them is a place Christ was received by the unfit. A cave and a manger, a leper's house, a sinful woman, her mouth, a thief on a cross — five occasions, five citations, and the conclusion drawn from them is Digneris ipse et me, vouchsafe me also. He is not asking for an exception; he is arguing from a settled practice. It is the same method as §23's catena four hundred pages later, and the same as the ladder of unworthiness at printed 338, which is likewise built entirely out of approaches that succeeded.

ABSOLUTUM et consummatum est,
 20 quicquid in nostra potestate est, Christe, Deus noster, quoad Dispensationis Tuæ mysterium.
 Habuimus enim memoriam Mortis Tuæ, Vidimus typum Resurrectionis Tuæ, Impleti sumus vita Tua æterna,
 Fruitionem habuimus deliciarum Tuarum,
 25 quarum nulla est satiety,
 Qua et in futuro sæculo
 Nos omnes dignari complaceat tibi, Domine Deus.

But give us,
even unto our last and latest breath,
worthily to receive the hope 5 of thy hallowed gifts, Unto
sanctification, illumination, strength, the lightening of the burden of my many sins,
10 A safeguard against all working of the devil,
A warding-off and a hindrance of my evil conscience,
A mortifying of the passions,
A keeping of the commandments,
15 An increase of thy divine grace,
and the making-mine-own of thy Kingdom.

[(2.) After Communion.]

IT is accomplished and finished,
so far as lieth in our power, 20 O Christ our God,
the mystery of thy Dispensation.
For we have kept the memorial of thy death,
we have seen the figure of thy resurrection,
we have been filled with thine unending life, 25 we have had the fruition of thine inexhaustible delight, whereof, in the age to come also,
be pleased to count us all worthy.

<sup>i</sup> Mark x. 17 — the rich young ruler: what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life? · <sup>ii</sup> Acts ii. 37 — at Pentecost: men and brethren, what shall we do? · <sup>iii</sup> Acts xvi. 30 — the gaoler at Philippi: what must I do to be saved? · <sup>iv</sup> Luke iii. 10 — to the Baptist, three times over: what shall we do then?

<sup>i</sup> Four askings of one question, and the answers differ every time. What shall I do? is put by the rich young ruler, by the crowd at Pentecost, by the gaoler at Philippi, and three times over to the Baptist by the people, the publicans and the soldiers — and Scripture answers keep the commandments, repent and be baptized, believe on the Lord Jesus, and a different practical charge to each trade. Andrewes sets them together without reconciling them.

MEDITATION I.

OF THE DAY OF JUDGEMENT.

O FATHER without beginning, O only-begotten Son,

O quickening Spirit,

5 pitiful, merciful, longsuffering, of great mercy, of many tender compassions,<sup>i</sup>

who lovest the righteous, and hast mercy on sinners, who passest over sins, and grantest petitions,

God of them that repent,

10 Saviour of them that sin;

I have sinned before thee, O Lord,

and thus and thus have I done.<sup>ii</sup>

Ah, ah! alas, alas!

How was I enticed by mine own lust?<sup>iii</sup>

15 How did I hate instruction?<sup>iv</sup>

And I neither revered, nor stood in awe of,

the incomprehensibleness of thy glory,

the awfulness of thy presence,

the terribleness of thy power,

20 the exactness of thy justice,

the loveliness of thy goodness.

I will call, if there be any that will answer me;

to which of the holy angels shall I look?<sup>v</sup>

O wretched man that I am!

25 Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?<sup>vi</sup>

The brace on the page offers the reader either, and the two references stand side by side because neither gesture is the right one — the point is that repentance has a body, and Scripture shows it more than one way to move.

MEDITATION II.

OF THE SHORTNESS OF LIFE.

HAVE mercy upon me, O Lord, for I am weak;<sup>i</sup>

Remember what my substance is,<sup>ii</sup>

5 remember that I am but flesh,

a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again.<sup>iii</sup>

My days are as grass, as a flower of the field,<sup>iv</sup> for a wind hath gone over me, and I shall not be,

and I shall know my place no more.<sup>v</sup>

10 For I am earth and ashes,<sup>vi</sup> dust and grass,

flesh and breath,

corruption and the worm.<sup>vii</sup>

As a sojourner upon the earth,<sup>viii</sup>

15 dwelling in a house of clay,<sup>ix</sup> of few days and evil,<sup>x</sup>

to-day and not to-morrow,

in the morning, and no more until night,<sup>xi</sup>

in a body of sin,

20 in an age of corruption, short-lived and full of wrath,<sup>xii</sup>

as a flower that flourished and fled away,

and as a shadow, that in no wise abideth.

Remember this, O Lord, and forbear, forgive;<sup>xiii</sup>

25 for what profit is there in my destruction,

<sup>i</sup> Ps. vi. 2 — have mercy upon me, O LORD; for I am weak · <sup>iii</sup> Ps. lxxviii. 39 — a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again · <sup>iv</sup> Isa. xl. 6 — all flesh is grass · <sup>v</sup> Ps. ciii. 16 — the place thereof shall know it no more · <sup>vi</sup> Gen. xviii. 27 — Abraham pleading for Sodom: I am but dust and ashes · <sup>vii</sup> Job xvii. 14 — I have said to corruption, Thou art my father · <sup>viii</sup> Ps. xxxix. 14 — I am a stranger with thee, and a sojourner · <sup>ix</sup> Job iv. 19 — them that dwell in houses of clay · <sup>x</sup> Gen. xlvii. 9 — Jacob before Pharaoh: few and evil have the days of the years of my life been · <sup>xi</sup> Isa. xxxviii. 13 — Hezekiah: from morning even to night wilt thou make an end of me · <sup>xii</sup> Job xiv. 1 — of few days, and full of trouble · <sup>xiii</sup> Ps. lxxiv. 18 — remember this, that the enemy hath reproached

<sup>ii</sup> The same clause, two verse-numbers, three hundred pages apart. Memorare quæ mea substantia is referred here to Psal. lxxxix. 47 and at printed 35 to lxxxix. 46. The Authorised Version has it at 47, so the earlier page is the one that slipped. Both kept as printed — this is the seventh place where the volume settles one of its own references by citing it correctly elsewhere.

PART II — PRECES
QUOTIDIANAE

- DUO in me cognosco, Domine, Naturam, quam Tu fecisti,
Peccatum, quod ego adjeci;
Fateor quod per culpam deformavi naturam,
5 sed memento quod sum spiritus vadens, non rediens; [Psal. lxxviii. 39.]
Per meipsum enim a peccato redire non possum.
Eja! tolle a me quod ego feci,
Remaneat in me quod Tu fecisti;
10 Ut ne pereat, quod pretioso Tuo sanguine redemisti.
Eja! ne perdat improbitas mea, quod redemit bonitas Tua.
Domine, Deus mi, si feci, ut essem reus Tuus,
Nunquid facere potui, ut non essem servus Tuus?
15 Si inde innocentiam mihi ademi,
Nunquid et inde misericordiam Tuam peremi?
Si commisi, unde me damnare posses,
Nunquid et Tu amisisti, unde salvare soles?
Verum est, Domine, conscientia mea meretur damnationem, 20 Sed misericordia Tua superat omnem offensionem.

TWO things I know in myself, O Lord,
     The nature, which Thou madest,
     The sin, which I have added thereto;
 I confess that by my fault I have marred the nature,
 5     but remember that I am a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again; [Ps. 78:39]<sup>i</sup>
 For of myself I cannot come back from sin.
     O come! take from me what I have done,
     Let there abide in me what Thou hast done;
 10    That it perish not, which Thou hast redeemed with Thy precious blood.
     O come! let not my wickedness destroy what Thy goodness hath redeemed.
 O Lord my God, if I have wrought that I should be guilty before Thee,
 Could I ever have wrought that I should not be Thy servant?
 15    If thereby I have taken innocence from myself,
     Have I thereby also made an end of Thy mercy?
     If I have committed that whereby Thou couldest condemn me,
     Hast Thou also lost that whereby Thou art wont to save?
     It is true, O Lord, my conscience deserveth damnation, 20    But Thy mercy surpasseth every offence.

Parce ergo,

Quia non est { difficile potentiae / indecens justitiae / insolitum clementiae } Tuæ, parcere delinquenti.

Qui me { creasti, / redemisti, } ne me { perimas, / condemnes. }

5 Qui me creasti Tua bonitate,

Ne pereat opus Tuum mea iniquitate.

Agnosce in me quod est Tuum,

Et tolle a me quod est meum.

Respice ad me infelicem,

10 Pietas immensa:

ad me sceleratum,

Misericordia publica.

Infirmus ad Omnipotentem venio,

Vulneratus ad Medicum curro.

15 Serva mihi mansuetudinem miserationis,

Qui tamdiu suspendisti gladium ultionis.

Dele numerositatem criminum meorum,

Renova multitudinem miserationum Tuarum.

Quantumvis sum

20 { immundus, / cæcus, / infirmus, / vel si mortuus, } Tu potes me { mundare, / illuminare, / sanare, / resuscitare. }

Qualiscunque sum, sive bonus, sive malus, semper Tuus sum.

Si Tu me { ejicis, / despicias, } quis me { recipiet? / respiciet? }

Spare me therefore,
Because it is not { hard for Thy power / unseemly for Thy justice / strange to Thy clemency },
to spare him that offendeth.
Thou who hast { made / redeemed } me, { destroy / condemn } me not.
5 Thou who hast made me by Thy goodness,
Let not Thy work perish by mine iniquity.
Own in me what is Thine,
And take from me what is mine.
Look upon me, unhappy, 10 O boundless Pity:
upon me, wicked,
O Mercy open to all.
Sick, I come to the Almighty,
Wounded, I run to the Physician.
15 Keep for me the gentleness of Thy compassion,
Thou who so long hast held back the sword of vengeance.
Blot out the multitude of my crimes,
Renew the multitude of Thy compassions.
However much I am { unclean, / blind, / sick, / yea, though dead, } Thou canst { cleanse / enlighten / heal / raise } me.
Whatsoever I am, whether good or evil,
I am ever Thine.
If Thou { cast me out / despise me }, who shall { receive / regard } me?

Plus potes { remittere, / parcere, } quam ego { committere, / peccare. }

Ne premat delectatio noxia,

Saltem ne opprimat consuetudo perversa.

A pravis et illicitis desideriis,

5 A vanis, noxiis, immundis cogitationibus,

Ab illusionibus malignorum spirituum,

A pollutionibus mentis et corporis.

Thou canst more { forgive / spare } than I can { commit / sin }.

Let not hurtful delight oppress me,

At the least, let not perverse custom overwhelm me.

From depraved and unlawful desires,

5 From vain, hurtful, unclean thoughts,

From the illusions of malignant spirits,

From the pollutions of mind and body.

QUI exaudis orationem,
ad Te omnis caro veniet, Psal. lxxv. 2.

Vespere, mane, et meridie, narrabo et annuntiabo,

5 et Tu exaudies vocem meam. Psal. lv. 17.

Ad Te, Domine, orabo mane:

exaudies vocem meam mane. Psal. v. 3.

Dirigatur oratio mea,

sicut incensum in conspectu Tuo. Psal. cxli. 2.

10 In matutinis, Domine, meditabor in Te,

quia fuisti adjutor meus. Psal. lxxiii. 7, 8.

Gratias Tibi ago, Domine, omnipotens, æterne Deus, qui me in hac nocte, non meis meritis, sed Tua sancta miserericordia, custodire dignatus es. Concede mihi, Do-

15 mine, diem istum in Tuo sancto servitio ita peragere, ut Tibi placeat obsequium servitutis meæ.

Levo cor cum manibus ad Dominum in cœlis. [Thren. iii. 41.]

Ecce, sicut oculi servorum ad manus dominorum, et sicut oculi ancillæ ad manus dominæ,

20 Ita oculi nostri ad Dominum Deum nostrum, donec misereatur nostri. Psal. cxxiii. 2.

Respice in me, et miserere mei,

secundum judicium diligentium nomen Tuum. [Psal. cxix. 132.]

- O THOU that hearest the prayer, unto Thee shall all flesh come, [Ps. 65:2]<sup>i</sup>
 In the evening, and morning, and at noon-day, will I declare and tell it forth,
 5 and Thou shalt hear my voice. [Ps. 55:17]<sup>ii</sup> Unto Thee, O Lord, will I pray betimes in the morning:
 in the morning shalt Thou hear my voice. [Ps. 5:3]<sup>iii</sup> Let my prayer be set forth as the incense in Thy sight. [Ps. 141:2]<sup>iv</sup> 10 In the morning-watches, O Lord, will I meditate upon Thee, because Thou hast been my helper. [Ps. 63:7-8]<sup>v</sup>
 I give Thee thanks, O Lord, almighty, everlasting God, who hast this night, not by my own merits, but of Thy holy mercy, vouchsafed to keep me. Grant me, O 15 Lord, so to pass this day in Thy holy service, that the obedience of my servitude may be pleasing unto Thee.
 I lift up my heart with my hands unto the Lord in the heavens. [Lam. 3:41]<sup>vi</sup> Behold, as the eyes of servants look unto the hand of their masters, and as the eyes of a maiden unto the hand of her mistress, 20 So our eyes wait upon the Lord our God, until He have mercy upon us. [Ps. 123:2]<sup>vii</sup>
 O look Thou upon me, and be merciful unto me, as Thou usest to do unto those that love Thy Name. [Ps. 119:132]<sup>viii</sup>

<sup>ix</sup> He alters the verse as he prays it, and the alteration is the petition. The father in Mark cries help thou mine unbelief; Andrewes writes adjuva Tu impænitentiam meam — help thou mine impenitence. The substitution is deliberate and is not a misquotation: what he wants help against is not doubt but hardness. The English keeps his word and the note keeps the Gospel's, because the reader needs to hear both to hear either.

- For the surpassing abundance of Thy mercies. [1 Tim. 1:14]
 For the exceeding great love wherewith Thou hast loved us, [Eph. 2:4]<sup>i</sup>
 Be merciful to me a sinner, [Luke 18:13]<sup>ii</sup>
 5 Be merciful to me, of sinners { the chief, [1 Tim. 1:15] / the most wretched. }<sup>iii</sup>
 One deep calleth another, [Ps. 42:7]<sup>iv</sup>
 The deep of our misery, the deep of Thy mercy.
 Where sin abounded, let grace much more abound; [Rom. 5:20]<sup>v</sup>

 10 Let Thy mercy triumph over Thy justice, [Jas. 2:13]<sup>vii</sup> in our sins.
 Yea, Lord.
- But indeed above all, and before all,
 I believe that Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. [Matt. 16:16]<sup>viii</sup>
 15 Who camest into the world to save sinners, [1 Tim. 1:15]
 Of whom I am chief: save me.
 Thou that takest away the sins of the world, take away my sins, [John 1:29]<sup>ix</sup>
 Thou that camest to redeem that which was lost, [Luke 19:10]<sup>x</sup> Suffer not him to perish whom Thou hast redeemed.
 20 From the remembrance of evils,

<sup>v</sup> Rom. v. 20 again, and cited right. This is the third page to give the verse correctly — with printed 103 and 111's own facing evidence — against the Rom. v. 2 at printed 111. And note what he does with it: the Vulgate's indicative superabundavit gratia, grace did abound, becomes the subjunctive superabundet, let it abound. He turns a statement of what happened into a request that it happen again.

that they may obtain eternal rewards in the heavens;

2. That the miseries of the poor and of the captives

Thou wouldest vouchsafe to regard and relieve;

3. That the frail fallings of the flesh with kindly

5 compassion Thou wouldest tenderly regard,

and stay up them that are slipping;

4. That the reasonable obedience of our service

Thou wouldest hold accepted;

5. That Thou wouldest raise our minds to heavenly desires;

10 6. That Thou wouldest vouchsafe to turn back the eyes of mercy upon us;

7. That our souls, and the souls of our kinsfolk, from eternal damnation Thou wouldest deliver;

8. That with these for whom I have prayed,

or in any wise am bound to pray,

there to appear in righteousness,

and to be satisfied with glory;

We beseech Thee,

20 Hear us, O Lord.

THANKSGIVING.<sup>i</sup>

Let Thy works praise Thee, O God, and let Thy saints give thanks unto Thee. [Ps. 145:10]<sup>ii</sup>

It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord,

25 and to sing praises unto Thy Name, O Most Highest: [Ps. 92:1]<sup>iii</sup>

To tell of Thy loving-kindness in the morning, and of Thy truth in the night-season. [v. 2]

I will magnify Thee, O God my King, and I will bless Thy Name for ever, and world without end. [Ps. 145:1]<sup>iv</sup>

<sup>i</sup> The Thanksgiving opens on the Sabbath psalm, and it opens where the intercession stopped. The petitions above end we beseech Thee, hear us, O Lord — eight numbered asks, the last of them for the pleader and his kindred together — and then, on the same leaf, the section changes and the same voice begins to give thanks. The 1853 sets both on one page and this edition keeps them there; the join is the point, and a reader who meets Thanksgiving at the head of a fresh leaf loses it. Ps. xcii is titled for the Sabbath day, so the praise begins on the day appointed for it — morning loving-kindness and night-season truth in the next breath.

By the prudence of the Proverbs,
 By the experience of the Histories,
 Who, when the fulness of the time was come, [Gal. 4:4]<sup>i</sup>
 didst send Thy Son,
 5 Who took hold of the seed of Abraham, [Heb. 2:16]<sup>ii</sup> Who emptied Himself, taking the form of a servant. [Phil. 2:7]<sup>iii</sup>
 Who was made of a woman, made under the law, [Gal. 4:4] 10 by the offering [Eph. 5:2]<sup>iv</sup> of His life rendered the obedience of the law, by the sacrifice of His death took away the curse of the Law. [Gal. 3:13]<sup>v</sup>
 { By His death redeeming, / By His resurrection quickening, } our race, [Rom. 4:25]
 15 Leaving nothing undone that needed to be done, [Isa. 5:4]<sup>vi</sup> that we might be made partakers of the divine nature. [2 Pet. 1:4]<sup>vii</sup>
 Who made manifest the savour of His knowledge, [2 Cor. 2:14]<sup>viii</sup> in every place by the preaching of the Gospel, Bearing witness to Himself
 20 By divers signs and mighty works, [Heb. 2:4]
 By the wondrous holiness of His life, [1 Pet. 3:2]<sup>ix</sup> by stupendous power, even unto the shedding of blood, [Heb. 11:37]<sup>x</sup>
 By the incredible conversion of the whole world 25 unto the faith, [1 John 5:4]
 by the intervention of { no [worldly] authority, / no [human] persuasion, } Who hast made us sons of the Saints, and heirs of the same calling, [Heb. 9:15]<sup>xi</sup>

<sup>vi</sup> Isaiah's question is asked of Christ, not of Israel. What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it? is God's complaint against a people that yielded wild grapes; Andrewes turns it into praise — nihil non faciens quo facto opus erat, leaving nothing undone that needed doing. The reproach becomes a commendation by changing who is speaking of whom, and that inversion is the sort of thing his method does constantly.

<sup>ii</sup> Four names for four ways a people is lost, and none of them is explained. Asshur is the foreign power a nation is given over to; Jeroboam the ruler who divides worship to keep a throne; Rehoboam the ruler who answers roughly and loses ten tribes; the evil spirit of Shechem the discord God sends between a man and his own city. As at printed 204, the deprecation depends entirely on the reader knowing the histories, and the English can only name them.

To keep holy-day, | of God, | Eternity.

5 To be glorified, || The Thrice-Holy,
To be blessed, || With the Angels,
To enjoy delights, || In light,
A Psalm, || On high,
A Song, || In heaven.

10 The girdle, | the helmet,
the breastplate, | the shield,
the shoes, | the sword,
| above all, prayer. [Eph. 6:14–18]<sup>ii</sup>

Grant me the power and the opportunity of well-doing,

15 that before the day of my departure I may work at the least some good, whose fruit may abide, [John 15:16]<sup>iii</sup>

That I may be able to appear in righteousness, and to be satisfied with glory. [Ps. 17:15]<sup>iv</sup>

Who addedst unto Hezekiah fifteen years of life, [2 Kings 20:6]<sup>v</sup>

20 grant me but so much space of life, at the least in measure,
while I may bewail my sins,

<sup>i</sup> Luke xxiii. 43 — to day shalt thou be with me in paradise; Luke xvi. 22 — carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom ·

<sup>ii</sup> Eph. vi. 14 — the whole armour, which prayer crowns at verse 18 · <sup>iii</sup> John xv. 16 — that your fruit should remain ·

Et concede finem bonum,
Quod est super omne donum,
Bonum et sanctum vitæ finem, Gloriosam et lætam resurrectionem.

- 5 De frugibus terræ et plenitudine ejus, Benedic capturam nostram, Ps. cxxxii. 15.
Pone fines pacem,
Imple nos adipe frumenti, Ps. cxlvii. 14.
Satura pauperes panibus, Ps. cxxxii. 15.
10 Conforta seras portarum, Benedic filiis nostris in nobis, Ps. cxlvii. 13.
Indue inimicos confusione, Ps. cxxxii. 18.
Aëris temperiem indulgeas,
Fruges terræ concedas,
15 Carnalia desideria repellas,
Infirmis sanitatem restituas,
Lapsis reparationem annuas, Navigantibus et itinerantibus,
iter prosperum et salutis portum, 20 Tribulatis gaudium,
Oppressis releuationem,
Captivis libertatem concedas, Sanitatem mentis,
Integritatem corporis,
25 Robur fidei,
Securitatem spei,
Tutelam salutis.

And grant a good end,
     which is above every gift,
 A good and holy end of life,
     A glorious and joyful resurrection.

- 5 For the fruits of the earth and the fulness thereof,
     Bless our store, [Ps. 132:15]<sup>i</sup>
     Make peace in our borders,
     Fill us with the flour of wheat, [Ps. 147:14]<sup>ii</sup>
     Satisfy the poor with bread, [Ps. 132:15]
 10 Make fast the bars of our gates,
     Bless our children within us, [Ps. 147:13]<sup>iii</sup>
     Clothe our enemies with confusion, [Ps. 132:18]
     Grant a temperate air,
     Grant the fruits of the earth,
 15 Drive off carnal desires,
     Restore health to the sick,
     Grant to the fallen restoration,
     To them that sail and travel,
         a prosperous journey and the haven of safety, 20 To the afflicted, joy,
     To the oppressed, relief,
     To captives grant liberty,
     Soundness of mind,
     Wholeness of body,
 25 Strength of faith,
     Security of hope,
     The safeguard of salvation.

SACRIFICIUM VESPERTINUM.

MEMOR sim nocte nominis Tui, et legem
Tuam custodiam. [Psal. cxix. 55.]

Vespertina oratio ascendat ad Te,

5 et descendat ad nos miseratio Tua,

Qui das carmina de nocte, [Job. xxxv. 10.]

Qui facis ut exitus Auroræ et Vesperi dilaudent Te, [Psal. lxxv. 8.]

Qui das dilectis Tuis somnum sanitatis. [Ps. cxxvii. 3.]

10 HOROLOGIUM.

Qui tempora et momenta posuisti in potestate Tua, Act. i. 7.

Largire, ut tempore commodo et opportuno oremus Te,

Mar. iv. 38.

Et serva nos.

15 Qui propter nos homines, et propter salutem nostram,

Alta nocte natus es, Luc. ii. 8.

Da nobis renasci indies renovatione Spiritus Sancti, Tit. iii. 5.

Donec Christus formetur in nobis, in virum perfectum,

Gal. iv. 19. [Eph. iv. 13.]

20 Et serva nos.

Qui mane primo Oriente jam sole resurrexisti a mortuis, Mar. xvi. 2.

Resuscita nos quotidie ad vitæ novitatem, Rom. vi. 4.

Suggerens nobis, quos Ipse nosti, modos pœnitentiæ,

25 Et serva nos.

THE EVENING SACRIFICE.

Let me remember Thy Name in the night, and keep Thy law. [Ps. 119:55]<sup>i</sup>

Let my evening prayer ascend unto Thee,

5 and let Thy compassion descend upon us,

Who givest songs in the night, [Job 35:10]<sup>ii</sup>

Who makest the outgoings of the morning and evening to praise Thee,

[Ps. 65:8]<sup>iii</sup>

Who givest Thy beloved the sleep of health. [Ps. 127:3]<sup>iv</sup>

10 THE HOURS.

Who hast put the times and the moments in Thine own power, [Acts 1:7]<sup>v</sup>

Grant that in fit and seasonable time we may pray unto Thee, [Mark 4:38]<sup>vi</sup>

And save us.

Who for us men, and for our salvation,

15 wast born in the deep of night, [Luke 2:8]<sup>vii</sup>

Grant us to be born again day by day by the renewing of the Holy Ghost, [Titus 3:5]<sup>viii</sup> until Christ be formed in us, unto a perfect man, [Gal. 4:19 / Eph. 4:13]<sup>ix</sup>

And save us.

Who in the early morning, the sun now risen,

20 didst rise again from the dead, [Mark 16:2]<sup>x</sup>

Raise us daily unto newness of life, [Rom. 6:4]<sup>xi</sup>

Suggesting to us — Thou Thyself knowest them — the ways of repentance,

And save us.

<sup>i</sup> Ps. cxix. 55 — I have thought upon thy Name, O LORD, in the night · <sup>ii</sup> Job xxxv. 10 — Elihu: none asketh Where is God my maker, who giveth songs in the night? · <sup>iii</sup> Ps. lxxv. 8 — the harvest psalm: the outgoings of the morning and evening made to rejoice · <sup>iv</sup> Ps. cxxvii. 3 — he giveth his beloved sleep, verse 3 on the Prayer Book's numbering · <sup>v</sup> Acts i. 7 — the Ascension: it is not for you to know the times or the seasons · <sup>vi</sup> Mark iv. 38 — the disciples wake Christ in the storm · <sup>vii</sup> Luke ii. 8 — the shepherds in the field by night, which fixes the hour of the Nativity · <sup>viii</sup> Titus iii. 5 — the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost · <sup>ix</sup> Gal. iv. 19 — Paul in travail again until Christ be formed in you; Eph. iv. 13 — unto a perfect man · <sup>x</sup> Mark xvi. 2 — the women at the sepulchre, at the rising of the sun · <sup>xi</sup> Rom. vi. 4 — the baptismal argument: even so we also should walk in newness of life

<sup>iv</sup> The plate's cxxvii. 3 is not a slip. On the Prayer Book's numbering he giveth his beloved sleep is verse 3; the Authorised Version makes it verse 2. With the two Prayer Book references at printed 433 this is a further sign of which Psalter lay open. And Andrewes does not ask simply for sleep: somnum sanitatis, the sleep of soundness — the health that sleep is the evidence of, rather than the sleep itself. Neither English Bible has the word, and our English keeps it.

<sup>v</sup> The hours are Roman, counted from sunrise. The third is about nine in the morning, the sixth noon, the ninth about three in the afternoon, and the Horologium walks them in order, giving each the Gospel event that falls there. A reader counting from midnight will put Pentecost before dawn and the darkness over the land in the small hours. Andrewes explains none of it, because his reader did not need it explained.

Qui hora tertia Spiritum Sanctum Tuum in Apostolos demisisti, Act. ii. 15.

Eundem Spiritum ne auferas a nobis, Psal. li. 11.

Sed quotidie renova in visceribus nostris,

5 Et serva nos.

Qui hora sexta dieque sexto tecum una in cruce suffixisti peccata mundi, Matt. xxvii. 45.

Dele quod adversum nos est Chirographum peccatorum nostrorum, et, tollens de medio, [Col. ii. 14.]

10 Serva nos.

Qui hora sexta linteum magnum de cœlo submisisti ad terram, Ecclesiæ Tuæ symbolum, Act. x. [9.] 11.

Recipe nos in illud peccatores de gentibus, Gal. ii. 15.

Et cum illa recipe una in cœlum, Act. x. 16.

15 Et serva nos.

Qui hora septima Reguli filium a febre relinqui voluisti, Jo. iv. 52.

Siquid in anima nostra febrile hæreat, aut morbidum, aufer a nobis etiam,

20 Et serva nos.

Qui hora nona propter nos peccatores et peccata nostra mortem gustasti, Mar. xv. 34. Heb. ii. 9.

Mortifica in nobis membra terrena, Col. iii. 5.

Et quicquid voluntati Tuæ adversum est,

25 Et serva nos.

Qui horam nonam orationis horam esse voluisti, Act. iii. 1.

Orantes nos in hora orationis exaudi,

Et orationis votique nos compotes redde,

Et serva nos.

30 Qui hora decima ab Apostolo Tuo, invento Filio Tuo,

- Who at the third hour didst send down Thy Holy Spirit upon the Apostles, [Acts 2:15]<sup>i</sup>
 Take not the same Spirit from us, [Ps. 51:11]<sup>ii</sup>
 But daily renew Him within our inward parts,
 5 And save us.
- Who at the sixth hour, and on the sixth day, didst nail up with Thee on the cross<sup>iii</sup>
 the sins of the world, [Matt. 27:45]<sup>iv</sup> Blot out the handwriting that is against us, the handwriting of our sins, and, taking it out of the way, [Col. 2:14]<sup>v</sup> 10 Save us.
- Who at the sixth hour a great sheet from heaven
 didst let down to earth, the emblem of Thy Church, [Acts 10:9,11]<sup>vi</sup> Receive us into it, sinners of the Gentiles, [Gal. 2:15]<sup>vii</sup>
 And with it receive us together into heaven, [Acts 10:16]<sup>viii</sup>
 15 And save us.
- Who at the seventh hour didst will the nobleman's son to be left of the fever, [John 4:52]<sup>ix</sup>
 If aught feverish cleave in our soul, or diseased, take it also from us,
 20 And save us.
- Who at the ninth hour, for us sinners and for our sins, didst taste death, [Mark 15:34 / Heb. 2:9]<sup>x</sup> Mortify in us our earthly members, [Col. 3:5]<sup>xi</sup>
 And whatsoever is contrary to Thy will,
 25 And save us.
- Who didst will the ninth hour to be the hour of prayer, [Acts 3:1]<sup>xii</sup> Hear us praying in the hour of prayer,
 And make us to obtain our prayer and our vow,
 And save us.
- 30 Who at the tenth hour, by Thine Apostle, when he had found Thy Son,

cum ingenti gaudio,

"Invenimus Messiam" pronunciari voluisti, Jo. i. 41.

Et nos eundem Messiam similiter invenire,

Et invento similiter gaudere fac,

5 Et serva nos.

Qui stantes toto die otiosos dignatus es tamen

etiam undecima diei hora, pacta mercede, in vineam Tuam mittere, Matt. xx. 6.

Eandem gratiam fac nobis,

10 Et, sero licet, quasi circa undecimam, [Vers. 9.]

ad Te revertentes benigne suscipe,

Et serva nos.

Qui hora Cœnæ, sacrosancta Corporis et Sanguinis Tui

15 Eorundem nos memores et participes redde, nec ad

judicium unquam, sed ad peccati remissionem, et legata

Novi Testamenti acquirenda, 1 Cor. xi. 29.

Et serva nos.

Qui vespere de cruce tolli, et monumento

20 sepeliri voluisti, Mar. xv. 42.

Tolle de nobis, et sepeli in sepulcro Tuo, peccata nostra, tegens bonis operibus

quicquid male admisimus,

Et serva nos.

25 Qui multa jam nocte Apostolis Tuis afflatu Tuo potestatem peccati tum remittendi, tum retinendi, contulisti,

Jo. xx. 22, [23.]

Illius nos potestatis participes redde,

sed quoad remissionem, ne ad retentionem, Domine,

30 Et serva nos.

- with exceeding joy,
 didst will it to be proclaimed, "We have found the Messias," [John 1:41]<sup>i</sup> Make us likewise to find the same Messias, and likewise, having found Him, to rejoice,
 5 And save us.
 Who, though we stood idle all the day, didst yet vouchsafe, even at the eleventh hour of the day, the wage agreed, to send us into Thy vineyard, [Matt. 20:6]<sup>ii</sup>
 Do the same grace unto us,
 10 And, though late, as it were about the eleventh hour, [v. 9] returning to Thee, graciously receive us,
 And save us.
 Who at the hour of the Supper didst will to institute the holy mysteries of Thy Body and Blood, [John 13:2]<sup>iii</sup> 15 Make us mindful and partakers of the same, never unto judgment, but unto remission of sin, and to obtain the bequests<sup>iv</sup> of the New Testament, [1 Cor. 11:29]<sup>v</sup>
 And save us.
 Who in the evening didst will to be taken from the cross, and in the tomb
 20 to be buried, [Mark 15:42]<sup>vi</sup>
 Take from us, and bury in Thy sepulchre, our sins, covering with good works whatsoever we have done amiss,
 And save us.
 25 Who, far into the night, by Thy breathing didst confer upon Thy Apostles the power both of remitting sin and of retaining, [John 20:22,23]<sup>vii</sup> Make us partakers of that power, but as to remission, not unto retaining, O Lord,<sup>viii</sup>

<sup>iv</sup> The bequests of the New Testament — legata Novi Testamenti, and the Latin says what English cannot. Testamentum is at once the covenant and the last will, so the Supper is the reading of a will and what it conveys are legata, legacies. English divided the word long ago: a testament is a book, a bequest is a legacy, and the legacies of the new covenant would sound like a figure of speech where the Latin is simply the law of wills. Our English keeps bequests rather than spending the double sense to make the covenant plain.

<sup>viii</sup> He asks for half of a power that was given whole. John xx. 23 confers both the remitting of sins and the retaining, and the prayer takes the one and expressly declines the other — sed quoad remissionem, ne ad retentionem, Domine. Nothing on the page argues the asymmetry; it is enacted rather than defended, as the eleventh-hour stanza above enacts its own and asks the wage of a full day after standing idle through all of it.

Qui media nocte excitasti David Prophetam Tuum, Psal. cxix. 62.

et Paulum Apostolum, ut laudarent Te, Act. xvi. 25.

Luc. xii. 46.

Fac nos omni die omnique hora paratos esse, ut adventum

Tuum præstolemur,

Et serva nos.

25 Qui emittis lucem, creas auroram, Ps. xliii. 3. [lxxiv. 16.]

exoriri facis solem super bonos et malos, Matt. v. 45.

Illumina cæcitatem mentium notitia veritatis, Eph. iv. 18.

Attolle super nos lumen vultus Tui, Psal. iv. 6.

Ut in lumine Tuo videamus lucem, Psal. xxxvi. 9.

Who at midnight didst rouse David Thy Prophet, [Ps. 119:62]<sup>i</sup> and Paul Thine Apostle, to praise Thee, [Acts 16:25]<sup>ii</sup> Give us also songs in the night, [Job 35:10]<sup>iii</sup>
 And upon our bed to be mindful of Thee, [Ps. 63:6]<sup>iv</sup>

5 And save us.

Who at midnight, that the Bridegroom should come,
 hast affirmed with Thine own mouth,
 Grant that the cry may ever sound in our ears,
 The Bridegroom cometh, [Matt. 25:6]<sup>v</sup>

10 That we may never be unprepared to meet Him,

And save us.

Who at cock-crow didst warn Thine Apostle, and madest him return unto repentance, [Matt. 26:74]<sup>vi</sup>

15 Grant us also, at the same warning, to do the like, that is, to go out and weep bitterly, [v. 75]
 over those things wherein we have sinned against Thee,

And save us.

Who, in the day we look not for, and the hour we know not,
 20 hast foretold that Thou wilt come to judgment, [Matt. 24:50 / Luke 12:46]<sup>vii</sup>
 Make us on every day and at every hour to be ready, that we may wait for Thy coming,

And save us.

Who sendest forth light, createst the dawn, [Ps. 43:3; 74:16]<sup>viii</sup>

25 makest the sun to rise on the good and the evil, [Matt. 5:45]<sup>ix</sup>

Enlighten the blindness of our minds with the knowledge of the truth, [Eph. 4:18]<sup>x</sup>

Lift up upon us the light of Thy countenance, [Ps. 4:6]<sup>xi</sup>

That in Thy light we may see light, [Ps. 36:9]<sup>xii</sup>

<sup>viii</sup> The office ends on a ladder of light, and it is built from two psalms the editor had to finish. The plate cites Ps. xliii. 3 for Qui emittis lucem, creas auroram, and only the first half is there — O send out thy light is Ps. xliii, but createst the dawn is Ps. lxxiv. 16, which the 1853 editor supplied in his own square brackets. From there the rungs mount without a break: light sent out, the sun on good and evil, the mind's blindness enlightened, the countenance lifted, light seen in light — and the last rung stands on the next page, and at the last, in the light of grace, the light of glory. The page-turn is the 1853's, not the ladder's.

 The Seal, [Eph. 4:30]<sup>xii</sup>
 The Earnest, [2 Cor. 5:5; 1:22]<sup>xiii</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Ps. cxxxvi. 25 — the psalm of his mercy endureth for ever, at the last mercy it names: food to all flesh · <sup>ii</sup> Ps. lxxi. 5 — an old man's prayer: thou art my trust from my youth · <sup>iii</sup> Acts xiv. 17 — Paul at Lystra: God filling our hearts with food and gladness · <sup>iv</sup> Heb. xiii. 9 — that the heart be stablished with grace, not with meats · <sup>v</sup> Ps. cii. 11 — my days are gone like a shadow · <sup>vi</sup> Eccles. xi. 8 — the Preacher to the young man: the days of darkness, for they shall be many · <sup>vii</sup> John ix. 4 — at the healing of the man born blind: the night cometh, when no man can work · <sup>viii</sup> Matt. xxv. 30 — the unprofitable servant, cast into outer darkness · <sup>ix</sup> Luke xxiv. 29 — Emmaus: abide with us, for it is toward evening · <sup>x</sup> John xiv. 16 — another Comforter, the ἄλλος the plate keeps in Greek · <sup>xi</sup> 1 John ii. 27 — the anointing which ye have received of him · <sup>xii</sup> Eph. iv. 30 — the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed · <sup>xiii</sup> 2 Cor. v. 5 — the earnest of the Spirit; and i. 22, the sealing and the earnest together

<sup>x</sup> ἄλλος is left standing in Greek because the word is the argument. John xiv. 16 promises another Comforter, and Greek has a word for another-of-the-same-kind as against another-of-a-different-sort; this is the first, and the whole doctrine of the Spirit as a second Advocate beside the one ascended rests on it. Andrewes prints the bare adjective in Greek beside the Latin title and lets it carry the weight, which is why the English apposes it rather than absorbing it into another. The four titles it heads — Paraclete, Unction, Seal, Earnest — are the New Testament's names for the Spirit set out as a schema, the same device as the Opera brace above, and the evening office ends not in petition but in a list.

THE PLEADING.

[I.] ON GOD'S PART.

[1.] The Nature of God.

- Because the Lord is full of compassion and mercy, long-suffering, and 5 of great goodness;
 He will not alway be chiding, neither keepeth He His anger for ever.
 He hath not dealt with us after our sins,
 nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.
 10 For as the heaven is high above the earth, so greatly hath He set
 His mercy over them that fear Him.
 As far as the east is from the west, so far hath He set from us our iniquities.
 Like as a father pitieth his children, so is the Lord merciful
 15 unto them that fear Him. [Ps. 103:8–12]<sup>i</sup> Because He is gracious, and gentle, and of great mercy unto all that call upon Him. [Ps. 86:5]<sup>ii</sup>
 The Lord is loving unto every man, and His mercy is over all His works. [Ps. 145:9]<sup>iii</sup>
 20 Because He delighteth in mercy. [Mic. 7:18]<sup>iv</sup>
 He is the Father of mercies. [2 Cor. 1:3]<sup>v</sup>
 He is Mercy itself. [Ps. 59:17]<sup>vi</sup>
 To whom { to shew mercy is His proper work, / to punish His strange and alien work.
 } [Isa. 28:21]<sup>vii</sup>

[2.] The Name of God.

- 25 Let the power of the Lord be magnified, according as He proclaimed, saying,

<sup>vii</sup> The plea's first ground is that punishment is not what God is for. Isaiah says God rises up ut faciat opus suum, alienum opus suum — to do his work, his strange work — and Andrewes braces the two halves so the asymmetry is visible on the page: shewing mercy is his own work, punishing a work strange and foreign to him. The whole Allegatio is a plea at law, and this is the opening argument: not that the prisoner deserves mercy, but that mercy is the judge's proper business and severity his borrowed one.

<sup>ii</sup> These are not devotions but GROUNDS, and the difference is the whole section. Heads [3]–[5] run through the Names of the Father, of Christ and of the Spirit — Lamb, Redeemer, Saviour, Mediator, Advocate, Intercessor, High Priest; Dove, Unction, Comforter — and each is entered as a reason why the plea must succeed. Two of them are forensic terms outright: an Advocate is counsel and an Intercessor files the motion. A reader who takes the list for a litany of titles will miss that Andrewes is arguing, and arguing from who his judge is rather than from anything he has to offer.

hoped in the Lord, and was confounded. [Ecclus. 2:11]<sup>vi</sup> For who ever continued in His commandments, and was forsaken? [v. 12]

15 THE PLEADING.

[II.] ON OUR PART, IN RELATION TO GOD.

[1.] The Work and Creation of His Hands.

Despise not the work of Thine own hands. [Ps. 138:8]<sup>vii</sup>
We are the clay, and Thou our potter, and we all are the work of 20 Thy hands. [Isa. 64:8]<sup>viii</sup>
Thou hatest nothing that Thou hast made. [Wisd. 11:25]<sup>ix</sup>

[2.] The Image of Thy Face. Blot it not out.

Let us make man after the image, and likeness of Ourselves. [Gen. 1:26]<sup>x</sup>

<sup>vi</sup> Syr. is Ecclesiasticus, and the gloss is the editor's. The plate cites the book as Syr. — for Sirach — and [i. e. Ecclus.] in square brackets is the 1853 editor supplying the familiar name, not Andrewes. The distinction is kept everywhere in this edition: printed in the plate, supplied by the editor, owed to a later scholar are three different weights of evidence, and only the first says anything about Andrewes.

[5.] A Member of the Body of Christ. Cut it not off.

Ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular. [1 Cor. 12:27]

Know ye not, that your bodies are the members of Christ? [1 Cor. 6:15]<sup>vii</sup>

15 Know ye not, that your members are the temple of the Holy Ghost, which is in you? [v. 19]<sup>i</sup>

[6.] A Possession in Christ.

I am Thine, O save me. [Ps. 119:94]<sup>viii</sup>

Behold, O Lord, for I am Thy servant,

20 I am Thy servant, and the son of Thine handmaid. [Ps. 116:16]<sup>ix</sup>

We all are Thy people. [Isa. 64:9]

Carest Thou not that we perish? Nay, Thou carest. [Mark 4:38]<sup>x</sup>

An unprofitable servant, yet a servant. [Luke 17:10]<sup>xi</sup>

A lost son, yet a son. [Luke 15:24]<sup>xii</sup>

<sup>x</sup> A reproach turned into a plea, and answered in the same line. The disciples' carest thou not that we perish? is spoken in fear and something like accusation; Andrewes takes the question over as a ground of pleading and then answers it himself — Imo pertinet, nay, Thou carest. He does the same with the storm at printed 286, where the verse serves the hour of prayer rather than the plea. The Preces uses a text more than once and never for the same thing twice.

<sup>xi</sup> The whole head turns on a concessive, twice. Servus inutilis, servus tamen. Filius perditus, tamen filius. An unprofitable servant, yet a servant; a lost son, yet a son. Nothing is claimed about the pleader's worth — the argument is that the relation survives the failure, which is why the two texts chosen are the ones where a servant is called useless and a son is called dead. The English keeps yet in both, because the plea is carried entirely by that word.

THE PLEADING.

[III.] ON OUR PART, AS CONCERNS OURSELVES.

[1.] The Weakness of Nature.

For I am weak. [Ps. 6:2]<sup>i</sup>

5 Remember how short my time is. [Ps. 89:47]<sup>ii</sup>

And He remembered that they were but flesh,

a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again. [Ps. 78:39]<sup>iii</sup>

For He knoweth whereof we are made,

He remembereth that we are but dust. [Ps. 103:14]<sup>iv</sup>

10 Man is but as grass:

his days, as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth. [v. 15]

For the wind goeth over it, and it is gone, and the place thereof shall know it no more. [v. 16]

[2.] The Misery of our Condition.

15 We are brought very low. [Ps. 79:8]<sup>v</sup>

And He saw when they were in adversity, and heard their prayer. [Ps. 106:44]<sup>vi</sup>

[IV.] ON OUR PART, AS CONCERNS OUR DUTY.

[1.] As penitent.

20 Because a broken and a contrite heart,

O God, Thou wilt not despise. [Ps. 51:17]<sup>vii</sup>

For I will confess my wickedness, and be sorry for my sin. [Ps. 38:18]<sup>viii</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Ps. vi. 2 — the first of the penitential psalms: have mercy upon me, for I am weak · <sup>ii</sup> Ps. lxxxix. 47 — remember how short my time is · <sup>iii</sup> Ps. lxxviii. 39 — of the generation in the wilderness, that God spared them · <sup>iv</sup> Ps. ciii. 14 — he knoweth whereof we are made · <sup>v</sup> Ps. lxxix. 8 — after the temple was defiled: we are brought very low · <sup>vi</sup> Ps. cvi. 44 — the psalm of Israel's repeated rebellions, at the point where He hears anyway · <sup>vii</sup> Ps. li. 17 — David's Miserere: a broken and a contrite heart · <sup>viii</sup> Ps. xxxviii. 18 — I will declare mine iniquity; I will be sorry for my sin

<sup>ii</sup> The same Vulgate line as printed 34, doing different work. There Memorare quæ mea substantia was stacked against Substantia mea apud te est four lines above it, and the whole join depended on the shared substantia — a pun the Authorised Version dissolves, rendering one my hope is in thee and the other remember how short my time is. Here the verse stands alone, pleading the weakness of nature, and there is no join to protect; so the English can be plain where at 34 it had to keep the word.

<sup>iii</sup> A counter-instance worth keeping, on the question of which Psalter was to hand. Printed 433's two references are right only on the Prayer Book's numbering, and nine more places in the volume count with the BCP against the AV. This is not one of them: a wind that passeth away is verse 39 in the Authorised Version and 40 in the Prayer Book Psalter, and the plate prints 39. The evidence is real but it is not uniform: no single Psalter accounts for the way this volume numbers.

Quousque irasceris super orationem servi Tui? [Ps. lxxx. 4.]

[2.] As suppliant.

For I have called daily upon Thee. [Ps. 86:3]<sup>i</sup>

How long wilt Thou be angry at the prayer of Thy servant? [Ps. 80:4]<sup>ii</sup>

I forgave thee all that debt, because thou desiredst Me. [Matt. 18:32]<sup>iii</sup>

5 [3.] Because we forgive.<sup>iv</sup>

Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven; [Luke 6:37]<sup>v</sup>

And when ye stand praying, forgive,

if ye have aught against any, that also your Father, which is in heaven, may forgive you

10 your trespasses. [Mark 11:25]<sup>vi</sup>

But if ye forgive not, neither will your Father, which is in

[V.] ON THE PART OF THE EVIL THAT WOULD FOLLOW.

[1.] No profit [to God].

What profit is there in my blood, when

I go down to corruption?

25 Shall the dust give thanks unto Thee,

<sup>i</sup> Ps. lxxxvi. 3 — I cry unto thee daily · <sup>ii</sup> Ps. lxxx. 4 — how long wilt thou be angry at the prayer of thy servant? ·

<sup>ii</sup> The plate reads servi Tui, and that is the Vulgate against both English Psalters. Ps. lxxx. 4 has the prayer of thy people in the Authorised Version and in the Prayer Book alike; the Vulgate has orationem servi tui, thy servant's prayer, and Andrewes takes it. The difference is not decorative — the whole Allegatio is one man pleading in the first person, and a plea about thy people would loosen it at the point where it needs to be tightest. The English keeps thy servant, which is CONVENTIONS §9 yielding where he reaches past the received Psalter.

<sup>iv</sup> The only ground in the plea that rests on something the pleader has done — and he argues the other side of it himself. Every other head pleads God's nature, God's names, God's promise, or the pleader's weakness. This one pleads a condition met: because we forgive. And the next lines print the reverse without softening it — but if ye forgive not, neither will your Father forgive you. A plea at law that enters the strongest objection to its own case is doing something a devotion would not; the head is not a claim of merit but a reminder of terms.

aut annuntiabit veritatem Tuam? Psal. xxx. 9.

Quoniam non est in morte, qui memor sit Tui; in inferno, qui confitebitur Tibi. Psal. vi. 5.

Nunquid mortuis facies mirabilia?

5 Aut mortui suscitabuntur, et confitebuntur Tibi? Psal. lxxxviii. 10.

Nunquid narrabit aliquis in sepulcro misericordiam Tuam, et veritatem in pulvere? Vers. 11.

Nunquid cognoscentur in tenebris mirabilia Tua, et iustitia Tua in terra oblivionis? Vers. 12.

10 Quia non infernus confitebitur Tibi, neque mors laudabit
Te. Non expectabunt, qui descendunt in lacum, veritatem Tuam. Is. xxxviii. 18.

Vivens, vivens, ipse confitebitur Tibi. Vers. 19.

15 [2.] Frustra.

Nunquid vane constituisti omnes filios hominum? Psal. lxxxix. 46.

Ne intres in iudicium cum servo Tuo, quia non iustificabitur in conspectu Tuo omnis vivens. Psal. cxliiii. 2.

20 Si iniquitates observaveris, Domine, Domine, quis sustinebit? Psal. cxxx. 3.

Si voluerit contendere cum eo, non poterit ei respondere unum pro mille. Job. ix. 3.

[3.] Triumphus hostium.

25 Ne des hæreditatem Tuam in opprobrium, ut dominantur ei Nationes. Quare dicunt in populis, Ubi est Deus eorum? [Joel. ii. 17.]

or declare Thy truth? [Ps. 30:9]<sup>i</sup>

For in death no man remembereth Thee; in the grave who shall give Thee thanks? [Ps. 6:5]<sup>ii</sup>

Wilt Thou shew wonders to the dead?

5 Or shall the dead rise up again, and praise Thee? [Ps. 88:10]<sup>iii</sup>

Shall any tell of Thy loving-kindness in the grave, or of Thy truth

in destruction? [v. 11]

Shall Thy wondrous works be known in the dark, and Thy

10 righteousness in the land where all things are forgotten? [v. 12]

For the grave cannot praise Thee, neither shall death celebrate Thee. They that go down into the pit cannot hope for Thy truth. [Isa. 38:18]<sup>iv</sup>

The living, the living, he shall praise Thee. [v. 19]

15 [2.] In vain.

Hast Thou made all men for nought? [Ps. 89:46]<sup>v</sup>

Enter not into judgment with Thy servant, for in Thy sight shall no man living be justified. [Ps. 143:2]<sup>vi</sup>

20 If Thou, Lord, wilt be extreme to mark iniquities, O Lord, who may abide it? [Ps. 130:3]<sup>vii</sup>

If He will contend with him, he cannot answer Him one of a thousand. [Job 9:3]<sup>viii</sup>

[3.] The Triumph of the Enemy.

25 Give not Thine heritage to reproach, that the heathen should rule over it. Wherefore should they say among the peoples,

Where is now their God? [Joel 2:17]<sup>ix</sup>

<sup>vii</sup> The volume proves another of its own misprints, and this is the fourth time. Here Psal. cxxx. 3 is cited correctly for if thou shouldest mark iniquities; at printed 40 the same verse is cited Psal. cxxx. 30, in a psalm that has eight verses. Both stand as printed. The pattern is now well established — printed 25 confirming the reading at 409, §17 confirming Job. xiv. 4 against Part III's xiv. 14, §37 confirming Is. xxxviii. 15 — and it is worth more than any conjecture, because the corroborating witness is the book itself.

Memor esto hujus: Inimicus improperavit Domino, et populus insipiens incitavit nomen Tuum. Psal. lxxiv. 18.

Superbia eorum qui Te oderunt ascendit semper. Ver. 23.

5 Dicent Ægyptii; Callide eduxit eos, Exod. xxxii. 12.
ut interficeret in montibus et deleret e terra.

Dicent Chananæi; Non poterat introducere populum in terram pro qua juraverat, idcirco occidit eos in solitudine. [Num. xiv. 16.]

10 [VI.] EX PARTE CONSEQUENTIS BONI.

[1.] Gloria nominis.

Propter gloriam nominis Tui, Domine, Libera nos. Psal. lxxix. 9.

Nos populus Tuus confitebimur Tibi in sæculum:

15 In generationem et generationem annunciabimus laudem Tuam. Vers. 13.

[2.] Conversio aliorum.

Docebo iniquos vias Tuas, et impii ad Te convertentur. Psal. li. 13.

20 [3.] Exemplum.

Sed ideo misericordiam consecutus sum, ut in me primo ostenderet Christus Jesus omnem patientiam ad in-formationem eorum qui credituri sunt Illi in vitam æternam. 1 Tim. i. 16.

Remember this: the enemy hath reproached
the Lord, and the foolish people hath blasphemed

Thy Name. [Ps. 74:18]<sup>i</sup>

The pride of them that hate Thee increaseth ever more and more. [v. 23]

5 The Egyptians shall say: For mischief did He bring them out, [Exod. 32:12]<sup>ii</sup> to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the earth.

The Canaanites shall say: He was not able to bring the people into the land which He sware unto them, therefore He slew them in the wilderness. [Num. 14:16]<sup>iii</sup>

10 [VI.] ON THE PART OF THE GOOD THAT WOULD FOLLOW.

[1.] The Glory of Thy Name.

For the glory of Thy Name, O Lord,

Deliver us. [Ps. 79:9]<sup>iv</sup>

So we that are Thy people will give Thee thanks for ever:

15 From generation to generation
we will shew forth Thy praise. [v. 13]

[2.] The Conversion of Others.

Then shall I teach the wicked Thy ways, and the ungodly shall be converted unto Thee. [Ps. 51:13]<sup>v</sup>

20 [3.] The Example.

But for this cause I obtained mercy, that in me first

Jesus Christ might shew forth all longsuffering, for a pattern to them which should hereafter believe on Him unto life everlasting. [1 Tim. 1:16]<sup>vi</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Ps. lxxiv. 18 — the psalm written after the sanctuary was burned · <sup>ii</sup> Exod. xxxii. 12 — Moses after the golden calf: wherefore should the Egyptians speak? · <sup>iii</sup> Num. xiv. 16 — Moses after the spies, foretelling what the nations will say · <sup>iv</sup> Ps. lxxix. 9 — help us, O God of our salvation, for the glory of thy name · <sup>v</sup> Ps. li. 13 — David's Miserere, at its turn outward: then will I teach transgressors thy ways · <sup>vi</sup> 1 Tim. i. 16 — Paul on his own case: a pattern to them which should hereafter believe

<sup>ii</sup> Two pleas of Moses, and they are the Bible's own precedent for this whole argument. After the golden calf and again after the spies, Moses turns God's threat aside not by defending Israel but by asking what Egypt and Canaan will say — that God brought them out for mischief, or could not bring them in. Andrewes sets the two side by side and lets them do the same work here: the evil that would follow is not the pleader's ruin but the reproach of the Name. It is the hinge of the Allegatio, and the next head turns the same argument over — the good that would follow, thanksgiving, the conversion of others, and a pattern for those who come after.

[4.] Ipsē Deus.

Deleo iniquitates propter Me. Is. xliiii. 25.

Exaudi, attende, ne moreris propter Temetipsum. Dan. ix. 19.

5 Ipse quem proposuit Deus propitiationem. Rom. iii. 25.

Respice in faciem Christi Tui. Psal. lxxxiv. 9.

Non avertas faciem Christi Tui. Psal. cxxxii. 10.

[5.] Ex genere.

Miserere mei, Fili David. Matt. xv. 22.

10 Et dixit David Shemei, Non morieris, per Ipsum. Jo. iii. 17.

CONFESSIO LAUDIS.

Excellentiam Majestatis.

Clarifica Me, Pater, apud Teipsum, claritate quam habui, priusquam mundus esset. Jo. xvii. 5.

Melchisedech erat Sacerdos Dei altissimi. Gen. xiv. 18.

[4.] God Himself.

I, even I, am He that blotteth out iniquities for Mine own sake. [Isa. 43:25]<sup>i</sup>

Hear, attend, defer not,

for Thine own sake. [Dan. 9:19]<sup>ii</sup>

5 Even He whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation. [Rom. 3:25]<sup>iii</sup>

Look upon the face of Thine Anointed. [Ps. 84:9]<sup>iv</sup>

Turn not away the face of Thine Anointed. [Ps. 132:10]<sup>v</sup>

[5.] From kindred.

Have mercy on me, O Thou Son of David. [Matt. 15:22]<sup>vi</sup>

10 And David said unto Shimei, Thou shalt not die, and sware unto him. [2 Sam. 19:23]<sup>vii</sup>

[6.] From office.

The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me, because He hath anointed Me. [Isa. 61:1]<sup>viii</sup>

The Lord hath sent Me to preach good tidings unto the meek,

15 to heal the broken-hearted. [Luke 4:18]<sup>ix</sup>

I came to call sinners. [Matt. 9:13]<sup>x</sup>

God sent His Son, that the world through Him might be saved. [John 3:17]<sup>xi</sup>

THE CONFESSION OF PRAISE.

20 FOR

Glorify Me, O Father, with Thine own self, with the glory which I had with Thee before the world was. [John 17:5]<sup>xii</sup>

Melchizedek was the priest of the most high God. [Gen. 14:18]<sup>xiii</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Isa. xliii. 25 — I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake · <sup>ii</sup> Dan. ix. 19 — Daniel: defer not, for thine own sake, O my God · <sup>iii</sup> Rom. iii. 25 — whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood · <sup>iv</sup> Ps. lxxxiv. 9 — behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed · <sup>v</sup> Ps. cxxxii. 10 — turn not away the face of thine anointed · <sup>vi</sup> Matt. xv. 22 — the woman of Canaan, crying after Him · <sup>vii</sup> 2 Sam. xix. 23 — David sparing Shimei on the day he came back over Jordan · <sup>viii</sup> Isa. lxi. 1 — the text Christ read at Nazareth · <sup>ix</sup> Luke iv. 18 — and read it of Himself · <sup>x</sup> Matt. ix. 13 — at Matthew's table: I came not to call the righteous, but sinners · <sup>xi</sup> John iii. 17 — God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world · <sup>xii</sup> John xvii. 5 — the high-priestly prayer, before the Passion · <sup>xiii</sup> Gen. xiv. 18 — Melchizedek, priest of the most high God

<sup>vii</sup> From kindred: the plea addresses the Son of David, and then cites what David did. The Canaanite woman's have mercy on me, O thou Son of David names the kinship; the next text is David himself sparing Shimei — the man who had cursed him — on the day he came back over Jordan. The argument is that the son will do as the father did, and it is made entirely by putting the two verses next to each other. The head that follows, from office, drops kinship for job description: the Spirit is upon Him because He was anointed to heal the broken-hearted, so mercy is not a favour asked but the work He was sent to do.

Quia excelso excelsior est alius. Eccles. v. 8.

Æternitatem.

Invoca nomen Dei æterni. Gen. xxi. 33.

5 Omnipræsentiam.

Nunquid non cœlum et terram impleo?
dicit Dominus. Jer. xxiii. 24.

Omniscientiam.

Quo ibo a Spiritu Tuo, et quo a facie Tua fugiam. Ps. cxxxix. 7.

10 Si ascendero in cœlum, Tu illic;
Si descendero ad infernum, ades; etc. [Vers. 8.]

Tu omnia nosti, Jo. xxi. 17.

Quia Tu nosti solus cor omnium filiorum hominum, 1 Reg. viii. 39.

Omnipotentiam.

15 Non est impossibile apud Deum omne verbum. Luc. i. 37.

Ego Deus omnipotens. Gen. xvii. 1.

Altitudinem Sapientiæ.

O altitudo divitiarum scientiæ et sapientiæ Dei! quam incomprehensibilia sunt judicia Ejus, et investigabiles 20 viæ Ejus? Rom. xi. 33.

Veritas Domini manet in æternum. Psal. cxvii. 2.

[His] Highness.

Because higher than the highest there is Another. [Eccles. 5:8]<sup>i</sup>

[His] Eternity.

He called on the name of the everlasting God. [Gen. 21:33]<sup>ii</sup>

5 [His] Omnipresence.

Do not I fill heaven and earth?
saith the Lord. [Jer. 23:24]<sup>iii</sup>

[His] Omniscience.

Whither shall I go from Thy Spirit, or whither shall I flee from Thy presence? [Ps.
139:7]<sup>iv</sup>

10 If I climb up into heaven, Thou art there;
If I go down to hell, Thou art present also; etc. [v. 8]

Thou knowest all things, [John 21:17]<sup>v</sup>

For Thou, even Thou only, knowest the hearts of all the children of men, [1 Kings 8:39]<sup>vi</sup>

[His] Omnipotence.

15 With God nothing shall be impossible. [Luke 1:37]<sup>vii</sup>
I am the Almighty God. [Gen. 17:1]<sup>viii</sup>

The Depth of [His] Wisdom.

O the depth of the riches both of the knowledge and wisdom of God! how unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways

20 past finding out! [Rom. 11:33]<sup>ix</sup>

[His] Unshaken Truth.

The truth of the Lord endureth for ever. [Ps. 117:2]<sup>x</sup>

<sup>ii</sup> A schoolman's list of the attributes, proved entirely out of stories. Eternity, omnipresence, omniscience, omnipotence, the depth of wisdom, unshaken truth — the headings could stand in any scholastic handbook, and not one of them is proved by a definition. Eternity is Abraham planting a grove at Beersheba; omniscience is Peter on the shore, asked a third time; omnipotence is Gabriel in a house in Nazareth; the God who knows all hearts is quoted from Solomon's prayer. The Confessio argues like a schoolman and evidences like a preacher.

<sup>x</sup> The same numeral means two different psalms in this volume, and this page proves it. Here Psal. cxvii. 2 is right on the Authorised Version's numbering — Ps. cxvii has two verses and this is the second. At printed 274 the plate cites Ps. cxvii. 25 for the Hosanna, which is impossible on that numbering and can only be the Vulgate's cxvii, our cxviii. Neither is an error; the 1853 simply does not hold to one Psalter's numbers, which is why every note in this edition that touches a psalm number says which system it means, and why the plate's own figure is never altered.

Cœlum et terra transibunt,

Or despisest thou the riches of His forbearance and longsuffering? [Rom. 2:4]<sup>viii</sup> 15 Merciful.

But He, being merciful, forgave their iniquity, and destroyed them not. [Ps. 78:38]<sup>ix</sup>

Unwilling to punish.

What shall I do unto thee, O Ephraim?

20 what shall I do unto thee, O Judah? [Hos. 6:4]<sup>x</sup>

Thou didst deliver them many times, and passedst over them many years: [Neh. 9:28,30]<sup>xi</sup>

And in Thy manifold mercies,

<sup>iii</sup> A verse about drowning, read of mercy. Abyssus abyssum invocat — deep calleth unto deep — is spoken in Ps. xlii by a man going under: the waterspouts, the waves and billows passing over him. Andrewes sets it beneath the heading The Fountain, the Ocean, the Deep of mercy, so the two deeps become the depth of misery and the depth of pity, each calling to the other. The reading is not in the psalm and he does not argue for it; he places the verse and lets the heading do the work, which is how most of this catalogue proceeds.

Non secundum peccata nostra facit nobis, neque secundum iniquitates nostras retribuit nobis. Psal. ciii. 10.

[His] Propitiation.<sup>viii</sup>

Bring forth quickly the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand; and bring hither the fatted

- 20 calf, etc. [Luke 15:22,23]<sup>ix</sup>

Χρηστός — Kind.<sup>x</sup>

Because He Himself is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil. [Luke 6:35]<sup>xi</sup>

<sup>viii</sup> Propitiation is proved by a parable, and by the part of it where nobody speaks. The heading is the most technical word in the catalogue, and under it Andrewes sets not a sacrifice but the best robe, the ring, the fatted calf — the father's instructions to his servants, given while the son is still reciting the confession he had prepared. What the heading calls propitiation the text shows as an interruption.

<sup>x</sup> Χρηστός is left in Greek because the word is one letter from the Name. Chrestos means kind, useful, serviceable, and it stands so close to Christos that ancient writers inside and outside the Church confused the two on purpose and by accident. Andrewes prints the Greek as the heading and lets the Latin gloss follow; the English apposes it rather than translating it away, because Kind alone loses the reason this attribute is set among the names of Christ at all.

- [His] Angels, that bear the charge of men, [Heb. 1:14]<sup>vi</sup> [His] Archangels, that announce the greater things by illumination,
 With the voice of the archangel, [1 Thess. 4:16]<sup>vii</sup> 20 [His] Virtues, that work wonders, the powers being made subject unto Him, [1 Pet. 3:22]<sup>viii</sup> [His] Powers, that hold off the demons by command,
 [His] Principalities, made perfect in governance,
 [His] Dominions, that do good by largess,
 25 [His] Thrones, that judge by session,
     By Him were all things created, whether thrones,

<sup>iii</sup> Fourteen works of mercy in seven pairs, set in two columns so that each is answered across the page. The blind enlightened and the prisoners loosed; the naked clothed and the fallen raised; the scattered gathered and the living fed; the hungry sustained and the dead quickened. Every one is a scriptural participle with its own reference, and the whole table is a single sentence still governed by the Propter four pages back — these are not petitions but reasons for praise. The English keeps the two columns and the references the plate prints inside them, so the tags below add nothing where the page already says everything.

<sup>v</sup> The confession turns here from what God does to whom He does it by. Confessio in Angelis — God glorified in His angels — and the nine orders follow in rank, each with its office: angels bear the charge of men, archangels announce the greater things, virtues work wonders, powers hold off the demons, principalities govern, dominions give, thrones judge. The governing in is the whole point and is kept through every heading; the orders are not praised, God is praised in them.

<sup>i</sup> Col. i. 16 — thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers . <sup>iii</sup> Gen. iii. 24 — the cherubim set at the east of the garden, with the flaming sword . <sup>iv</sup> Isa. vi. 2 — the year that king Uzziah died, in the temple

<sup>ii</sup> Cherubim for knowledge, Seraphim for love, and the etymologies are the argument. Cherub was read as fulness of knowledge and seraph as the burning one, so the two highest orders stand for the two things a soul wants — to know and to love — and the prayer that follows asks not to admire them but to be joined unto their choirs. The three proof-texts are chosen for the same reason: Paul names the ranks, Genesis shows a cherub set to guard, Isaiah shows a seraph burning above the throne.

<sup>v</sup> A double column: the order, and what that order gives. Patriarchs and Faith, Prophets and Hope, Apostles and Labours, Martyrs and Blood, Confessors and Zeal, Doctors and Studies — and where the pairing fails the plate leaves the right-hand column empty rather than inventing (the Evangelists and the Ascetics have no gift set against them, and the Therapeutæ share the Tears with the line above by a brace). The empty cells are the 1853's and are kept. Therapeutæ are not physicians: the name is Philo's, for the contemplative ascetics of Egypt, and Andrewes sets them beside the Ascetics as a distinct order.

For { our begetting, / our nurture, /

<sup>i</sup> From here the section is one sentence, and the notes below it thin out for that reason. Confessio Laudum is a single catalogue governed by the standing Pro — For the Light, For the forming of Man, For the promise of the Seed — running from the first day of creation to the nurture of this particular man without a break in the grammar. The plate prints its own reference inside each cell of each brace and our English keeps them there, so a scripture band beneath would only repeat what the reader has already got, line for line. An empty foot on these leaves is the right outcome, not a gap.

<sup>ii</sup> The forming of man is given a brace inside the brace, and the inner one is the point. Everything else in the list is a single item; man's making alone divides into habita deliberatione and manibus suis — of set counsel, and with His own hands. The counsel is let us make man and the hands are the potter's, and Andrewes separates them because the one answers why and the other how. The cell that closes the brace has no reference at all and needs none: Peccante, non tamen derelicto — having sinned, yet not forsaken.

<sup>iii</sup> Natural knowledge and revealed are set in one brace as two gifts of one giver. The promise of the Seed is Gen. iii. 15, the first promise of the gospel; beside it stand that which may be known of God and the work of the law written in their hearts, both from the opening chapters of Romans, where they belong to the argument that leaves the heathen without excuse. Andrewes takes them out of that argument and enters them as mercies, then adds the oracles of the Prophets, the melody of the Psalms, the prudence of the Sentences and the experience of the Histories — so the ways God has made Himself known run from conscience to poetry without a rank among them.

<sup>i</sup> The technical words of the Incarnation, and two of them will stop a reader. Exinanitio is the Latin for St Paul's κένωσις — Christ emptied himself, Phil. ii. 7 — and it is not self-abasement in general but a specific act, the laying aside of what was His by right. Apprehensio seminis Abraham is Heb. ii. 16: He took hold not of angels but of the seed of Abraham, and apprehensio keeps the grasping in it, the deliberate seizing of one nature and not another. Between them stands mysterium magnum pietatis, the great mystery of godliness, which is 1 Tim. iii. 16's own name for the whole. The English keeps the technical weight rather than smoothing it, because the brace is a list of doctrines, not of feelings.

<sup>ii</sup> Two braces read across each other, and the second dates the first. For all the good that He did and the evil that He suffered — and then, in its own brace beside it, from the manger even to the cross. The construction is not decoration: it says that the doing and the suffering are coextensive with the whole life, so there is no stretch of it that was not both. This is the Preces' commonest device and its most easily lost — a brace answering a brace across the measure, which reads as two lists on a page and as one sentence in the mouth.

<sup>iii</sup> The economy in order, and the last three items are not events but dispositions. The catalogue walks the infancy in sequence — Incarnation, poor Nativity, the manger, the Circumcision that subjected Him to the Law, the first-fruits of the blood, the lovable Name of JESUS, the showing to sinners of the Gentiles, the Presentation, the flight into Egypt — and then, numbered 1, 2, 3, it ends on eagerness to hear, avidity to seek, humility in obeying his parents, all resting on the single verse that says He was subject unto them. A list of what God did becomes a list of what a boy was like, and the transition is unmarked.

<sup>vi</sup> Ten kinds of speech and act, in a column of pairs. Sermons and homilies, colloquies and diatribes, intercessions and prayers — then, without a partner, examples, signs, mysteries, keys. The pairing is by register: public preaching against household teaching, conversation against sustained argument, pleading for others against praying. Diatriba here is the schools' word for a discourse worked out at length, not invective. And the four unpaired items rise from what He said to what He did, showed, instituted and gave away — Claves, the keys, being the last thing on the list because it is the thing He handed over.

<sup>i</sup> Six parables chosen on one principle. The two debtors, the man half-dead, the Publican, the servant owing ten thousand talents, the lost sheep, the eleventh-hour labourer — every one turns on somebody who cannot pay, cannot walk, cannot plead, or came too late. The brace is not a survey of the parables but an argument assembled out of them, and it is the same argument the Allegatio made at printed 288 from the eleventh hour.

<sup>ii</sup> The Sayings are all one saying, and they are stacked so the negative turns into the positive. Not to condemn the world — not to judge it — not to call the righteous — not to destroy men's lives: four refusals in a row, each followed by what He came for instead, until the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost arrives without a negative at all and the series can end on the ransom. Andrewes prints no comment and needs none; the order does the work. A later pass that ties the repetitions of veni non... sed destroys the figure, exactly as tidying the divided Psalm xci at printed 431/433 would.

For the death of Christ,

1. His obedience unto the death of the cross, [Phil. 2:8]<sup>viii</sup>
 25 2. His constraining desire. [Luke 22:15]<sup>ix</sup>
 For the things He suffered in { Gethsemane, [Matt. 26:36] / Gabbatha, [John 19:13] /
     Golgotha, [v. 17] }<sup>x</sup>

<sup>v</sup> A sneer is made the title of the catalogue, and it is printed in Greek to keep it a quotation. Οὗτος δέχεται ἁμαρτωλούς — this man receiveth sinners — was said against Him by the Pharisees and scribes, murmuring. Andrewes sets it at the head of a list of everyone He received, so the complaint becomes the description, and he prints the Greek and the Latin as separate lines so both stand. That is CONVENTIONS §27's rule for a separated doublet, not §41's: the two lines are not a gloss for the reader but the same charge twice, and the English renders both.

<sup>i</sup> Three words for the cross, in three languages, read across the page — and the first is a word about childbirth. Dolor, Pudor, Maledictum stand against ὠδινες, Αἰσχύνη, Κατάρπα, each with its own proof-text: Acts for the pang, Hebrews for the shame, Galatians for the curse. ὠδινες are birth-pangs, the word for a woman in labour, and Peter uses it at Pentecost of the pains of death that could not hold Him. So the first of the three is not simply pain but travail — pain with an issue — which is why it can stand at the head of a catalogue that ends in resurrection. The English keeps Pang and the Greek beside it rather than settling for sorrow.

<sup>iii</sup> A wrong chapter, and it is the 1853 editor's, not Andrewes'. The square brackets are his mark for a reference he supplied, and [Mar. xiii. 33.] sends the reader to take ye heed, watch and pray. The words above it are Tædere and Pavere, and those two are the Vulgate of Mark xiv. 33 — coepit pavere et tædere — verbatim and in that order, so the verse is not in doubt and only the figure is. The following [Ibid.] inherits the error. Kept as printed, like every other, and named here because a reader who checks it will find nothing.

hold Thou my hands.

1. That [He was given up] to buffetings (ραπίσματα), [Mark 14:65]<sup>iii</sup>
  1. to be smitten with the palm before Annas, [John 18:22]
  2. to be accused before Caiaphas, [v. 24]
  3. to be assailed by false witnesses, [Matt. 26:59]
  4. to be condemned for blasphemy, [vv. 55, 56]<sup>iv</sup>
  5. to be manifoldly mocked, [Luke 23:35]
  6. to be outraged with contumelies by the servants, [Mark 14:65]
  7. to be beaten with fists, [Matt. 26:67]
  8. to be struck with palms, [Ibid.]
  9. to have His face veiled, [Mark 14:65]
  10. to be cudgelled, [Ibid.]
  11. to be spit upon, [Matt. 26:67]
  12. to be made a sport, [Luke 22:63]
  13. to be blasphemed. [v. 64]

<sup>ii</sup> The catalogue stops being a catalogue for four lines, and prays. Qui coram iudice tacuisti, contine os meum — Thou who wast silent before the judge, hold Thou my mouth; Thou who wast willing to be bound, hold Thou my hands. Each suffering is turned into a petition for the member that suffered it, so the silence answers the tongue and the cords answer the hands, and then the numbering resumes as though nothing had happened. This is how the whole section works and why it must not be levelled into a list: it is a meditation that keeps breaking into prayer at the point where the detail becomes unbearable.

<sup>i</sup> This catalogue also stands in PART I at printed 154, in the same Latin words — Caput spinis coronatum · Oculi lacrymis perfusi · Aures convitiis oppletæ · Os felle et aceto potum · Cor lancea perforatum — phrase for phrase, same order, same proof-texts. What differs is the grammar, and with it the frame: Part I sets the list ACCUSATIVE under a brace cued Per, one long phrase pleading the Passion; here it is NOMINATIVE and numbered, an inventory of what was suffered. This is a Part I / Part II recension parallel, the first recorded — the known ones run between Parts II and III. Neither may be conformed: Part II splits Manus et pedes perfossos in two and adds the knees and the breast; Part I keeps the bloody sweat at the head and Part II drops it. The divergences are the evidence.

<sup>iv</sup> A second column of one word each, naming what the suffering was. Against to be stripped naked stands Shame, against to be stretched on the cross stands Pain — the same device as the Dolor · Pudor · Maledictum of printed 310, and as the orders-and-gifts columns at 304. The 1853 sets these hard right and they are not glosses on the Latin but a separate register running down the page, so they must survive into both layers; dropped, the catalogue loses the only place where it says what it is doing.

<sup>v</sup> The nails are evidenced from AFTER the resurrection, and that is the method of the whole catalogue. No Gospel narrates the act of nailing; so for clavis configi Andrewes cites John xx. 25 — the print of the nails, as Thomas demanded to see it eight days later — and for the hands and feet dug through he cites a psalm. The same thing was noted at printed 154, where the Passion is assembled out of five books and not one of them a Gospel account of it. He is not narrating the Passion; he is proving it, and a text that shows the scar serves better than one that would only describe the blow.

9. to be called a deceiver (Πλάων), [Ibid.]
- 5 10. torments unknown (Ἀγνώστοι βάσανοι).<sup>iv</sup>

By Thy pains, which I unworthy here recall, deliver my soul from the pains of hell.

The Seven Last Words of Christ, { 1. Father, forgive them. [Luke 23:34] / 2. Woman, behold thy son! [John 19:26] / 3. To day shalt thou be with Me in paradise. [Luke 23:43] / 4. Eli, Eli (My God, my God). [Matt. 27:46] / 5. I thirst. [John 19:28] / 6. It is finished. [v. 30] / 7. Father, into thy hands, etc. [Luke 23:46] }

1. Thou who wouldest have Thy glorious head wounded,<sup>v</sup>
10 forgive through it whatsoever I have offended by the senses of my head.
2. Thou who wouldest have Thy sacred hands dug through,
forgive through them
whatsoever [I have offended] by unlawful touch, 15 by unlawful working.
3. Thou who wouldest have Thy precious side pierced,
forgive through it whatsoever [I have offended] by unlawful thoughts in the heat of concupiscence.
- 20 4. Thou who wouldest have Thy blessed feet fastened, forgive through them
whatsoever [I have offended] by the going of feet swift to evil.

<sup>i</sup> The run closing here, printed 310–314, is a FOUR-GOSPEL HARMONY and the plate marks nearly every verse — which is why those leaves could not be tagged one by one; 312 alone carries twenty-five references. The four narratives are walked forward in step — Matthew xxvi into xxvii, John xviii into xix, Luke xxii into xxiii, Mark xiv into xv. He is not following one evangelist and supplementing him; he is reading all four abreast.

<sup>iv</sup> The list of sufferings ends on the one item that has no proof-text, and that is deliberate. Ἀγνώστοι βάσανοι — torments unknown — is entered as number 10 with no reference at all, in a catalogue where every other item down forty numbers carries one. Andrewes has assembled the whole Passion out of Scripture and then closes the account by admitting that Scripture does not hold it: what was recorded is finite, what was suffered is not. The blank is the point; nothing may be supplied there, and the Greek is kept because he reaches for it exactly where the Latin catalogue runs out.

<sup>v</sup> The wounds are then made to forgive, member for member. The glorious head wounded forgives what was offended by the senses of the head; the hands dug through forgive unlawful touch and unlawful working; the side pierced forgives the thoughts of the heart; the feet fastened forgive the going of feet swift to evil. The Passion catalogue has become a confession keyed to the same anatomy, part answering part — the fuller form of the device that broke out for four lines at printed 311, where the silence before the judge answered the mouth and the cords answered the hands.

2. Potens resurrectio. [Phil. iii. 10.]
- 25 3. Apparitio { 1. Magdalene, [Mar. xvi. 9.] / 2. Mulieribus, [Matt. xxviii. 9.]

5. Thou who wouldest have Thy whole body stretched out, by the office of all my members.

- 5 And I too, O Lord, am wounded in soul;<sup>i</sup>

 and by Thy [wounds] heal mine!
1. The precious death,
 10 2. the opening of the side,
 3. the streams of blood and water,
 4. the begging of the body,
 5. the taking down from the cross,
 6. the burial in another's tomb, 15 7. the three days'.
- By all these I put Thee in remembrance, and I pray Thee.<sup>ii</sup>
 I beseech Thee, that Thou wouldest vouchsafe to offer for me all these unto Thy Father.
 All the bitternesses which Thou didst suffer, 20 the Love above all wherewith Thou didst suffer.

The Transfiguring.

1. The triumph and leading in procession of the principalities and powers of darkness in Himself. [Col. 2:15]<sup>iii</sup>
 2. The mighty resurrection. [Phil. 3:10]<sup>iv</sup>
 25 3. His appearing { 1. to Magdalene, [Mark 16:9] / 2. to the women, [Matt. 28:9]

<sup>iii</sup> Col. ii. 15 — having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them · <sup>iv</sup> Phil. iii. 10 — that I may know him, and the power of his resurrection

<sup>i</sup> The prayer turns and the wounds change owner. Through five members the wounded body has been forgiving; then Et ego, Domine, vulneratus sum animâ — and I too am wounded, in soul — and the same four dimensions Paul used of the love of Christ are set to measure the injury instead: the multitude, the length, the breadth, the depth of them, from the head even to the heel. The last clause is Isaiah's description of Israel, from the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it, turned on the man praying. It ends et per Tua sana mea — by Thy wounds heal mine — which is the whole section in four words, and the reason the anatomy had to be kept exact on both sides.

<sup>ii</sup> A plea offered by proxy: he asks Christ to present the Passion to the Father on his behalf. Seven items are named — the death, the opened side, the blood and water, the begging of the body, the taking down, the burial in another's tomb, the three days — and then, rather than pleading them himself, obsecro ut digneris hæc omnia pro me Patri Tuo offerre. This is the Allegatio's method (printed 291–299) handed over: the grounds are the same, but the advocate is now asked to make the argument. And what is added at the end is not an event but a motive — the bitternesses which Thou didst suffer, the Love above all wherewith Thou didst suffer.

THE CONFESSION OF PRAISES.

For the Holy Spirit.

Come, Creator Spirit,<sup>vi</sup>

- 10 visit the minds of Thine own, fill with grace from on high the hearts which Thou hast made.

In the Old Testament, { 1. the brooding upon the waters, [Gen. 1:2] / 2. the sending-forth into living things, [v. 20] / 3. the inbreathing of man, [Gen. 2:7] / Bezael, [Exod. 31:3] / the Seventy elders, [Num. 11:25] / 4. the descent upon the Prophets. [1 Sam. 10:10] }<sup>vii</sup>

The visible coming.

- 15 Shadow. 1. The overshadowing and covering at the Conception of Christ. [Luke 1:35]<sup>viii</sup>

<sup>vi</sup> A hymn set among the proof-texts, and quoted entire. Veni Creator Spiritus, mentes tuorum visita, imple superna gratia quæ Tu creasti pectora is the first stanza of the ninth-century hymn — the hymn of Pentecost, and the one sung at the laying on of hands in every ordination. Andrewes ever took part in. In a section that has proved every article out of Scripture, the confession of the Holy Spirit opens instead in the Church's own words. Our English renders it as verse-shaped prose like everything else here, and does not import an existing English translation of the hymn: the Preces is quoting a Latin text, and a familiar rendering would make the reader hear a hymnbook where the page has a prayer.

<sup>v</sup> A Latin pair that only works because of the Greek beneath it. Invocatio answers Ἐπίκλησις and advocatio answers Παράκλησις, and the two Greek words are the same verb — καλέω, to call — with different prefixes: a calling-upon and a calling-alongside. So the Spirit invoked and the Spirit as Advocate are one act described from two ends, which the Latin can imitate and the English cannot: invocation and advocacy no longer look like relatives in our language. The plate sets Greek and Latin on one line as a gloss for the reader, so by CONVENTIONS §41 the English renders it once, keeping the Greek visible with its sense in a parenthesis, rather than printing the same word twice.

<sup>vi</sup> Three threes, and the first is Paul's. Gifts, ministrations, operations is 1 Cor. xii. 4–6 entire, where each is assigned to a different Person — the same Spirit, the same Lord, the same God — and Andrewes uses it as the frame for what follows: the gifts of the Spirit, His works, His fruits, each then opened in its own list. The catalogue's shape is borrowed from the verse it cites, which is why the three bare words on their own lines are not a summary but a heading.

marvellous, [Ps. 17:7] }
- 20 12. the riches of mercy, [Eph. 1:7]<sup>viii</sup>
13. the overflow of mercy, [v. 8]

<sup>vi</sup> The Triumph of Mercy is the Allegatio again, with the grounds narrowed to one attribute. The same forensic shape as printed 291–299 — numbered heads, each a reason the plea must succeed — except that every head is now some aspect of mercy itself: the Name and its glory, the promised truth and the oath interposed, the consolation of love, the bowels of mercies, and then mercy great, manifold, of old, plenteous, its riches and its overflow. The numbering runs continuously across the braces, 1 to 13, so a brace here is a grouping inside one series and not a series of its own; a later pass that renumbers within a brace breaks the count.

<sup>i</sup> A ladder built out of Greek prefixes, and it cannot be climbed in English. περισσεία, πλεονασμός, then ὑπερπλεονασμός, ὑπερπερισσεία, ὑπερβαλλόντως — abundance, increase, and then three compounds in which the same prefix is piled on, each taken from a place where St Paul himself reached for a word that did not exist until he made it: exceeding abundant, much more abound, the exceeding riches. The rhetoric is the repetition of ὑπερ-, which English has to render four different ways — super-, over-, exceeding, surpassing — so the ladder flattens the moment the Greek is dropped. The plate keeps the Greek beside the Latin and our English keeps both, glossing rather than replacing; this is the clearest case in Part II for the edition's whole method.

<sup>viii</sup> Paul's four dimensions measure mercy here, and measured the WOUND at printed 315. Μήκος, Πλάτος, Βάθος — length, breadth, depth — are Eph. iii. 18's measure of the love of Christ, and Andrewes fills each from the Psalter: from everlasting to everlasting for the length, up to heaven and down to hell for the depth, upon all for the breadth. Four pages earlier the same figure was turned on the man praying — behold the multitude, the length, the breadth, the depth of them, from the head even to the heel — to measure his hurt. The same Pauline measure serves the injury and the mercy, and the two passages must not be conformed or cross-referred in the text. It is the fourth time in this Part that a text is used twice and never for the same thing.

- 25 23. Whose place is { the Throne of grace, [Heb. 4:16] / the ark of atonement. [Exod. 25:22] }<sup>vii</sup>
24. Whose time is the day of salvation. [2 Cor. 6:2]<sup>viii</sup>

<sup>v</sup> John xxi. 15 — on the shore, asked three times for the three denials · <sup>vi</sup> 2 Cor. v. 20 — we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God · <sup>vii</sup> Exod. xxv. 22 — the mercy seat between the cherubims: there I will meet with thee · <sup>viii</sup> 2 Cor. vi. 2 — now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation

<sup>iii</sup> Twelve cases in a row, and every one is named by the thing that disqualified him. Not Peter but Peter that denied; not Thomas but Thomas the doubter; Paul the blasphemer, Magdalene the sinner, the son wicked, Jonah that fled, the woman taken, the thief. Where a person is not named the case is: the sheep that strayed, the coin that was lost, the debtor of ten thousand talents, the man left half dead. The list could have been a roll of saints and is deliberately a roll of failures, because the heading is Mercy and the argument is what mercy has in fact done. Our English keeps every epithet; dropping one turns an argument back into a commemoration.

<sup>vii</sup> Mercy is given a place and a time, and the place is a piece of furniture. Propitiatorium is the mercy seat — the gold cover of the ark, between the cherubim, of which God said there I will meet with thee and I will commune with thee; and Hebrews' throne of grace is that same seat read as a throne. So the two halves of the brace are one object under two names, Old Testament and New. The time is set against it in the same shape: the day of salvation, which in 2 Cor. vi. 2 is now. Place and time together make the point of the whole Triumphus — that there is somewhere to go and it is open.

THE FORE-PRAYER.

1. Let my prayer ascend, [Acts 10:4]<sup>i</sup>
  2. let it reach unto Thee, [2 Chr. 30:27]<sup>ii</sup>
  3. let it enter, [Ps. 88:2]
  - 5 4. let it appear in Thy sight, [Ps. 141:2]
  5. let it find grace, [Heb. 4:16]
  6. let it draw near. [Ps. 119:169]
- And I ask that it return not to me empty, [Isa. 55:11]<sup>iii</sup> but as Thou knowest, and canst, and wilt.
- 10 1. Hear, [Ps. 119:149]
  2. incline Thine ear, [Ps. 86:1; Dan. 9:18]
  3. attend and consider, [Ps. 61:1; Lam. 1:12]<sup>iv</sup>
  4. understand, [Ps. 139:2]
  5. hearken, [Ps. 64:1]
  - 15 6. remember to do it. [Dan. 9:19]<sup>v</sup>

THE WARDING-OFF.

That Thou wilt not { turn away in anger, [Ps. 27:10] / turn away Thine eye, [2 Chr. 30:9] / hide Thy face, [Job 13:24] / set a cloud between, [Lam. 3:44] / shut Thine ear, [v. 56] / forsake me, [Ps. 38:21] / leave me for ever, [Ps. 27:9] / despise me, [Ibid.] / keep silence, [Ps. 39:13] / sleep, [Matt. 8:24] / go far from me, [Ps. 35:22] / cast me off, [Ps. 44:23] / take away Thy mercy, [Ps. 89:33]

<sup>i</sup> Acts x. 4 — the angel to Cornelius: thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God · <sup>ii</sup> 2 Chr. xxx. 27 — after Hezekiah's passover: their prayer came up to his holy dwelling place, even unto heaven · <sup>iv</sup> Lam. i. 12 — is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by? · <sup>v</sup> Dan. ix. 19 — O Lord, hearken and do; defer not

<sup>i</sup> Two chains of six, and the second answers the first verb for verb. The prayer is to ascend, reach, enter, appear, find grace, draw near; then God is asked to hear, incline, attend and consider, understand, hearken, remember to do. Every one of the twelve carries its own proof-text, so the movement from the mouth to the ear is built entirely out of other men's prayers — Cornelius's, Hezekiah's, Daniel's, and the Psalter's. The second chain does not end at hearing. Memento ut facias — remember to do it — is the sixth term, and it is Daniel's; the sequence is not complete until the hearing has become an act.

<sup>iii</sup> A promise about God's word is turned on the man's own prayer. Non redeat ad me vacua is Isaiah lv. 11, where it is spoken of the word that goes out from God's mouth and shall not return unto Him void. Andrewes asks it of the prayer going up from his — the traffic reversed, the guarantee borrowed. He does not argue for the transfer and the English does not soften it; the clause that follows, but as Thou knowest, and canst, and wilt, is what he puts in place of an argument.

/ fallas veritatem, [Ps. lxxxix. 49.] / me arguas in ira, Psal. vi. 1. / me corripas in furore, Psal. xxxviii. 1. / projicias a facie, [Psal. li. 11.] / Noli me reprobare a pueris Tuis, [Sap. ix. 4.] / auferas Spiritum Tuum, Psal. li. 11. / obliviscaris in finem, Psal. lxxiv. 19. / irascaris satis, Is. lxiv. 9. / { tradas, Psal. xxvii. 12. / allidas, Is. lxiv. 7. } me in manu iniquitatis, / tardes reverti, Hab. ii. 3. / perdas cum impiis animam meam. Psal. xxvi. 9. }

THE PLEA.

Remember what my substance is, [Ps. 89:47]<sup>ii</sup>

That { dust and ashes, [Gen. 18:27] / grass and a flower, [Isa. 40:6] / flesh and a passing breath, [Ps. 78:39] / rottenness and a worm. [Job 17:14] }<sup>iii</sup>

Dwelling in a house of clay, [Job 4:19]<sup>v</sup>

Few days and evil, [Gen. 47:9]<sup>vi</sup>

To day and not to morrow, [Prov. 27:1]<sup>vii</sup>

In the morning and not unto evening, [Isa. 38:13]<sup>viii</sup>

<sup>ii</sup> Ps. lxxxix. 47 — remember how short my time is, the third time this verse anchors a plea · <sup>iii</sup> Gen. xviii. 27 — Abraham pleading for Sodom: I have taken upon me to speak, which am but dust and ashes · <sup>iv</sup> Ps. xxxix. 12 — I am a stranger with thee, and a sojourner · <sup>v</sup> Job iv. 19 — Eliphaz: them that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundation is in the dust · <sup>vi</sup> Gen. xlvii. 9 — Jacob to Pharaoh: few and evil have the days of the years of my life been · <sup>vii</sup> Prov. xxvii. 1 — boast not thyself of to morrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth · <sup>viii</sup> Isa. xxxviii. 13 — Hezekiah in his sickness: from day even to night wilt thou make an end of me

<sup>i</sup> The whole warding-off ends on one antithesis, and it is built to be lopsided. Vincatur Leo ab Agna infirma, spiritus violentus a carne debili — let the Lion be conquered by the weak Sheep, the violent spirit by the feeble flesh. The adversary is named by strength and the petitioner by weakness, twice over, and the verb is passive in both halves: nothing is asked to fight, only that the stronger be overcome. The English keeps the diminutive and the adjectives — weak Sheep, feeble flesh — because the disproportion is the prayer.

<sup>iv</sup> A second case of one verse cited by two different numbers in the two Parts. I am a stranger with thee, and a sojourner is Psal. xxxix. 12 here and Psal. xxxix. 14 at printed 261. Twelve is the Authorised Version's figure exactly; fourteen answers to no system cleanly, the Prayer Book making it thirteen, so Part I's may be a slip of one rather than another Psalter. The pairing is what matters, and it is the same phenomenon as the pierced hands and feet at printed 154 and 312, cited xxii. 17 and xxii. 16 — there unambiguously Prayer Book against Authorised Version. Two independent instances now show the two Parts numbering the same psalm differently, which is why no figure in this edition is ever reconciled to another.

THE CONFESSION OF SINS.

- I have sinned.
 Truly, Lord, I too am one of them, for my very life
 maketh me manifest.
 10 To Thee I confess, for though I would hide, I cannot [hide] from Thee, O Lord.
 Who can make a clean thing of unclean seed? [Job 14:4]<sup>iii</sup>
 I am a sinner, { of unclean seed, / of unclean womb. }
 In sins did my mother conceive me, [Ps. 51:5]<sup>iv</sup>
 15 A root of bitterness, [Heb. 12:15]<sup>v</sup>
 A shoot of the wild olive. [Rom. 11:17]<sup>vi</sup>
 1. I have sinned, I have done unjustly, I have wrought iniquity before Thee. [Ps. 106:6]<sup>vii</sup>
 2. I have dealt wickedly in the covenant, [1 Kgs. 8:47]<sup>viii</sup>
 3. I have cast away the law, [Isa. 5:24]
 20 4. I have rejected instruction, [Prov. 15:32]
 5. I have grieved the Spirit, [Isa. 63:10]<sup>ix</sup>
 6. I have gone after my own thoughts, [Jer. 18:12]
 7. I have passed from evil to evil, [Ps. 69:27]
 8. Neither have I feared Thee, [Isa. 57:11]
 25 9. Nor have I returned, [Luke 15:20]
 10. Not even when called back, [Jer. 7:13]<sup>x</sup>
 11. Not even when afflicted, [Jer. 5:3; Prov. 23:35]

<sup>i</sup> Rom. vi. 6 — that the body of sin might be destroyed · <sup>ii</sup> 1 John v. 19 — the whole world lieth in wickedness · <sup>iii</sup> Job xiv. 4 — who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? not one · <sup>iv</sup> Ps. li. 5 — David's Miserere: in sin did my mother conceive me · <sup>v</sup> Heb. xii. 15 — lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you · <sup>vi</sup> Rom. xi. 17 — the wild olive grafted in among the branches · <sup>vii</sup> Ps. cvi. 6 — we have sinned with our fathers, we have committed iniquity · <sup>viii</sup> 1 Kings viii. 47 — Solomon's prayer, putting the words in the mouth of a people in captivity · <sup>ix</sup> Isa. lxiii. 10 — they rebelled, and vexed his holy Spirit · <sup>x</sup> Jer. vii. 13 — I called you, but ye answered not

<sup>iii</sup> This is the reference the volume elsewhere gets wrong, and here it is right. Job xiv. 4 — who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? — stands correctly on this page; at printed 406, where Part III makes its own confession out of the same material, the plate prints Job. xiv. 14, which is if a man die, shall he live again? Both stand as printed and neither is mended. The corroborating witness is the book itself, which is worth more than any conjecture, and it is now the fourth such case — with Is. xxxiii. 15 against §37's xxxviii. 15, Psal. cxxx. 30 against printed 297's cxxx. 3, and printed 25 confirming the reading at 409.

<sup>vii</sup> The confession is made entirely in other men's words. Eleven numbered admissions follow, and not one is Andrewes' own sentence: I have sinned, I have done unjustly is the Psalter's, I have dealt wickedly in the covenant is Solomon putting words into the mouth of a people not yet carried away, I have grieved the Spirit is Isaiah's account of the wilderness generation, I have gone after my own thoughts is Jeremiah quoting the people's defiance. Each is a third-person or plural indictment turned into the first person singular — the accusation accepted rather than answered. It is the same method as the Passion catalogue at printed 313: he is not describing his case, he is proving it, and the proof-texts are the confession.

2. { necessities, [Ps. 25:17] / superfluities. [Jas. 1:21] }

<sup>i</sup> Heb. iii. 13 — lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin · <sup>ii</sup> 1 Kings xvi. 33 — Ahab, who did more to provoke the LORD than all before him; Ps. x. 13 — wherefore doth the wicked contemn God? · <sup>iii</sup> Lam. iii. 59 — O LORD, thou hast seen my wrong: judge thou my cause · <sup>iv</sup> Ps. l. 21 — these things hast thou done, and I kept silence

<sup>iii</sup> The fourteenth term of the confession is not a sin but a silence. Thirteen admissions run down the page in the first person — I have hardened myself, I have provoked Thee — and the catalogue ends by turning to what God did: And all this Thou hast seen. And Thou hast held Thy peace. Both halves are quoted, and both are dangerous. Jeremiah asks God to judge because He has seen; the psalm's silence is followed, in the same verse, by thou thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself — the forbearance mistaken for consent. So the list of sins closes on the one thing in it that is God's act, and leaves it undecided whether the silence is mercy or evidence. Nothing is added, and the section stops here.

<sup>v</sup> From here the page stops praying and starts weighing. Aggravatio is the confessor's technical term, and the nine heads are the circumstances by which a sin's gravity is reckoned in the manuals — its measure, quality, iteration, continuance, the person, the manner, the moving cause, the time, the place — the quis, quid, ubi, quibus auxiliis, cur, quomodo, quando that the schoolmen took from the rhetoricians' analysis of an act and the confessors took from the schoolmen. Not one of the nine carries a proof-text, and the scripture band below is empty for the rest of this leaf; that is the right outcome, not a gap — the page is an instrument, and an instrument is not argued from Scripture. The four that follow, folly, ingratitude, hardness, contempt, are aggravations of another kind: not circumstances of the deed but the mind it was done in.

<sup>vi</sup> The kinds of sin, and the pairs are the argument. Each numbered head sets two terms against each other inside a brace and prints its own reference in the cell, so the English keeps them there and the band below has nothing to add. Isaiah's pair is one image, not two sins: woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cart rope — the thread first and the cable after, the same haulage grown strong enough to be seen. The second pair divides sins of need from sins of excess — the Vulgate's necessitates cordis mei against the superfluity of naughtiness in James — which is why what looks like a list of sixteen kinds is really a list of sixteen antitheses.

<sup>i</sup> The sixteen kinds are sixteen antitheses, and the brace is the argument. Every head sets two terms against each other — omission against commission, inward against outward, ignorant against knowing, once against often, hidden against manifest — so what looks like a list of sins is a set of axes along which one sin can be placed. The plate prints its references inside the cells and the English keeps them there, so the scripture band stays empty for this leaf. The first head takes Paul for both its halves at once: what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I is a single sentence containing the not-doing and the doing, which is why one reference serves a pair.

<sup>ii</sup> Anger and concupiscence are not two sins here but the two appetites. The division is the schoolmen's irascibilis and concupiscibilis, the passionate part of the soul cut in two, so head twelve is not naming wrath and lust among the rest but sorting every sin by which appetite carried it. The inner brace then divides concupiscence itself, of the flesh from of the world.

<sup>iii</sup> The gravest distinction on the page carries no reference, because it needed none. By one not yet called against by one already called — sin before the calling and sin after it — was a commonplace of the manuals and of the epistles that speak of those once enlightened. It is set down as flatly as the difference between sleeping and waking two lines below, and the plate leaves the reader to supply what hangs on it.

Whatsoever, from infancy until now,
 unto this very moment;

- 5      Knowing or ignorant,
       Within or without,
       Sleeping or waking,
     In words, in deeds, in thoughts,
       By the fiery darts of the enemy,
 10     By the unclean desires of the flesh,
       I have sinned against Thee.

Have mercy on me, O God, and forgive me.

It repenteth me.

1. It grieves — sorrow (λύπη) — | for the wounds. [2 Cor. 7:11]<sup>i</sup>
 15 2. It shames — shame (αἰσχύνῃ) — | for the stains, the blot, the filth, [Rom. 6:21]<sup>ii</sup>
 3. It vexes — indignation (ἄγανάκτησις) — | for the guilt. [2 Cor. 7:11]
 4. It dreads — fear (φόβος) — | for the punishment. [Ibid.]
 5. It wearies — I labour (κοπιῶ) — | under the bondage, the yoke. [Matt. 11:28]<sup>iii</sup>
     1. Fear (φόβος). [2 Cor. 7:11]
 20 2. Indignation (ἄγανάκτησις). [Ibid.]
     3. Self-judgement (κρίσις). [1 Cor. 11:31]<sup>iv</sup>
     4. Self-avenging (ἐκδίκησις). [2 Cor. 7:11]
     5. Hatred [of the sin]. [Jude 23]<sup>v</sup>

 25 7. Self-humbling. [Jas. 4:10]<sup>vii</sup>
     8. The smiting of the breast. [Luke 18:13]
     9. of the thigh. [Jer. 31:19]<sup>viii</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Five impersonal verbs under a sixth, and then the grammar changes. The section is headed Pœnitet — it repenteth me — and the five under it are impersonals too: Dolet, Pudet, Piget, Horret, Tædet, it grieves, it shames, it vexes, it horrifies, it wearies. In Latin the man is the subject of none of them. Repentance, in the first list, is something that happens to him, and each is given the Greek noun of the affection and the thing it is felt for — sorrow for the wounds, shame for the stains, indignation for the guilt, fear for the punishment, weariness of the yoke. Then the second list turns to nouns of action — self-judgement, self-avenging, hatred, flight from occasions, self-humbling, the smiting of the breast and of the thigh — and every one is a thing he does. The page moves from what repentance suffers to what repentance performs, and it makes the turn in the grammar before it makes it in the words.

Let not thy wrath come upon me,

But let thy grace, I beseech thee, prevent me.

<sup>i</sup> Jer. iv. 8 — gird you with sackcloth, lament and howl · <sup>ii</sup> Joel ii. 12 — turn ye even to me with all your heart, with fasting, and with weeping · <sup>iii</sup> Prov. xvi. 6 — by mercy and truth iniquity is purged · <sup>iv</sup> Ps. lxxix. 8 — let thy tender mercies speedily prevent us: for we are brought very low · <sup>v</sup> Rom. viii. 32 — how shall he not with him also freely give us all things? · <sup>vi</sup> Acts vii. 60 — Stephen, kneeling: lay not this sin to their charge · <sup>vii</sup> Ps. xxxii. 2 — blessed is the man unto whom the LORD imputeth not iniquity · <sup>viii</sup> Ps. cxxx. 3 — if thou, LORD, shouldest mark iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand? · <sup>ix</sup> Ps. cxliii. 2 — enter not into judgment with thy servant · <sup>x</sup> Ps. li. 11 — cast me not away from thy presence · <sup>xi</sup> Exod. xxxii. 12 — Moses on the mount: turn from thy fierce wrath, and repent of this evil · <sup>xii</sup> Ps. lxxvii. 7 — will the Lord absent himself for ever? will he be no more entreated?

<sup>vii</sup> Three Greek verbs stand beside the Latin here, and they are three different ways of not counting a sin. Μὴ στήσης is Stephen's, dying — do not set it up against me; μὴ λογίσῃ is the Septuagint's, in the psalm Paul builds imputation on — do not reckon it to my account; μὴ μνησθῇς — do not remember it. Judicial, mercantile, personal: the English of the three is nearly one sentence and the Greek of them is three distinct acts, which is why the plate keeps the Greek. Stephen prayed his for other men; it is asked here for the man praying.

<sup>xi</sup> Nine petitions in a row ask God not to act, and then the prayer turns and asks what He is. From hold back thine anger to cast me not away, every clause is a negative. The turn comes at Esto — be Thou — with three adjectives that rhyme in the Latin and cannot in the English: placabilis, præstabilis, exorabilis. They are adjectives of capacity, not of action: the prayer stops asking God to do anything and asks that He be the kind of God who can be moved.

 1. Turn away thy face from my sins — ἀπόστρεψον. [Ps. 51:9]<sup>ix</sup>
        Turn not away [thy face] from my misery. [Ps. 44:24]
 2. Pass over — ὑπερβαινε. [Mic. 7:18]
 3. Overlook — ὑπέριδε. [Acts 17:30]
 25 4. Forbear — ἀνέχου. [Rom. 2:4]
 5. Cover — κάλυπον. [Ps. 85:2]<sup>x</sup>
 6. Cleanse, [Ps. 51:2]

<sup>ii</sup> Job xiv. 16 — the Vulgate's parce peccatis meis, where the AV has dost thou not watch over my sin? · <sup>iii</sup> John i. 29 — the Baptist's ὁ αἶψων: behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world · <sup>iv</sup> 2 Sam. xii. 13 — Nathan to David: the LORD also hath put away thy sin · <sup>v</sup> Isa. xxxviii. 17 — Hezekiah's song in his sickness: thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back · <sup>vi</sup> Joel ii. 14 — who knoweth if he will return and repent, and leave a blessing behind him? · <sup>vii</sup> 2 Cor. v. 18 — who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ · <sup>viii</sup> 1 Kings viii. 39 — Solomon at the dedication: hear thou in heaven, and forgive · <sup>ix</sup> Ps. li. 9 — hide thy face from my sins · <sup>x</sup> Ps. lxxxv. 2 — thou hast covered all their sin

<sup>i</sup> The page divides sin into four things it does, and gives each its own ladder. Reatus, macula, morbus, servitus — guilt, stain, sickness, bondage, the scholastic four-fold effect — and each carries its Greek term: guilt is ὑπόδικον, liable to judgement, a courtroom word; stain is κηλὶς, a spot, with δυσειδές beside it. The four are not four sins but one sin under four descriptions, so the eleven petitions under the first are eleven ways of asking one verdict to be lifted.

<sup>ii</sup> Almost every text here states in the indicative what God HAS done, and is asked back as an imperative. Nathan told David the LORD hath put away thy sin, and the page prays Transfer; Hezekiah sang thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back, and it prays Dissipa; the psalm says thou hast covered all their sin, and it prays Tege. The Baptist's is the clearest: ὁ αἶψων, the participle that names Christ, becomes the bare imperative αἶρε. And it is not a device of one page — printed 22 asks Isaiah's I have blotted out thy transgressions back as blot thou out mine, 321 asks of a man's prayer the promise made of God's own word. What twice looked like a liberty is the method, and it is nowhere argued for.

{ 3. I will depart from it — ἀφίστασθαι. [2 Tim. 2:19]<sup>viii</sup>

25 { 4. I will say, It sufficeth — ἄρκετός. [1 Pet. 4:3]<sup>ix</sup>

{ 5. no more henceforth. — οὐκέτι. [v. 2]

<sup>vi</sup> The same six Greek words have now done two different jobs on three consecutive leaves. At printed 326 Paul's marks of godly sorrow — ἀγανάκτησις, φόβος, ἐπιπόθησις, ζήλος, σπουδῇ, ἀπολογία — were the affections repentance feels, listed under impersonal verbs. Here they are the resolutions it makes, and the verbs are first person singular and active: I have sworn, I have longed, I desire, I am zealous, I am earnest, I plead. Paul's list is not being repeated; it is being conjugated. The pass has now recorded five texts used twice and never for the same thing, and this is the largest of them — six words at once.

2. Quod { 1. convertar ad Te, ἐπιστρέψω. [Thren. iii. 40.]

 7. Who shall deliver me? [Rom. 7:24]

Bring help.

1. Succour me — βοήθει. O God, [make speed] to help me. [Ps. 70:1]<sup>viii</sup>
 2. Aid me — ἀνάληψαι. Save me, O God. [Ps. 69:1]
 3. Come to my aid — ἀντιλαβοῦ. Let God arise. [Ps. 68:1]
 4. Turn me — ἐπίστρεψον. Arise, O Lord. [Ps. 3:7]
 5. Seek me — ζήτη. [Luke 19:10]
 6. Make haste to help me. [Ps. 70:1]
 7. Open thine eyes, and see, [Is. 37:17]<sup>ix</sup>
 8. Incline thine ear, and hear. [Ibid.]
 9. Incline my heart — Κλῖνον καρδίαν. [Ps. 119:36]
 10. Open mine ears. [Job 36:10]<sup>x</sup>
 11. Lighten mine eyes. [Ps. 13:3]
 12. Confirm my hands. [Neh. 6:9]<sup>xi</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Lam. iii. 40 — let us search and try our ways, and turn again to the LORD · <sup>ii</sup> Hos. ii. 6 — I will hedge up thy way with thorns, said of a wife to be kept from her lovers · <sup>iii</sup> Rom. vii. 19 — the good that I would I do not · <sup>iv</sup> Isa. xxxvii. 3 — Hezekiah to Isaiah, with Sennacherib at the gate: the children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth · <sup>v</sup> Luke xxiv. 38 — the risen Christ to the eleven: why do thoughts arise in your hearts? · <sup>vi</sup> Rom. vii. 23 — bringing me into captivity to the law of sin · <sup>vii</sup> Isa. xxxviii. 14 — Hezekiah sick: I am oppressed; undertake for me · <sup>viii</sup> Ps. lxx. 1 — make haste, O God, to deliver me · <sup>ix</sup> Isa. xxxvii. 17 — Hezekiah spreading the letter before the LORD: open thine eyes, and see · <sup>x</sup> Job xxxvi. 10 — Elihu: he openeth also their ear to discipline · <sup>xi</sup> Neh. vi. 9 — Nehemiah at the wall: strengthen my hands

<sup>viii</sup> The ladder of help begins with the words every hour of the Office begins with. Deus in adiutorium is the versicle Andrewes said several times a day, and the first four rungs each set a Greek imperative beside the opening words of a psalm — βοήθει with O God, make speed to help me, ἀνάληψαι with Save me, O God, ἀντιλαβοῦ with Let God arise, ἐπίστρεψον with Arise, O Lord. The Greek names the act and the Latin names the psalm it is asked in, so a reader who knows the psalter hears four whole psalms behind four words. The last four rungs turn the request inward — open mine ears, lighten mine eyes, confirm my hands: having asked God to open His eyes and incline His ear, the prayer asks the same two things for itself.

13. Dirige gressus, ἰθὺνον ἵχνη. [Psal. cxix. 133.]

13. Order my steps — ἱθύνων ἵχνη. [Ps. 119:133]
 14. Try my reins — νεφρούς. [Ps. 26:2]<sup>i</sup>
 15. Pierce my flesh [with thy fear] — σάρκας. [Ps. 119:120]<sup>ii</sup>
 16. Draw me after Thee — εἰλξον. [Cant. 1:4]
 5 17. Constrain me with bit [and bridle]. [Ps. 32:9]<sup>iii</sup>
 18. Set me beside Thee. [Job 17:3]
 19. [Let me] not [return] to the vomit — ἐξέραμα. [2 Pet. 2:22]<sup>iv</sup>
 20. [Suffer] no temptation, save such as is common to man. [1 Cor. 10:13]<sup>v</sup>
 21. Let not the enemy prevail. [Ps. 89:22]
 10 22. Let it not overwhelm me. [Ps. 69:15]
     Hedge me about with thorns. [Hos. 2:6]
     Remove { the occasions,
             { the stumbling-blocks.

The soul's rest.

- 15 Yet sin lieth in wait before the door. [Gen. 4:7]<sup>vi</sup>
 I would not destroy it for the ten's sake. [Gen. 18:32]
 In the mount the Lord will provide. [Gen. 22:14]<sup>vii</sup>
 The Ruler, the Lord God, merciful and gracious, longsuffering, and of great compassion, and true, who keepest mer-20 cy for thousands, who takest away iniquity and wickedness and sin. [Exod. 34:6, 7]<sup>viii</sup>
 They shall be afflicted, until they confess, [Lev. 26:29]<sup>ix</sup>
 When they shall be ashamed, then shall they pray, [v. 41]
 And I will remember my covenant. [v. 42]
 25 When evils are come upon thee, and thou, led by the sorrow of thine heart, art returned unto God, he will have mercy on thee, and will bless thee, and will circumcise thine heart, that thou love the Lord.
 [Deut. 30:1, 2, 3, 6]<sup>x</sup>
 Why art thou cast down, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted within me?
 30 [Ps. 42:11]

<sup>i</sup> Ps. xxvi. 2 — the Vulgate's ure renes meos, burn my reins, where the AV has try · <sup>ii</sup> Ps. cxix. 120 — the Vulgate's nail my flesh with thy fear, for the AV's my flesh trembleth · <sup>iii</sup> Ps. xxxii. 9 — whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle · <sup>iv</sup> 2 Pet. ii. 22 — the dog is turned to his own vomit again · <sup>v</sup> 1 Cor. x. 13 — there hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man · <sup>vi</sup> Gen. iv. 7 — to Cain, before the murder: sin lieth at the door · <sup>vii</sup> Gen. xxii. 14 — Abraham naming the place: in the mount of the LORD it shall be seen · <sup>viii</sup> Exod. xxxiv. 6, 7 — the Name proclaimed to Moses in the cleft of the rock · <sup>ix</sup> Lev. xxvi. 29 — the covenant curses, and the promise of return hidden in them · <sup>x</sup> Deut. xxx. 1, 2, 3, 6 — the restoration clause: the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart

<sup>i</sup> Four of these petitions ask to be hurt, and the Latin Bible is why. Ure renes, burn my reins, is the Vulgate where the AV has try my reins; Confige carnes, nail my flesh with thy fear, is the Vulgate where the AV has my flesh trembleth. The English Bible has an examination in both places and the Latin has a wound — and the ladder goes on in the Latin's key, the bit and bridle, the hedge of thorns. <sup>vi</sup> The soul's rest is quarried out of the covenant curses, and the texts stand in canonical order. Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Deuteronomy, the Psalter — sin at the door, the ten righteous, the mount where the Lord provides, the Name proclaimed in the cleft of the rock, then the two threatening chapters. Leviticus xxvi and Deuteronomy xxx are curse-chapters, and what he takes from them is the clause at the end of each: until they confess, then shall they pray, I will remember my covenant, he will circumcise thine heart.

Spera in Deo, quoniam adhuc confitebor Ei, salutare vultus mei, et Deus meus. [Psal. xlii. 12.]
Convertere, anima mea, in requiem tuam, quia Dominus benefaciet tibi. Psal. cxvi. 7.

5 Recordare.

Memor esto verborum Tuorum servo Tuo, in quibus mihi spem dedisti. Psal. cxix. 49.

Et suscipe me secundum eloquia Tua, ut vivam: et non confundas me ab expectatione mea. [Vers. 116.]

10 Non in perpetuum irascetur, neque in æternum commina-bitur. [Psal. ciii. 9.]

Non secundum peccata nostra faciet nobis, neque secundum iniquitates nostras retribuet nobis. [Vers. 10.]

15 Ipse adeo misericors fuit, et propitius peccatis nostris, ut non disperderet nos. [Psal. lxxviii. 38.]

Recordatus est quia caro sumus, spiritus vadens, et non rediens. [Vers. 39.]

Misericordia superexaltans.

Venite et arguite Me, dicit Dominus;

20 Si fuerint peccata vestra ut coccinum, quasi nix dealba-buntur; et si fuerint rubra quasi vermiculus, velut lana alba erunt. Is. i. 18, 19.

Cum conversus ingemueris, tum salvus fies. Is. xxx. 15.

Exspectat Deus, ut misereatur vestri. Vers. 18.

25 Calamum quassatum non confringet, et linum fumigans non exstinguet. Is. xlii. 3.

Ego sum qui deleo iniquitates tuas propter Meipsum, et peccatorum tuorum non recordabor. Is. xliii. 25.

30 Deleo, ut nubem, iniquitates tuas, et quasi nebulam, peccata tua. Revertere ad Me, et redimam. Is. xliv. 22.

Hope thou in God, for I will yet confess unto him [who is] the health of my countenance, and my God. [Ps. 42:11]<sup>i</sup> Return, O my soul, unto thy rest, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee. [Ps. 116:7]

5 Remember.

Remember thy word unto thy servant, wherein thou hast given me hope. [Ps. 119:49]
And uphold me according unto thy word, that I may live: and let me not be ashamed of my hope. [v. 116] 10 He will not be angry for ever, neither will he threaten unto everlasting. [Ps. 103:9]<sup>ii</sup>
He hath not dealt with us after our sins, neither rewarded us according to our iniquities. [v. 10]
He was so merciful, and so favourable to our sins,
15 that he destroyed us not. [Ps. 78:38]
He remembered that we are but flesh, a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again. [v. 39]

Mercy that triumpheth.

Come and reprove me, saith the Lord;<sup>iii</sup> 20 Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; and though they be red like crimson, they shall be as white wool. [Is. 1:18, 19]<sup>iv</sup>
When thou art turned and dost groan, then shalt thou be saved. [Is. 30:15]
God waiteth, that he may have mercy upon you. [v. 18] 25 The bruised reed he will not break, and the smoking flax he will not quench. [Is. 42:3]<sup>v</sup>
I am he that blotteth out thine iniquities for mine own sake, and thy sins I will not remember. [Is. 43:25]<sup>vi</sup>
I blot out, as a cloud, thine iniquities, and as a mist, 30 thy sins. Return unto me, and I will redeem thee. [Is. 44:22]<sup>vii</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Ps. xlii. 12 — hope thou in God: for I shall yet praise him · <sup>ii</sup> Ps. ciii. 9 — he will not always chide, neither keepeth he his anger for ever · <sup>iv</sup> Isa. i. 18, 19 — though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow · <sup>v</sup> Isa. xlii. 3 — a bruised reed shall he not break, the verse Matthew quotes at printed 329 · <sup>vi</sup> Isa. xliii. 25 — I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake · <sup>vii</sup> Isa. xlv. 22 — I have blotted out thy transgressions as a cloud, standing here as God speaks it

<sup>iii</sup> The direction of speech reverses here, and it is the answer to the Miserere. For six leaves the man has been speaking — asking, resolving, confessing. From Mercy that triumpheth to the end of the section God speaks, in the first person, and the prayer says nothing at all: I am he that blotteth out thine iniquities · I will bear · before they call, I will hear. The petitions are not answered one by one; they are answered by being stopped, and the man is left listening to promises he has spent six leaves turning into requests.

<sup>vii</sup> The volume proves its own method from inside itself, on one verse. Isaiah xlv. 22 stands at printed 22 as Dele . . . et dissipa — blot thou out MINE, an imperative in the man's mouth — and it stands here in the indicative and in God's, I blot out, as a cloud, thine iniquities, with return unto me, and I will redeem thee left attached. Same verse, both ways, in one book, and neither place notes the other. What printed 328 shows as a habit is confirmed here by the plainest possible witness: the edition never has to argue that the imperatives are turned indicatives, because the book turns one back.

portabo: Ego feci, et Ego feram, Ego portabo et salvabo. Is. xlv. 4.

Vere languores nostros Ipse tulit, et dolores nostros Ipse portavit. Is. liii. 4.

Ipse vulneratus est propter iniquitates nostras, attritus
est propter scelera nostra;

Disciplina pacis nostræ super Eum: et livore Ejus sanati sumus. Vers. 5.

Omnes nos quasi oves erravimus, unusquisque in viam suam declinavit; et posuit Deus in Eum iniquitates omnium nostrum. Vers. 6.

Eritque, antequam clament, Ego exaudiam; adhuc illis loquentibus, Ego audiam. [Is. lxx. 24.]

Nunquid voluntatis Meæ est mors impii, et non ut con-vertatur a viis suis, et vivat? Ez. xviii. 23.

Convertimini, et avertimini ab omnibus iniquitatibus vestris, et non erit vobis in ruinam iniquitas. Vers. 30.

Vivo Ego; nolo mortem impii, sed ut convertatur impius a via sua, et vivat.

Convertimini, convertimini a viis vestris pessimis: et quare moriemini, domus Israel? Ez. xxxiii. 11.

Impietas impii non nocebit ei in quacunque die conversus fuerit ab iniquitate sua. Vers. 12.

Et cum recesserit impius ab impietate sua, feceritque judicium et justitiam, vivet in iis. Vers. 19.

Derelinquat impius viam suam, et vir iniquus cogitationes
suas, et revertatur ad Dominum, et miserebitur ejus, et ad Deum nostrum, quia multus est ad ignoscen-
dum. Is. lv. 7.

- Even to old age I am he, and even to hoar hairs will I<sup>i</sup> carry you: I have made, and I will bear, I will carry and will save. [Is. 46:4]
- Surely he hath borne our griefs, and our sorrows<sup>ii</sup>
 5 he hath carried. [Is. 53:4]
- He was wounded for our iniquities, he was bruised for our wickednesses;
 The chastisement of our peace was upon him: and by his stripes we are healed. [v. 5]
- 10 All we like sheep have gone astray, every one to his own way have we turned aside; and the Lord hath laid upon him the iniquities of us all. [v. 6]
- And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will hear; while they are<sup>iii</sup>
 yet speaking, I will hear. [Is. 65:24]
- 15 Have I any pleasure in the death of the wicked, and not that he turn from his ways, and live? [Ezek. 18:23]<sup>iv</sup>
- Turn ye, and turn yourselves away from all your ini-quities, so iniquity shall not be your ruin. [v. 30]
- As I live, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked 20 turn from his way, and live.
- Turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways: for why will ye die, O house of Israel? [Ezek. 33:11]<sup>v</sup>
- The wickedness of the wicked shall not hurt him in whatsoever day he turneth from his wickedness. [v. 12]
- 25 And when the wicked departeth from his wickedness, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall live thereby. [v. 19]
- Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he is great to pardon.
- 30 [Is. 55:7]<sup>vi</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Isa. xlii. 4 — even to your old age I am he; and even to hoar hairs will I carry you · <sup>ii</sup> Isa. liii. 4 — surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows · <sup>iii</sup> Isa. lxi. 24 — before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear · <sup>iv</sup> Ezek. xviii. 23 — have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? · <sup>v</sup> Ezek. xxxiii. 11 — as I live, saith the Lord GOD, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked · <sup>vi</sup> Isa. lv. 7 — let him return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy upon him

<sup>ii</sup> The Servant song is the only text in the catena quoted whole. Everything around it is a single verse — a promise, a question, a clause — but Isaiah liii is given three verses running, wounded, bruised, the chastisement, the stripes, and the sheep gone astray. The chapter is not cited for a sentence; it is set down as the ground the rest of the promises stand on, and it is placed at the centre of the section rather than at its head.

<sup>v</sup> Ezekiel says this twice and the page prints both times, not one. Chapter xviii asks it as a question and chapter xxxiii swears it as an oath — as I live — and the two stand here nine lines apart with their surrounding verses, the turning, the ruin, the wicked who departs and lives. The repetition is the prophet's own and the leaf keeps it. A later hand tidying the duplication would delete an oath.

CONFESSIO PECCATI.

DEUS, Tu scis insipientiam meam, et delicta mea a Te non sunt abscondita. Psal. lxix. 5.

Cognosco et ego, et peccatum meum contra me est
semper. Psal. li. 3.

Non abscondo peccatum, sicut Adam. Job. xxxi. 33.

Non declino cor meum in verba malitiæ, ad excusandas excusationes in peccatis. Psal. cxli. 4.

Sed confiteor adversum me injustitiam meam. Ps. xxxii. 5.

Et omnia quæ intra me sunt, Psal. ciii. 1.

Et omnia ossa mea dicunt, Psal. xxxv. 10.

Peccavi, Psal. cvi. 6.

Peccavi Tibi, Domine.

Erravi sicut ovis quæ periit. [Psal. cxix. 176.]

Protervus fui, sicut juvenca indomita. Jer. xxxi. 18.

Reversus sum sicut canis ad vomitum: Prov. xxvi. 11.

Sicut sus lota, in volutabro luti. 2 Pet. ii. 22.

Do Tibi gloriam, Domine, et confiteor,

Peccavi Tibi, et sic et sic feci. Jos. vii. [19, 20.]

Ὁ Κύριε, λίνον τυφόμενον μὴ σβέσης, κάλαμον συντετριμμένον μὴ κατεάξῃς. Matt. xii. 20.

Ne me demergat tempestas aquæ,

Neque absorbeat me profundum,

Neque occludat super me puteus os suum. Psal.

lxix. [15.]

Domine, ante Te omne desiderium meum,

THE CONFESSION OF SIN.

O GOD, thou knowest my foolishness, and my sins are not hid from thee. [Ps. 69:5]<sup>i</sup>

I also acknowledge it, and my sin is ever before me. [Ps. 51:3]

I hide not my sin, as Adam did. [Job 31:33]<sup>ii</sup>

I incline not my heart to words of malice, to make excuses in sins. [Ps. 141:4]<sup>iii</sup>

But I confess against myself mine own unrighteousness. [Ps. 32:5]

And all that is within me, [Ps. 103:1]

And all my bones do say, [Ps. 35:10]

I have sinned, [Ps. 106:6]

I have sinned against thee, O Lord.

I have gone astray like a sheep that was lost. [Ps. 119:176]<sup>iv</sup>

I have been froward, like an untamed heifer. [Jer. 31:18]<sup>v</sup>

I am turned back like a dog to his vomit: [Prov. 26:11]<sup>vi</sup>

like a washed sow, to her wallowing in the mire. [2 Pet. 2:22]<sup>vii</sup>

I give thee glory, O Lord, and I confess,

I have sinned against thee, and thus and thus have I done. [Josh. 7:19, 20]<sup>viii</sup>

O Lord, the smoking flax quench thou not, the bruised reed break thou not. [Matt. 12:20]<sup>ix</sup>

Let not the tempest of water drown me,

Neither let the deep swallow me up,

Neither let the pit shut her mouth upon me. [Ps.<sup>x</sup>

69:15]

Lord, all my desire is before thee,

<sup>i</sup> Ps. lxix. 5 — my sins are not hid from thee · <sup>ii</sup> Job xxxi. 33 — Job's oath of clearing: if I covered my transgressions as Adam · <sup>iii</sup> Ps. cxli. 4 — incline not my heart to any evil thing, to practise wicked works · <sup>iv</sup> Ps. cxix. 176 — I have gone astray like a lost sheep · <sup>v</sup> Jer. xxxi. 18 — Ephraim: as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke · <sup>vi</sup> Prov. xxvi. 11 — as a dog returneth to his vomit, so a fool returneth to his folly · <sup>vii</sup> 2 Pet. ii. 22 — Peter quoting that proverb and adding the washed sow · <sup>viii</sup> Josh. vii. 19, 20 — Joshua to Achan: give glory to the LORD, and make confession — and Achan's thus and thus have I done · <sup>ix</sup> Matt. xii. 20 — Matthew's he shall not break, printed here as break thou not · <sup>x</sup> Ps. lxix. 15 — let not the pit shut her mouth upon me

<sup>viii</sup> The confession borrows the words of a man who was stoned for the sin he confessed. Achan's I have sinned, and thus and thus have I done is used here as the form of an honest confession, and it is, precisely: the one confession in Scripture that names the deed in detail. The page takes the formula and not the outcome. The valley of Achor, where that story ends, has already been prayed against twice in this volume, at printed 205 and 282; here the man who made it is spoken with rather than deprecated.

<sup>ix</sup> Here the turn from indicative to imperative is visible IN THE GREEK, and the plate does it in the open. Matthew writes κάλαμον συντετριμμένον οὐ κατεάξει — he shall not break the bruised reed, a statement about Christ. The plate prints κάλαμον συντετριμμένον μὴ κατεάξης — a prohibition addressed to Him. This verse has now stood on three consecutive leaves and never twice the same way: at printed 329 as Extirpa, at 332 as Isaiah's own promise in God's mouth, and here as a petition in the second person. Whatever else the notes record about this edition's method, it can be shown on one verse in three openings, and the third of them shows it in the original.

Et gemitus meus a Te non est absconditus. Psal.

<sup>ii</sup> Paul's oath was sworn about other men's damnation and is taken here for the speaker's own sin. I say the truth in Christ, I lie not, my conscience also bearing me witness — Paul is about to say he could wish himself accursed for his brethren. The page keeps the oath and its solemnity entire and changes what is sworn to: that I have so sinned against thee. Fourth text in Part II turned inward that was spoken outward, and as always nothing on the page marks the change.

Positis thronis,
 25 Adstantibus Angelis,
 Introductis hominibus,

That I abhor mine own self, [Job 42:6]<sup>i</sup>
 for the { absurdity / baseness / vileness } of my desire,
 [a desire] worthy of { confusion / reproach }.
 That all the day long my shame is before me, and the confusion

 Ah, ah! Alas, alas! that I have not revered, neither dreaded [Heb. 12:21]<sup>iii</sup>
 The incomprehensibleness of thy glory,
 Thy dread power,
 10 The awfulness of thy presence,
 Thine exact justice,
 Thy lovely goodness.
 How was I enticed by mine own lust? [Jas. 1:14]<sup>iv</sup>
 How have I detested discipline?
 15 And my heart hath not yielded to reproofs? [Prov. 5:12]<sup>v</sup>
 Behold, O Lord,
 That fear and trembling are come upon me,
 And the terror of death is fallen upon me. [Ps. 55:5]<sup>vi</sup>
 What fear, and trembling, and shuddering, 20 and agony, and the last extremity, have I to see?
 What confusion shall seize me?
 With what darkness shall I be compassed?
 How dreadful is thy judgement, O Lord?
 When the thrones are set,
 25 The angels standing by,
 Men brought in,

<sup>i</sup> Job xlii. 6 — Job at the end, out of the whirlwind: I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes · <sup>ii</sup> Ps. xlv. 15 — my confusion is continually before me, and the shame of my face hath covered me · <sup>iii</sup> Heb. xii. 21 — Moses at the mountain: I exceedingly fear and quake · <sup>iv</sup> Jas. i. 14 — every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed · <sup>v</sup> Prov. v. 12 — how have I hated instruction, and my heart despised reproof! · <sup>vi</sup> Ps. lv. 5 — fearfulness and trembling are come upon me, and horror hath overwhelmed me

<sup>iii</sup> Five things he confesses not having revered, and the fifth is not frightening. The incomprehensibleness of the glory, the dread power, the awfulness of the presence, the exact justice — and then thy lovely goodness, bonitas amabilis. The list is built to make the reader expect a fifth terror and gives him an attraction instead. What has gone unreverenced is not only what should have frightened him but what should have drawn him, and the confession is the graver for it.

 5 What judgement shall there be upon me?
 An incorruptible Judge, | A dreadful tribunal,<sup>i</sup>
 A defence without excuse, | Arguments not to be escaped,
 A bitter punishment, | An everlasting Gehenna,
 Pitiless angels, | Hell widening her mouth,

 Behold, O Lord,
 I judge mine own self worthy, liable, guilty 20 of eternal punishment,
 Yea, and of all the hardships of this world.
 { I have deserved death from thee, / Yet still I appeal unto thee, } O Lord, { from thee the just. / to thee the merciful, }<sup>ii</sup> from the throne of justice to the throne of grace.
 Admit, O Lord, this appeal;
 25 If thou admit it not, we perish.
 And, O Lord, doth it not concern thee, if we perish? [Mark 4:38]<sup>iii</sup>

<sup>iii</sup> Mark iv. 38 — the disciples waking Him in the storm: carest thou not that we perish?

<sup>i</sup> The judgement is set out in two columns and they are not a list twice over. The left names what the court is — an incorruptible Judge, a dreadful tribunal, a defence without excuse, arguments not to be escaped — and the right names what the sentence is: an everlasting Gehenna, the fire that is not quenched, the restless worm, chaos immeasurable. Procedure on one side and punishment on the other, and the leaf reads across, so every step of the trial has its outcome standing beside it. The two columns are the plate's own arrangement and must survive into both layers.

<sup>ii</sup> The page ends by lodging a legal APPEAL, and it appeals from God to God. I have deserved death from thee ... yet still I appeal unto thee, O Lord — from the throne of justice to the throne of grace. An appeal in law moves a cause from a lower court to a higher one, and here both courts are the same God's; nothing is denied and no ground of the sentence is contested. The plea is not that the judgement is wrong but that it is not the last word available. Then Admit, O Lord, this appeal; if thou admit it not, we perish — and the last line answers its own verb out of the Gospel.

<sup>iii</sup> The clincher of a courtroom argument is a question asked in a boat. Perimus stands twice in three lines — if thou admit it not, we perish, then Mark's doth it not concern thee, if we perish? — so the appeal's own word is caught up and handed back by Scripture, and the section ends not on a plea but on the disciples' reproach. This verse has now been used four times in the volume and never once the same way — at printed 172 as one of the Gospel cries, at 286 and 294 for two different things again, and here as the last word of a legal appeal. Never conform or cross-refer them.

<sup>i</sup> 1 Tim. ii. 4 — who will have all men to be saved · <sup>ii</sup> Tit. iii. 11 — he that is such is subverted, and sinneth, being condemned of himself · <sup>iii</sup> Gen. xxxii. 10 — Jacob at the ford, before meeting Esau: I am not worthy of the least of all thy mercies · <sup>iv</sup> Luke xv. 19 — the prodigal, rehearsing his speech: make me as one of thy hired servants · <sup>v</sup> Matt. xv. 27 — the woman of Canaan: yet the dogs eat of the crumbs · <sup>vi</sup> Matt. ix. 21 — the woman with the issue of blood: if I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole · <sup>vii</sup> 1 Pet. v. 6 — humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God · <sup>viii</sup> Ps. cxliii. 6 — my soul thirsteth after thee, as a thirsty land · <sup>ix</sup> Luke xviii. 13 — the publican, who would not lift up his eyes · <sup>x</sup> Ps. cxxx. 1 — out of the depths have I cried unto thee, O LORD

<sup>iii</sup> Four sayings of unworthiness, each from a different person, and every one of them was answered. Jacob at the ford, the prodigal on the road, the woman of Canaan, the woman with the issue of blood — and they descend: not worthy of the mercies, not worthy to be a hired servant, not worthy of the crumbs, not worthy to touch the hem. Jacob got the blessing, the prodigal the robe, the Canaanite her crumb, the woman her healing. The ladder of unworthiness is built entirely out of approaches that succeeded, which is the argument it is making without stating it. And the fourth is not a saying of unworthiness at all. The woman said if I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole — the boldest confidence in the Gospels — and the page turns it into I am not worthy to touch the hem of thy garment.

Hominem JESUM

Filium Patris,

Christum Spiritus,

30 Dominum nostrum,

For the glory of thy name, [Ps. 79:9]<sup>i</sup>
     Be merciful to my sin,
         For it is great, [Ps. 25:10]<sup>ii</sup>
         For it is exceeding great.
 5 For the multitude, [Ps. 69:16]
     the great multitude, [Ps. 51:1]
     the riches, [Eph. 2:4]<sup>iii</sup>
     the abundance, [1 Pet. 1:3]
     the superabundance [Rom. 5:20]<sup>iv</sup> 10     Of thy mercies,
 Be merciful to me, O Lord, a sinner,
     O Lord, O Lord, be merciful to me, the chief of sinners. [1 Tim. 1:15]<sup>v</sup>
 O Lord, let mercy triumph [Jas. 2:13]<sup>vi</sup> 15     over thy judgement upon my sin.
 My Lord, where my transgression hath abounded, let thy grace much more abound. [Rom. 5:20]
     Hear, O Lord,
         Be merciful, O Lord,
 20     Hearken, O Lord,
     O Lord, hearken and do,
     Do, and defer not,
         for thine own sake. [Dan. 9:19]<sup>vii</sup>

 Upon the great mystery of godliness,
 25     for us men, and for our salvation,
 God manifest in the flesh, [1 Tim. 3:16]<sup>viii</sup>
     the Man JESUS,
     the Son of the Father,
     the Christ of the Spirit,
 30     our Lord,

<sup>i</sup> Ps. lxxix. 9 — help us, O God of our salvation, for the glory of thy name · <sup>ii</sup> Ps. xxv. 10 — pardon mine iniquity; for it is great · <sup>iii</sup> Eph. ii. 4 — God, who is rich in mercy · <sup>iv</sup> Rom. v. 20 — where sin abounded, grace did much more abound · <sup>v</sup> 1 Tim. i. 15 — sinner; of whom I am chief · <sup>vi</sup> Jas. ii. 13 — mercy rejoiceth against judgment, printed here as superexaltet misericordia · <sup>vii</sup> Dan. ix. 19 — Daniel in the exile: O Lord, hearken and do; defer not, for thine own sake · <sup>viii</sup> 1 Tim. iii. 16 — great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh

<sup>iv</sup> A rising ladder of words for mercy, and it is the second of its kind in Part II. Multitudo · magna multitudo · divitiæ · abundantia · superabundantia — five terms, each stronger than the last, each with its own proof-text, ending on Paul's compound. This is what printed 319 does in Greek with περισσεία · πλεονασμός · ὑπερπλεονασμός · ὑπερπερισσεία, a ladder built out of prefixes; here the same figure is built in Latin out of different words. The two must not be conformed or cross-referred in the text — but they are one habit, and the summit of both is superabundare, which is why the sentence that follows sets the man's abounding transgression against it.

 in his Resurrection; [1 Cor. 15:55]<sup>vi</sup>
 To our Forerunner,
 20 in his Ascension; [Heb. 6:20]<sup>vii</sup>
 To our Advocate,
 in his Session; [Rom. 8:34]<sup>viii</sup>
 To the finisher of our faith,
 in his second Advent. [Heb. 12:2]<sup>ix</sup>

<sup>iii</sup> Tit. ii. 14 — that he might purify unto himself a peculiar people · <sup>iv</sup> Heb. ii. 15 — deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage · <sup>v</sup> Col. ii. 15 — he made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them · <sup>vi</sup> 1 Cor. xv. 55 — O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? · <sup>vii</sup> Heb. vi. 20 — whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus · <sup>viii</sup> Rom. viii. 34 — who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us · <sup>ix</sup> Heb. xii. 2 — looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith

<sup>i</sup> Charismata and Fructus are not two words for one thing: the gifts are given for other people, the fruits grow in the man himself — 1 Cor. xii against Gal. v. 22. A man may have the gift without the fruit, which is the burden of 1 Cor. xiii.

<sup>ii</sup> Four of the six titles are the Vulgate's own word, lifted from the verse printed beside them. Tit. ii. 14 ut mundaret sibi populum gives mundator; Heb. ii. 15 ut liberaret eos gives liberator; Col. ii. 15 palam triumphans illos gives triumphator; Heb. vi. 20 ubi praecursor ... introivit Iesus gives praecursor, the only place the word occurs in the New Testament. The catalogue is quarried, not composed. Exactly two depart, and both depart somewhere. Rom. viii. 34 says only interpellat pro nobis; Advocatus is at 1 John ii. 1. And Heb. xii. 2 reads auctorem fidei et consummatorem where the plate sets Instaurator — the verb of Eph. i. 10, instaurare omnia in Christo. At the second Advent the title is not the finisher of our faith but the restorer of all things; the English keeps "finisher" because the reference is to Hebrews and Part III renders it so.

<sup>ix</sup> The same six titles, in this order and in these mysteries, stand again at printed 402–403, in Part III's Harley recension, turned from thanksgiving into belief — and there they carry not one reference. This is the only page where the catena behind them is visible. The two lists are not conformed and must not be.

 15 and in evil concupiscence,
 Never to forget thy dread
 and terrible judgement-seat.
 And that unceasingly in mine ears
 there sound the sound of the last trump.
 20 That for thy Christ's sake, from thee, the Father that anointest,
 we may receive thine unction, [1 John 2:20]
 the grace that bringeth salvation,
 thine unspeakable gift of the Holy Ghost, [2 Cor. 9:15] 25 in { saving compunction, [Acts 2:37] / clear knowledge, [2 Cor. 2:6] / fervent prayer, [Jas. 5:16] / the shedding abroad of charity, [Rom. 5:5] }<sup>vi</sup>

<sup>i</sup> The braces are not two enemies but one enemy and his translation — { Satanæ / Adversario } is the Hebrew name and its Latin, { Diabolo / Calumniatori } the Greek and its Latin. Read as a list the table has nine adversaries; read as set, five names for one. Three of the five pairs are a courtroom — Adversary met by Mediator, Slanderer by Advocate, Accuser by Intercessor. Each is answered by the answering office, not by a greater power; the two outer rows, destroyer/Saviour and captor/Redeemer, hold the legal three inside them.

<sup>v</sup> The two remedies are crossed. Cold in prayer, he is sent to the Throne, the appearing and the intercession; hot in evil desire, to the judgement-seat and the last trump. The cure for coldness is not more fear, and the cure for heat is not more comfort. Cathedra is the Throne and tribunal the judgement-seat: the same Christ sits in both, and which one to remember depends on what is wrong with the man.

<sup>i</sup> Eph. i. 13, 14 — sealed with that holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance. Not one figure twice: a seal marks a thing as owned; an arrhabo, the Greek ἀρραβών, is a first instalment of the sum itself, not a token for it. <sup>iii</sup> Acts ii. 38 — be baptized ... for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. <sup>iv</sup> Tit. iii. 7 — made heirs according to the hope of eternal life

<sup>ii</sup> Four things forbidden toward the Holy Ghost, and they ascend — quench him, 1 Thess. v. 19, as a man puts out a fire; strive against him, Jer. l. 24, said of Babylon; grieve him, Eph. iv. 30, which can only be said of one who loves; and Heb. x. 29, done despite unto the Spirit of grace, the verse of falling away past renewal. From smothering a flame to insulting a person — and the middle two are where the Spirit stops being treated as a power. Jer. l. 24 is a roman FIFTY, not the figure one; the reference is correct and must not be “corrected” to Jer. i.

<sup>v</sup> The apostles asked this together; he asks it alone. Luke xvii. 5 is adauge nobis fidem, prayed by the twelve at once; the plate sets adauge mihi. A prayer made in company is taken into a closet — as at 327 with Stephen’s prayer for other men, and 335 with Paul’s oath about his kinsmen, and never marked. The mustard seed on the next line is the Lord’s answer, ver. 6.

<sup>vi</sup> Not a description of faith but a concordance of the word. Nine epithets, each with its reference, and every one is the adjective its own verse attaches to fides: dead, Jas. ii. 20; unfeigned, 2 Tim. i. 5, fide non ficta, which the plate reverses to non hypocritica; working by love, Gal. v. 6, fides quæ per caritatem operatur; working with works, Jas. ii. 22, fides cooperabatur operibus; ministering virtue, 2 Pet. i. 5; overcoming the world, 1 John v. 4, hæc est victoria ... fides nostra; most holy, Jude 20, sanctissimæ fidei vestræ. He has collected every place the word is qualified, set the three that condemn against the five that commend, and made the definition out of the collection. Third leaf running built this way — the six titles at 340, the four cells at 341 — the method of the section, not a mannerism. Only non temporariam is not an epithet of faith in its text: Rev. ii. 13 praises Pergamos for holding fast in the days of Antipas, so the fault is named by its opposite.

O God of truth also, and Prince of peace, [Deut. 32:4;<sup>i</sup>
Is. 9:6]

10 I beseech thee, O Lord, according to all thy mercy,<sup>v</sup> that thy wrath may be turned away

for we have sinned against thee;

15 That this place, together with the whole region round about, thou wouldest strengthen with justice, by mercy tempering it.

20 And bring them into thy heavenly Kingdom, even as me also,

And grant me to shew unto them the mercy of God,

in my prayers.

That with these for whom I have prayed,

25 or in whatsoever manner I am bound to pray,

and with all the people of God,

it may be given me to be brought into thy Kingdom,

there to appear in righteousness,<sup>vii</sup>

there to be satisfied with glory.

<sup>i</sup> Deut. xxxii. 4 — a God of truth and without iniquity — and Is. ix. 6, the Prince of Peace. The titles are chosen for what the next line asks: he addresses God as truth and peace, then asks for peace and truth. The petition is made out of the address. · <sup>iii</sup> Acts iv. 32 — the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul · <sup>iv</sup> Is. xlii. 3, and Matt. xii. 20 quoting it — a bruised reed shall he not break. Prophecy and fulfilment cited together, and what both state as a fact about the Servant becomes a name to call him by. · <sup>v</sup> Dan. ix. 16 — let thine anger be turned away from thy city — unmarked in the plate, but Daniel's at the exile, and the volume printed ix. 19 of the same prayer at 339. It takes up Daniel's intercession in reverse, the later verse first. · <sup>vii</sup> Ps. xvii. 15 — the close is a psalm the plate does not mark: I shall behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied ... with thy likeness. The Latin is the Vulgate's in justitia apparebo ... satiabor cum apparuerit gloria tua, word for word — a quotation the reader will otherwise hear only as a cadence.

<sup>ii</sup> Hezekiah said in my days; the plate says in ours. Is. xxxix. 8 is verbatim Vulgate — sit pax et veritas in diebus — but for the last word, where meis has become nostris. The verse is the king's answer to the word that his sons would be carried to Babylon, and it is the most self-regarding sentence in his life. Made plural, the complacency becomes an intercession. The facing leaf does the opposite: at 342 the apostles' adauge nobis fidem is prayed as mihi. Two consecutive pages alter one pronoun in opposite directions, each toward what the prayer needs, neither marking that it has.

<sup>vi</sup> He undertakes to pray for people he has never met, on the sole ground that they love him — mei amantes, etsi mihi ignotos — and asks that they be brought into the Kingdom even as me also. The petition assumes what it cannot check. It is the one intercession here with no scriptural warrant printed beside it, and it asks for them what he has spent the section asking for himself.

 I will praise my God while I have my being. [Ps. 104:33]
 30 Glory be to God on high,

<sup>i</sup> The scripture foot is empty here and on the next leaf, and that is correct: every line is a psalm quoted whole with its reference beside it, so a tag would set the verse under the verse. The figures are a hybrid, checkable twice on this page. Ps. lxxxix. 16 — the AV divides that psalm so the verse is 15; the Vulgate, calling the psalm 88, has 16. Psal. lviii. 12 — AV 11; Vulgate, calling it 56, has 12. The plate keeps the Vulgate's verse-figure under the Hebrew psalm-number, which is neither system entire — a fourth kind of numbering after the plain AV at 300, the plain Vulgate at 274 and the BCP at 433. An introduction claiming one Psalter is answerable for this page.

<sup>ii</sup> et in sæcula, et in sæcula sæculorum — not emphasis, not a doubled line. Ps. cxlv. 21 is Vulgate in sæculum et in sæculum sæculi, for the Greek's unto the age, and unto the age of the age. The English doubles because the Latin does; a later pass must not tidy one away.

<sup>iii</sup> Here the plate is against both English Psalters and the English follows the plate. Ps. cxxxviii. 1 in the Hebrew has before the gods will I sing praise — so the AV, and so Coverdale. The Latin is the Vulgate's in conspectu Angelorum, the Septuagint's reading, and our English keeps angels. Not a departure from CONVENTIONS §9 but the case it exists for: the register is Coverdale's, the text is whatever Andrewes quoted.

<sup>iv</sup> The one line not from the Psalter, and where the leaf turns. Rev. iv. 11 is the song of the four-and-twenty elders, arriving straight after he calls himself an unworthy sinner. Having exhausted the earth's book of praise he borrows heaven's — and the section ends in the twelve-membered doxology of Rev. v, so this is the hinge, not an interruption.

THE CONFESSION OF PRAISE.

Me, that sin, O Lord, and repent not,<sup>v</sup>
 and am therefore altogether unworthy,
 It were more fitting to lie prostrate before thee,
 15 and with weeping and groaning to beg pardon for my sins, than to praise thee with a polluted mouth.
 Yet, trusting in thine inborn goodness,
 Blessed art thou, O God, 20 Who hast created me, and brought me into this life,
 and hast ordered me, that I should be a living soul, and not a senseless thing,<sup>vi</sup>
 a man, | not a brute,
 a man of the city, | not a barbarian,
 25 free-born, | not house-born a bondman,
 lawfully begotten, | not a bastard,

<sup>i</sup> Luke ii. 14 — the angels over Bethlehem: on earth peace, good will toward men · <sup>iii</sup> Rev. v. 12 — Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour; Rev. v. 13 — be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb · <sup>iv</sup> Matt. xxi. 9 — the crowds at the entry into Jerusalem: Hosanna in the highest

<sup>ii</sup> The plate cites two verses and sets twelve terms; neither verse has twelve. Rev. v. 12 gives seven — power, riches, wisdom, strength, honour, glory, blessing — and v. 13 four, all already among the seven. Five are therefore from elsewhere in the book: might and thanksgiving stand together at Rev. vii. 12, and salvation in the cry at Rev. vii. 10, whose own words — unto our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb — are the two lines this grid runs into. The Apocalypse's own lists run to seven, twice; this one runs to twelve, and the page does not say why.

<sup>v</sup> The Confession of Praise opens by arguing that he has no right to make it — sinning and unrepentant, it would be more fitting to lie prostrate and beg pardon than praise God with a polluted mouth. He praises anyway, on one ground: de ingenita Tua bonitate confidens, trusting a goodness that is God's by nature and not a response to anything in him. The whole catalogue hangs from that clause.

<sup>vi</sup> The catalogue is the Roman law of persons. Liber against Verna is not free against slave but free against a slave born in the house; Legitimus against Spurius is the law of lawful issue; Homo civilis against Barbarus, citizen against outsider. He goes through the divisions of the status personarum one by one, giving thanks for a legal condition as another man might for health. The same catalogue stands again at printed 428, in Part III §4's Quod brace — with the antitheses stripped out (Vivo · Ratione præditus · Civilis · Liber · Ingenuus · Honesta stirpe). Here every good is defined by what he might have been instead; there they are simply goods. Ingenuus is the very term answering this page's non Verna. Not to be conformed: the antitheses are the whole difference.

Who, according to thy great mercy,
     hast begotten us again unto a lively hope,
     by the resurrection of JESUS CHRIST, 20           to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled,
             and that fadeth not away,

 Who hast blessed me with all blessing 25           spiritual in heavenly places in Christ. [Eph. 1:3]<sup>vi</sup>
 Who hast comforted me in all my tribulation,

<sup>v</sup> 1 Pet. i. 3 — begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ; and in the editor's own bracket [4], an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you — the page quotes both verses nearly entire. · <sup>vi</sup> Eph. i. 3 — blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ

<sup>i</sup> A proverb, not a description. Mali corvi malum ovum — the Greek κακοῦ κόρακος κακὸν ᾠόν, a bad crow's bad egg, said of a man whose badness is inherited and expected. The line thanks God not for respectable parents but for not being the sort of son people say that about.

<sup>iii</sup> The most concrete line in the catalogue names what poverty actually costs: an honest estate, so that I have need neither to flatter, nor to borrow. Not wealth — enough not to have to fawn and not to have to owe. The two are set as one item.

<sup>iv</sup> The gifts are divided as the schools divided them — bona gratiae, naturae, fortunae — and only the first is subdivided, into redemption and calling. The same three stand again at printed 429 as Pro bonis { naturæ ... }, the fourth recension parallel. Not to be conformed.

<sup>i</sup> 2 Cor. i. 4 — who comforteth us in all our tribulation; 2 Cor. i. 5 — as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth. Written out of the affliction in Asia in which he despaired of life, and quoted nearly whole above. <sup>ii</sup> Dan. ii. 23 — Daniel's thanksgiving the night the king's dream was shewn him, with the executioner already appointed for the wise men of Babylon. His words stand in the four lines above; the bracket is the editor's.

<sup>iii</sup> Three pairs, and the columns are creation against redemption — what God made and marked (hands, countenance, name) against what Christ bought (blood, purchase, adoption), each left-hand title answered by the cost of the right. The two unpaired lines run the full measure and close the table Father, Son, Spirit, Church.

25 O Domine, minor sum omnibus miserationibus Tuis, et veritate Tua quam explevisti servo Tuo.   Gen. xxxii. 10.

Et quid addam adhuc ut loquar ad Te?

Tu enim nosti servum Tuum, Domine, Domine mi.

2 Sam. vii. 20.

5 Quis ego sum, Domine, servus Tuus, et quæ domus mea, quoniam respexisti super canem mortuum similem mei,

2 Sam. ix. 8.

Quoniam adhuc usque dilexisti me? [Jo. xiii. 1.]

Quid retribuam Domino pro omnibus quæ tribuit mihi?

10 Psal. cxvi. 12.

Quam gratiarum actionem possumus Deo retribuere in omni gaudio quo gaudemus coram Eo? [1 Thess. iii. 9.]

Qui dignatus es me, Domine, sancta hac die, et hora hac levare animam meam, et lau-

15 dare Te, et offerre debitam Tibi gloriam,

Ipse, Domine, ab anima mea suscipe spirituale hoc sacrificium: illudque recipiens ad Te in spirituale Tuum Altare, digneris vicem ejus mittere in me gratiam SS. Spiritus Tui.

20 Visita me in bonitate Tua,

Ignosce mihi peccatum omne, tam voluntarium
quam involuntarium.

Libera me ab æternis suppliciis, etiam et omnibus
hujus mundi ærumnis.

25 Transmuta cogitationes meas in pietatem,

Sanctifica spiritum, animum et corpus meum,

Et da mihi adorare et placere Tibi

in pietate et sanctitate vitæ usque ad extremum vitæ terminum.

- And what can I say more<sup>i</sup> to speak unto thee?
For thou knowest thy servant, O Lord, my Lord.
[2 Sam. 7:20]<sup>ii</sup>
- 5 Who am I, O Lord, thy servant, and what is my house, that thou hast looked upon such a dead dog as I am,
[2 Sam. 9:8]<sup>iii</sup>
- For that thou hast loved me hitherto? [John 13:1]<sup>iv</sup>
What reward shall I give unto the Lord for all that he hath done unto me?
[Ps. 116:12]<sup>v</sup>
- 10 What thanks can we render to God again for all the joy wherewith we joy before him? [1 Thess. 3:9]<sup>vi</sup>
- Who hast vouchsafed me, O Lord, this holy day, and this hour, to lift up my soul, and to 15 praise thee, and to offer thee the glory that is thy due,
Do thou thyself, O Lord, receive from my soul this<sup>vii</sup> spiritual sacrifice: and receiving it unto thee upon thy spiritual Altar, vouchsafe to send down upon me in return the grace of thy Most Holy Spirit.
- 20 Visit me in thy goodness, Forgive me every sin, both voluntary and involuntary.
Deliver me from everlasting torments, yea, and from all the miseries of this world.
- 25 Transmute my thoughts into godliness,
Sanctify my spirit, and my soul, and my body,
And grant me to worship and to please thee in godliness and holiness of life even unto the utmost end of life.

<sup>ii</sup> 2 Sam. vii. 20 — David after Nathan brought him the promise of a house: what can David say more unto thee? ·

<sup>iii</sup> 2 Sam. ix. 8 — Mephibosheth, lame in both feet, Saul's grandson, called to eat at David's table continually: what is thy servant, that thou shouldest look upon such a dead dog as I am? The bitterest self-naming in the Old Testament, and it is spoken by a man being shewn kindness. · <sup>iv</sup> John xiii. 1 — the Supper: having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end · <sup>v</sup> Ps. cxvi. 12 — what shall I render unto the LORD for all his benefits toward me? · <sup>vi</sup> 1 Thess. iii. 9 — Paul of the Thessalonians: what thanks can we render to God again ... for all the joy wherewith we joy for your sakes before our God?

<sup>i</sup> Five questions in a row, and not one of them is answered. A section headed Protestation of Thankfulness opens by finding nothing to say: David after the promise, Mephibosheth at the king's table, the psalmist, Paul. Each asks what can be said or given back, and the page simply sets the next question under the last. The third is not a question in its own text. John xiii. 1 is a statement — having loved his own, he loved them unto the end — and the plate turns it into For that thou hast loved me hitherto? The volume's habit of changing a verse's mood, elsewhere indicative into imperative, here makes an indicative interrogative.

<sup>vii</sup> From here the private prayer takes the shape of the EUCHARISTIC ANAPHORA. A spiritual sacrifice is offered, received upon thy spiritual Altar, and the Spirit is asked to be sent down in return — which is an epiclesis, the invocation that follows the offering in the Greek liturgies. And voluntary and involuntary is their formula too, ἐκούσιον καὶ ἀκούσιον, which no English rite has. A man alone in his chamber is praying the shape of the Church's central action over himself.

Doxologia.

Ei autem, qui potens est omnia facere superabundanter quam petimus aut intelligimus, secundum virtutem
quæ operatur in nobis,

5 Ipsi gloria in Ecclesia et in Christo, in omnes generationes sæcula sæculorum. [Eph. iii. 20, 21.]

Sicut adipe et pinguedine replebitur anima mea; et labiis exultationis laudabit os meum. [Psal. lxiii. 5.]

Pater noster,

10 Qui es in cœlis,

1. Sanctificetur | { Nomen

2. Veniat | Regnum } Tuum.

3. Fiat | Voluntas Tua,

Sicut in cœlo

15 sic et in terra.

4. Da nobis hodie | Panem nostrum quotidianum,

5. Et dimitte nobis | Debita nostra,

Sicut et nos

dimittimus

20 Debitoribus nostris,

6. Et ne nos inducas in tentationem,

7. Sed libera nos a malo.

Quia Tuum est regnum, potentia et gloria,

25 in sæcula sæculorum.

Amen.

The Doxology.

Now unto him that is able to do all things exceeding abundantly above that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us,

5 Unto him be glory in the Church and in Christ, unto all generations, world without end. [Eph. 3:20, 21]<sup>i</sup>

My soul shall be satisfied even as it were with marrow and fatness; and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips. [Ps. 63:5]<sup>ii</sup>

Our Father,
10 Which art in heaven,
1. Hallowed be | { thy Name,<sup>iii</sup>
2. Come | thy Kingdom. }
3. Be done | thy Will,
As in heaven
15 so also in earth.
4. Give us this day | our daily bread,
5. And forgive us | our debts,
As we also forgive
20 our debtors,
6. And lead us not into temptation,
7. But deliver us from evil.
For thine is the kingdom,<sup>iv</sup>
the power and the glory, 25 world without end.
Amen.

<sup>i</sup> Eph. iii. 20 — unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us; Eph. iii. 21 — unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end

· <sup>ii</sup> Ps. lxiii. 5 — my soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness; and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips

<sup>iii</sup> The Lord's Prayer is not simply said here — it is TAKEN APART, in exactly the way the Divisio two leaves back took prayer apart. The seven petitions are numbered, their verbs pulled out into a left column and their objects set right. And the brace is doing grammar: { Nomen / Regnum } Tuum sets one Tuum to serve two petitions, which English cannot copy and must say twice. The prayer is being read as a structure, by a man who has just finished drawing the structure of prayer in general. The volume returns to it twice more — §26 Oratio Dominica variata and §31's petition-by-petition meditation — and the three are not to be conformed; this is the plainest of them.

ORATIO DOMINICA VARIATA.

I.

1. Invocetur Nomen Tuum a nobis.
2. Esto Tu protector noster,
5 et merces valde magna. [Gen. xv. 1.]
3. Quodcunque verbum a Te procedit, ne sit in nobis contra quicquam dicere
malum vel bonum. [Num. xxiv. 13.]
4. Da nobis panem ad comedendum,
10 et vestes ad induendum. [Gen. xxviii. 20.]
5. Et nunc dimitte peccatum et injustitiam servorum Tuorum. [1 Reg. viii. 36.]
6. Et, O Domine, ne sollicite cogitemus in cordibus nostris tota die. [Matt. vi. 34.]
- 15 Et ne apprehendant nos mala. [Psal. xl. 12.]

II.

1. Sit Nomen Tuum benedictum, et nunc et in sæcula. [Psal. cxiii. 2.]
2. Propter morositatem populi ne regnare facias super 20 nos homines hypocritas. [Job. xxxiv. 30.]
3. Ut Tibi, Domine, videtur, sic fiat. [1 Sam. iii. 18.]
4. Pro tritico ne proveniat urtica, pro hordeo ne lolium. [Job. xxxi. 40.]
5. Peccavi; quid faciam Tibi, O custos hominum?
25 [Job. vii. 20.]
6. Fœdus pangam cum sensibus meis, ut ne cogitem quidem de malo. [Job. xxxi. 1.]

THE LORD'S PRAYER VARIED.

I.

1. Let thy Name be called upon by us.<sup>i</sup>
2. Be thou our protector, and our exceeding great reward. [Gen. 15:1]<sup>ii</sup>
3. Whatsoever word proceedeth from thee, let it not be in us to say aught against it, bad or good. [Num. 24:13]<sup>iii</sup>
4. Give us bread to eat, and raiment to put on. [Gen. 28:20]<sup>iv</sup>
5. And now forgive the sin and the unrighteousness of thy servants. [1 Kings 8:36]<sup>v</sup>
6. And, O Lord, let us not take anxious thought in our hearts all the day long. [Matt. 6:34]<sup>vi</sup>
- 15 And let not evils take hold upon us. [Ps. 40:12]<sup>vii</sup>

II.

1. Blessed be thy Name, both now and for evermore. [Ps. 113:2]<sup>viii</sup>
2. For the frowardness of the people make not to reign over us men that are hypocrites. [Job 34:30]<sup>ix</sup>
- 20 3. As it seemeth good to thee, O Lord, so let it be done. [1 Sam. 3:18]<sup>x</sup>
4. Let not the nettle come up instead of wheat, nor cockle instead of barley. Job 31 [40]<sup>xi</sup>
5. I have sinned; what shall I do unto thee, O thou preserver of men?
[Job 7:20]<sup>xii</sup>
- 25 6. I will make a covenant with my senses, that I think not so much as upon evil. [Job 31:1]<sup>xiii</sup>

<sup>ii</sup> Gen. xv. 1 — the word to Abram in the vision, before he had a son: I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward · <sup>iii</sup> Num. xxiv. 13 — Balaam, the prophet hired to curse Israel: I cannot go beyond the commandment of the LORD, to do either good or bad of mine own mind. The petition thy will be done is put into the mouth of a man who wanted to do otherwise and could not. · <sup>iv</sup> Gen. xxviii. 20 — Jacob's vow at Bethel, with the stone still under his head: if God will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on · <sup>v</sup> 1 Kings viii. 36 — Solomon at the dedication of the temple: forgive the sin of thy servants · <sup>vi</sup> Matt. vi. 34 — take therefore no thought for the morrow · <sup>vii</sup> Ps. xl. 12 — innumerable evils have compassed me about · <sup>viii</sup> Ps. cxiii. 2 — blessed be the name of the LORD from this time forth and for evermore · <sup>ix</sup> Job xxxiv. 30 — Elihu: that the hypocrite reign not, lest the people be ensnared — set II's petition for the KINGDOM is a prayer against bad government. · <sup>x</sup> 1 Sam. iii. 18 — Eli, when the child Samuel had told him the whole doom of his house: it is the LORD: let him do what seemeth him good. Thy will be done, said by a man who has just been told he is ruined. · <sup>xi</sup> Job xxxi. 40 — Job's self-curse turned into the petition for daily bread by one word. Closing his oath of innocence Job says let thistles grow instead of wheat, and cockle instead of barley; the plate sets pro tritico ne proveniat urtica, pro hordeo ne lolium — let them NOT. The curse a man called down on himself if he lied becomes the fourth petition. · <sup>xii</sup> Job vii. 20 — I have sinned; what shall I do unto thee, O thou preserver of men? — Job's words made the petition for pardon · <sup>xiii</sup> Job xxxi. 1 — I made a covenant with mine eyes — but the plate widens it twice: the covenant is made cum sensibus meis, with all the senses, and its object is ut ne cogitem quidem de malo, that he should not so much as think of evil, where Job's own concern was narrower.

<sup>i</sup> The prayer said plainly on the leaf before is now said again SEVEN TIMES OVER, petition by petition, in other men's words — thy kingdom come by the word to Abram, thy will be done by Balaam, daily bread by Jacob's vow at Bethel, forgiveness by Solomon at the dedication. Then set II begins the seven again with different speakers. This is the method of §§33–34, the creed said in the words of ten confessors — applied here to the Lord's Prayer, and applied earlier. The petitions are never restated in Andrewes' own words at all.

7. Sexies eripe me ex angustiis, et septima vice ne malum me attingat. [Job. v. 19.]

III.

1. Sanctitas Domino. [Exod. xxviii. 36.]
 5 2. Fiamus Tibi Regale Sacerdotium. [1 Pet. ii. 9.]
 3. In ore Tuo ingrediemur et egrediemur. [Jo. x. 9.]
 4. Non in solo pane vitam ponamus, sed in omni verbo quod egreditur de ore Tuo.
[Matt. iv. 4.]
 10 5. Tolle transgressionem, iniquitates, peccata nostra.
[Psal. xxv. 18.]
 6. Ne in provocationem. [Psal. xcv. 8.] Ne in amaritudinem. [Heb. xii. 15.]
 7. Ab Angelo exterminante, et omni plaga lethifera, 15 [2 Sam. xxiv. 16.]

Libera nos, Domine.

IV.

1. Sit Nomen Tuum benedictum, nunc et in sæcula:
[Psal. cxliii. 2.]
 20 Ab oriente usque ad occidentem laudetur Nomen
Tuum. [Ver. 3.]
 2. Esto nobis spes, et portio in terra viventium. [Psal.
cxlii. 5.]
 3. Doce nos facere voluntatem Tuam, quoniam Deus 25 noster es Tu; Spiritus Tuus bonus deducat nos in terram rectam. [Psal. cxliii. 10.]
 4. Oculi omnium sperant in Te, Domine, ut des illis

7. Six times deliver me out of my straits, and the seventh time let no evil touch me. [Job 5:19]<sup>i</sup>

III.

1. Holiness to the Lord. [Exod. 28:36]<sup>ii</sup>
 5 2. Let us be made unto thee a Royal Priesthood. [1 Pet. 2:9]<sup>iii</sup>
 3. By thy mouth shall we go in and go out. [John 10:9]<sup>iv</sup>
 4. Let us not set our life upon bread alone, but upon every word that proceedeth out of thy mouth.
[Matt. 4:4]<sup>v</sup>
 10 5. Take away our transgressions, our iniquities, our sins.
[Ps. 25:18]<sup>vi</sup>
 6. Not into the provocation. [Ps. 95:8] Not into bitter-<sup>vii</sup> ness. [Heb. 12:15]
 7. From the destroying Angel, and from every deadly plague, 15 [2 Sam. 24:16]<sup>viii</sup>
Deliver us, O Lord.

IV.

1. Blessed be thy Name, now and for evermore:
[Ps. 113:2]<sup>ix</sup>
 20 From the rising of the sun unto the going down of the same let thy Name be praised. [v. 3]
 2. Be thou our hope, and our portion in the land of the living. [Ps.<sup>x</sup>
142:5]
 3. Teach us to do thy will, for thou art 25 our God; let thy good Spirit lead us forth into the land of righteousness. [Ps. 143:10]<sup>xi</sup>
 4. The eyes of all wait upon thee, O Lord, that thou mayest give them

<sup>i</sup> Job v. 19 — Eliphaz: he shall deliver thee in six troubles: yea, in seven there shall no evil touch thee · <sup>ii</sup> Exod. xxviii. 36 — the golden plate of the mitre, graven, like the engravings of a signet, HOLINESS TO THE LORD · <sup>iii</sup> 1 Pet. ii. 9 — ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation · <sup>iv</sup> John x. 9 — I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out · <sup>v</sup> Matt. iv. 4 — the petition for daily bread said in the words that refuse bread. Christ to the tempter: man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. This is the second time in two leaves that the fourth petition is made out of a text against bread — set II built it from Job's self-curse of thistles for wheat. The petition is never simply asked. · <sup>vi</sup> Ps. xxv. 18 — look upon mine affliction and my pain; and forgive all my sins · <sup>vii</sup> Ps. xciv. 8 — harden not your heart, as in the provocation; Heb. xii. 15 — lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you. Two texts for the sixth petition, and both name a place in the wilderness where a people went wrong. · <sup>viii</sup> 2 Sam. xxiv. 16 — the angel stretching out his hand upon Jerusalem, and the LORD saying It is enough: stay now thine hand · <sup>ix</sup> Ps. cxlii. 2 — blessed be the name of the LORD from this time forth and for evermore. It opened set II on the leaf before and opens set IV here: the one verse the sets reuse is the one that blesses the Name, which is the petition they all begin from. · <sup>x</sup> Ps. cxlii. 5 — thou art my refuge and my portion in the land of the living · <sup>xi</sup> Ps. cxliii. 10 — thy spirit is good; lead me into the land of righteousness

<sup>ii</sup> Set III opens the seven again, and its first petition is a thing engraved, not said. Sanctitas Domino — HOLINESS TO THE LORD — is the inscription cut on the golden plate of the high priest's mitre, worn on the forehead. For hallowed be thy Name the page does not quote a prayer but a piece of metal, and the two that follow keep the priestly setting: a royal priesthood, and going in and out by the door.

escam in tempore. Aperi Tu manum Tuam, et imple omne animal benedictione. [Psal. cxlv. 15, 16.]

5. Miserere, O Deus, nostri, secundum magnam misericordiam Tuam, et secundum multitudinem miserationum Tuarum dele peccata nostra. [Psal. li. 1.]

6. Nequando proficiat inimicus in nobis, neque filius iniquitatis apponat nocere nobis. [Psal. lxxxix. 23.]

7. Ne veniant super nos mala, et ne appropinquet flagellum tabernaculis nostris. [Psal. xci. 10.]

V.

1. Sit nomen Tuum arx munita nobis, currentes ad illud exaltemur. [Prov. xviii. 10.]

2. Per Te reges regnant; ut deductiones aquarum, corda eorum in manu Tua, quo vis inclinare.
Flecte ad bonum, O Domine. [Prov. viii. 15; xxi. 1.]

3. Ne sint multæ cogitationes in cordibus nostris; sed consilium Tuum maneat, et fiat, O Domine. [Prov.
xix. 21.]

4. Duo rogavi Te; ne deneges mihi antequam moriar.
Divitias et mendicitatem ne des mihi; tribue
mihi necessaria et sufficientia. [Prov. xxx. 7, 8.]

5. Quis cum fiducia dicere potest, Mundus sum a peccato? Misericors esto servis Tuis, qui pecca-verunt Tibi: et sana animas eorum. [Prov. xx.
9. Psal. xli. 5.]

6. Longe fac ab occasione peccandi viam meam: ne appropinquem ad ostia domus ejus. [Prov. v. 8.]

7. Ne mittas nobis Angelum crudelem: sed longe amoveantur a domibus nostris omnia mala. [Prov.
xvii. 11. 13.]

their meat in due season. Open thou thine hand, and fill every living thing with blessing. [Ps. 145:15, 16]<sup>i</sup>

5. Have mercy upon us, O God, after thy great lovingkindness, and according to the multitude of thy mercies do away our sins. [Ps. 51:1]<sup>ii</sup>

6. Let not the enemy prevail against us, neither let the son of wickedness set himself to hurt us. [Ps. 89:23]<sup>iii</sup>

7. Let no evils come upon us, neither let the scourge come nigh our dwellings. [Ps. 91:10]

V.

1. Let thy Name be a strong tower unto us,<sup>iv</sup> that running unto it we may be set up on high. [Prov. 18:10]<sup>v</sup>

2. By thee kings reign; that, as the rivers of waters, their hearts may be in thy hand, to turn them whither thou wilt.

15 Incline them unto good, O Lord. [Prov. 8:15; 21:1]<sup>vi</sup>

3. Let there not be many devices in our hearts; but let thy counsel stand, and be done, O Lord. [Prov.<sup>vii</sup> 19:21]

4. Two things have I asked of thee; deny me them not before I die.

20 Give me neither riches nor beggary; grant me things needful and sufficient. [Prov. 30:7, 8]<sup>viii</sup>

5. Who can say with confidence, I am clean from sin? Be merciful unto thy servants, which have sinned against thee: and heal their souls. [Prov. 20:

25 9. Ps. 41:5]<sup>ix</sup>

6. Remove my way far from the occasion of sinning: that I come not nigh the doors of her house. [Prov. 5:8]

7. Send not unto us a cruel Angel: but let far be removed from our houses all evils. [Prov.
30 17:11, 13]

<sup>i</sup> Ps. cxlv. 15 — thou givest them their meat in due season; Ps. cxlv. 16 — thou openest thine hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing. <sup>ii</sup> Ps. li. 1 — have mercy upon me, O God, according to thy lovingkindness. <sup>iii</sup> Ps. lxxxix. 23 — the enemy shall not exact upon him; nor the son of wickedness afflict him. <sup>v</sup> Prov. xviii. 10 — the name of the LORD is a strong tower: the righteous runneth into it, and is safe. <sup>vi</sup> Prov. xviii. 15 — by me kings reign; Prov. xxi. 1 — the king's heart is in the hand of the LORD, as the rivers of water: he turneth it whithersoever he will. Flecte ad bonum is in neither verse — the page adds the petition to the two texts. <sup>viii</sup> Prov. xxx. 7 — Agur: two things have I required of thee; deny me them not before I die; Prov. xxx. 8 — give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me. <sup>ix</sup> Prov. xx. 9 — who can say, I have made my heart clean?; Ps. xli. 5 — the plate's figure, which is the Vulgate's verse-number under the Hebrew psalm-number: the AV and the Prayer Book have it at xli. 4, heal my soul; for I have sinned against thee. Second page to show that hybrid, after printed 344.

<sup>iv</sup> Set V says the whole prayer out of the WISDOM books, almost all of it Proverbs — where sets I and II used men speaking in a story, this one uses a book of sentences. And its fourth petition is at last the natural one. After Job's self-curse at 351 and man shall not live by bread alone at 352, set V reaches Agur's feed me with food convenient for me — the one place in Scripture where a man asks for exactly daily bread. Three leaves, three treatments, and the plain sense comes last.

<sup>vii</sup> Prov. xix. 21 turned into the third petition, borrowing the Pater Noster's own verb. The proverb states a fact — there are many devices in a man's heart; nevertheless the counsel of the LORD, that shall stand — and the page asks it: let there not be many devices in our hearts; but let thy counsel stand, et fiat. Fiat is the word of thy will be done, imported into the proverb standing in for it.

At the Word.

O open thou mine eyes, that I may see the wondrous things of thy law.

[Ps. 119:18]

Take away, O Lord, the veil of my heart, while I read the Scriptures.

[2 Cor. 3:14]<sup>xi</sup>

Blessed art thou, O Lord; O teach me thy statutes.

[Ps. 119:12]<sup>xii</sup>

<sup>ii</sup> Rom. ii. 24 — the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles through you · <sup>iii</sup> Isa. lx. 12 — the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted · <sup>iv</sup> Isa. xlvii. 10 — my counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure · <sup>v</sup> Isa. lv. 10 — that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater. Baculum panis, the STAFF of bread, is not in that verse — it is the prophets' phrase for the staff that is broken in famine, brought in here to ask that it be given. · <sup>vi</sup> Isa. lxiv. 9 — be not wroth very sore, O LORD, neither remember iniquity for ever: behold, see, we beseech thee, we are all thy people. The volume has used this verse once already, at printed 109, in the confession — here it is the fifth petition. Never conform the two places. · <sup>vii</sup> Ezek. xiv. 4 — that putteth the stumblingblock of his iniquity before his face · <sup>viii</sup> Ezek. xv. 7 — I will set my face against them, asked here as set not thy face against us · <sup>ix</sup> Luke v. 5 — Peter at the draught of fishes: Master, we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing · <sup>xi</sup> 2 Cor. iii. 14 — the veil untaken away in the reading of the old testament · <sup>xii</sup> Ps. cxix. 12 — blessed art thou, O LORD: teach me thy statutes

<sup>i</sup> The later sets are each quarried from ONE region of Scripture, and set VI completes the sweep — IV the Psalms, V Proverbs, VI the Prophets, where the first three ranged. The Lord's Prayer is said through the whole Bible, a region at a time. And set VI is the harshest: thy kingdom come is asked as let all the nations and kings perish that serve not thy kingdom. Nothing earlier is spoken in that voice, and the page does not soften it.

<sup>x</sup> A new section opens with a key, the plainest statement in the volume of how Andrewes reads a miracle. Five pairs read across: the world is the sea, men the fishes, the Church the boat, the preacher the fisherman, the Word the net. The draught of fishes set out as a working diagram for a man about to preach, hung on Peter's we have toiled all the night and taken nothing. This table IS read across — unlike the Divisio at 347.

of the Prophet, and take away his sins, touch thou my lips, 10 that am a sinner, and cleanse me from every stain, and make me meet to declare thine oracles.

O Lord, open thou my lips, and my mouth shall shew forth thy praise. [Ps. 51:15]

O Lord, my Lord, give me the tongue of the learned, that I may know 15 what word I ought to speak; and if any word be to the edifying of the need, that thou mayest give grace unto the hearers. [Isa. 50:4. Eph. 4:29]<sup>v</sup>

Let speech be given me in the opening of my mouth. [Eph. 6:19]<sup>vi</sup>

I have opened my mouth wide, O Lord: do thou fill it. [Ps. 81:10]<sup>vii</sup>

20 At the Entering of the Temple.

I, in the multitude of thy mercy,
will come into thy house.

I will worship toward thy holy Temple in thy fear. [Ps. 5:7]

25 Hear, O Lord, the voice of my prayer in the time when I cry unto thee, and lift up my hands toward thy holy Temple. [Ps. 28:2]<sup>viii</sup>

I will receive thy lovingkindness, O Lord,

<sup>i</sup> 1 Sam. x. 26 — of the band that went with Saul: whose hearts God had touched · <sup>ii</sup> Eph. i. 8 — the plate's figure. The line wants verse 18, the eyes of your understanding being enlightened, which is what illumina sensus cordis renders; i. 8 is he hath abounded toward us in all wisdom and prudence. Kept as printed — it stands on the volume's running list of wrong references with [Jer. l. 24.] and [Dan. vi. 4.] · <sup>iii</sup> Ps. li. 15 — O Lord, open thou my lips; Ps. lxxi. 8 — let my mouth be filled with thy praise. Ps. li. 15 returns alone nine lines below — the one verse this page says twice, and the page is about nothing but the mouth. · <sup>v</sup> Isa. l. 4 — the Lord GOD hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season; Eph. iv. 29 — that it may minister grace unto the hearers · <sup>vi</sup> Eph. vi. 19 — Paul asking prayer for himself: that utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly · <sup>vii</sup> Ps. lxxxi. 10 — open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it · <sup>viii</sup> Ps. xxviii. 2 — when I lift up my hands toward thy holy oracle

<sup>iv</sup> Carbo duplicis naturæ — the COAL OF THE TWOFOLD NATURE — is a title for Christ, and it is not in Isaiah. The prophet's coal, taken from the altar with tongs and laid on his mouth, is read as the coal that is wood and fire at once, and so God and man at once; the tongs are what handles what cannot be touched. The reading is Greek — the ἄνθραξ of the Eastern liturgies, where the same coal is what the communicant receives — the fourth mark of that rite in six leaves, after 349's anaphora and voluntary and involuntary and 350's doxology, and the strongest, because it carries a whole Christology in one noun.

<sup>vii</sup> Ps. lxxxi. 10 is God's own command, answered as though it had been obeyed. Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it — the psalm; Dilato os meum, Domine: Tu imple — I have opened my mouth wide: do thou fill it. The condition is reported as performed and the promise called in. Not an indicative made imperative, but a promise TAKEN UP and its half discharged.

<sup>i</sup> Ps. xlviii. 9 — we have thought of thy lovingkindness, O God, in the midst of thy temple · <sup>ii</sup> Ps. xxvi. 8 — LORD, I have loved the habitation of thy house, and the place where thine honour dwelleth · <sup>iii</sup> Ps. xxvi. 7 — that I may publish with the voice of thanksgiving, and tell of all thy wondrous works · <sup>iv</sup> Ps. xxvii. 4 — one thing have I desired of the LORD, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the LORD all the days of my life · <sup>v</sup> Ps. xxvii. 8 — when thou saidst, Seek ye my face; my heart said unto thee, Thy face, LORD, will I seek · <sup>vi</sup> Ps. cxviii. 19 — open to me the gates of righteousness: I will go into them, and I will praise the LORD · <sup>viii</sup> John xx. 28 — Thomas, who would not believe till he had seen: my Lord and my God. At the door of a building where nothing is to be seen, the worshipper says the words of the one apostle who insisted on seeing — and the next line is the blessing on those who do not. · <sup>ix</sup> John xx. 29 — blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed · <sup>x</sup> Ps. xxxii. 6 — the plate's figure. I said, I will confess my sins unto the LORD stands at verse 5 in the Authorised Version and at 6 in the Prayer Book Psalter, which is what the plate follows here — a third numbering system on show in this volume, beside the plain Vulgate and the hybrid at 344 and 353.

<sup>vii</sup> The same verse is said twice on this leaf, once in each language — Ps. xxvi. 8 stands in Latin at the door, Domine, dilexi decorem domus Tuæ, and returns fourteen lines later in Greek, Κύριε, ἡγάπησα εὐπρέπειαν οἴκου σου. The English renders both identically, which is the rule for a separated doubler; it is not a gloss and neither line may be dropped. He does not merely cite the Greek Psalter — he prays in it, which joins the coal at 355, the anaphora and the Greek formula at 349, and the doxology at 350.

yet thrice, as Daniel. [Dan. 6:4]<sup>ii</sup>

10 If not, as Solomon, at length, [1 Kings 8:22–53]

yet as the Publican, briefly. [Luke 18:13]

If not the whole night through, as Christ, [Luke 6:12]

If not as the rich, [Mark 12:41]

yet as the widow. [v. 42]

25 If not the half, [Luke 19:8]

yet the thirtieth part. [Deut. 26:12]<sup>viii</sup>

If not above thy power,

yet according to thy power. [2 Cor. 8:3]<sup>ix</sup>

<sup>ii</sup> Dan. vi. 4 — the plate's figure. Daniel kneeling three times a day is at vi. 10; vi. 4 is the presidents seeking occasion against him. Kept as printed — it stands on the volume's running list with [Jer. l. 24.] and [Eph. i. 8.] ·

<sup>iii</sup> Job xlii. 6 — wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes · <sup>iv</sup> Ps. lxiii. 6 — the reference supplies a word, not a sense. When I remember thee upon my bed is the psalmist doing well; the page takes only lectis from it and makes the bed the thing to be avoided — if not on the ground and in ashes, yet at least not lying down. · <sup>v</sup> Luke xvi. 19 — the rich man of the parable: clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day · <sup>vi</sup> Dan. i. 8 — Daniel at the king's table, who would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat · <sup>vii</sup> Lev. v. 16 — the trespass offering: he shall make amends ... and shall add the fifth part thereto · <sup>viii</sup> Deut. xxvi. 12 — the third year's tithe, the year of tithing. The line offers a THIRTIETH part (tricesimam partem), which is not what that verse commands, nor any tithe. Kept as printed and on the running list. · <sup>ix</sup> 2 Cor. viii. 3 — of the Macedonians: to their power, yea, and beyond their power, they were willing of themselves

<sup>i</sup> Eleven pairs, and every one of them is a bargain struck downwards: if not ... yet. He sets a scriptural ceiling, concedes he cannot reach it, and names the least he will do instead — seven times a day like David, or at any rate three like Daniel; Solomon's long prayer, or at any rate the Publican's short one; Christ's whole night, or at any rate one hour. And the floor is repeatedly set by a BAD example, not a good one. If not on the ground in ashes, yet not in beds; if not in sackcloth, yet not in purple and fine linen — which is the rich man of the parable. Where the ceiling is a saint, the floor is a sinner: if I cannot be Job, let me at least not be Dives. The whole ladder ends by giving up on measure altogether — tamen quoad potentiam, yet according to my power (2 Cor. viii. 3). The 21 references on this leaf are the densest in Part II outside the Passion, and the English lines name their own exemplars, so the band selects.

An Act of Adoration.

O God the Father, of heaven,<sup>i</sup> who didst wonderfully create the world of nothing, who by thy power dost govern and uphold heaven and earth, who didst deliver up thine Only-begotten to death for us.

[Rom. 8:32]<sup>ii</sup>

O God the Son, Redeemer of the world, who wast pleased to be made flesh of a Virgin, who with thy precious blood hast washed us from our sins, [1 John 1:7]<sup>iii</sup>

who rising from the dead didst ascend a conqueror into heaven.

[Eph. 4:8]<sup>iv</sup>

O God the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, who in the likeness of a Dove didst descend upon Jesus,

[Matt. 3:16]<sup>v</sup>

who coming upon the Apostles didst appear in tongues of fire, [Acts 2:3]<sup>vi</sup>

who dost visit and confirm the hearts of the Saints with thy grace.

Holy, most high, everlasting,

Happy, blessed Trinity,

ever to be praised, yet ever unspeakable:

Good Father,

Merciful Son,

Gracious Spirit.

Whose { Majesty is unspeakable, / Power incomparable, / Goodness inestimable, } Whose { work is life, / love is grace, / contemplation is glory. }

<sup>ii</sup> Rom. viii. 32 — he that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all · <sup>iii</sup> 1 John i. 7 — the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin · <sup>iv</sup> Eph. iv. 8 — when he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive · <sup>v</sup> Matt. iii. 16 — the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him · <sup>vi</sup> Acts ii. 3 — there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them

<sup>i</sup> This is the LITANY's opening, in Latin, and it is a counterweight to the Greek marks of the last eight leaves. O God the Father, of heaven · O God the Son, Redeemer of the world · O God the Holy Ghost · O holy, blessed Trinity — the Prayer Book's first four invocations, in the Prayer Book's order. And the English Litany's odd of heaven, which is not idiomatic English, is a rendering of the very de cælis standing here: both this page and the Litany are drawing on the same Latin. The volume's liturgical debts run in two directions at once, and an introduction that argues only the Greek will be answerable for this leaf. One divergence, stated without conjecture: where the Litany's third invocation names the Spirit proceeding from the Father and the Son, this one names him the Comforter.

Deity, Divinity,
Unity, Trinity,

Thee I adore,
Thee I call upon,

5       with the whole affection of my heart now,
          and unto all ages I bless thee.

Who art Lord alike of the living and of the dead, [Rom. 14:9]<sup>i</sup>

Whose we are, whom the present world
          yet holdeth in the flesh,

10   Whose also are they, whom the world to come, unclothed of the body, hath already received,

Give to the living mercy and grace,<sup>ii</sup>
          to the departed rest and light perpetual;

Give to the Church truth and peace,
15       to us sinners repentance and pardon.

A Prayer for one setting out on a journey.

Send me good speed this day, [Gen. 24:12]

If thou thyself go not with me, carry me not up hence. [Exod. 33:15]

Thou who [didst guide] the servants of Abraham by the leading of an Angel, [Gen.
24:7]<sup>iii</sup>

20       the journey of the Wise Men | by a Star; [Matt. 2:9]<sup>iv</sup>

Thou who [didst uphold] Peter sinking, [Matt. 14:30]<sup>v</sup>

Paul suffering shipwreck; [Acts 27:44]<sup>vi</sup>

Be thou present with me, O Lord, and order my way,

Lead me with thee, and lead me forth, and lead me home again.

25       Let God arise, and let his enemies be scattered. [Ps. 68:1]<sup>vii</sup>

Away from me, ye wicked;

I will search out the commandments of my God. [Ps. 119:115]<sup>viii</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Rom. xiv. 9 — to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living ·

ii. 9 — the star, which they saw in the east, went before them · <sup>v</sup> Matt. xiv. 30 — Peter on the water: beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me. The four examples are two and two: Abraham's servant and the Wise Men were GUIDED, Peter and Paul were RESCUED — one pair for the setting out, one for what may happen on the way. ·

<sup>vi</sup> Acts xxvii. 44 — the wreck off Malta: and so it came to pass, that they escaped all safe to land · <sup>vii</sup> Ps. lxxviii. 1 — let God arise, let his enemies be scattered · <sup>viii</sup> Ps. cxix. 115 — I will keep the commandments of my God

<sup>ii</sup> A prayer for the dead, in a bishop of the Church of England's private manual, in the Requiem's own words. Defunctis requiem et lucem perpetuam is the Requiem æternam dona eis, Domine, et lux perpetua luceat eis of the Mass for the departed. The page has just laid the ground for it: Christ is Lord alike of the living and of the dead, and the two halves of one company are named in turn — whose we are, whom this world yet holds in the flesh, and whose also are they, whom the world to come has already received unclothed of the body. The petition then divides its gifts along that line: to the living mercy and grace, to the departed rest and light. The English renders it plainly and does not soften it, which is the edition's rule and is the only honest course with a text of this kind.

10           Our Father,

1. Holy art thou,<sup>ii</sup> holy is thy Name, above every name, to be held holy and with all reverence by all men, and by some more than by others, 15          and by me first of all above many.

        Yet I have not so held it:
 neither have I endeavoured to do what lay in me.

        Woe is me, wretched, that I have not —
         I confess it freely.

20 From my soul I grieve { in heart, / in mind, / in soul, / in spirit. }

A suppliant I ask pardon, a suppliant grace,
     That henceforth I may so speak, so do, so live,
         that thy Name may be hallowed,
         and would to God by others also for my sake!

- 25 2. Thy Kingdom, the chief of all my desires,
     That I may come unto it in the state of glory,

<sup>i</sup> The scripture foot is empty on this leaf because the leaf cites nothing, and that is correct. Both columns are the medieval MEMORY-VERSES, one verb to a work, made to be counted on the fingers — Visito, poto, cibo, redimo, tego, colligo, condo for the corporal works, Consule, plecte, doce, solare, remitte, fer, ora for the spiritual. They are not composed here; they are quoted, and every schoolman knew them by heart. The usual spiritual verse has castiga where this sets plecte, a harder word — to punish rather than to correct. Their presence says what kind of book this is: a working manual with a checklist in it, and it is another debt to the Latin West, beside the Litany on the leaf before.

<sup>ii</sup> §31 is the volume's THIRD treatment of the Lord's Prayer, and the method is confession. §25 set it out plainly (printed 350) and §26 said it seven times over in other men's words (351–354); here each petition is stated, then admitted to have been failed, then asked. Holy art thou ... to be held holy by all men, and by some more than by others, and by me first of all above many — and then: Yet I have not so held it. The petition becomes an indictment before it becomes a request. The three treatments are not to be conformed; this is the only one that turns the prayer against the man praying it.

Adveniat mihi hic in statu gratiæ.

In regno terrenorum hic aliquid per Tuam gratiam præstem,

Quo in regno cœlorum illic,

5 ad aliquem locum perveniam, vel novissimum subter pedes sanctorum Tuorum.

3. Voluntas { carnis / viri } facessant a me.

Voluntas Tua { sancta / justa / gratiosa } fiat { a terra hac, / de terra hac, } quæ ego sum,
10 sicut in cœlis.

4. Da quæ ad { sanitatem, / pacem, / sufficientiam, }
Da panem Angelorum ad salutem æternam.

5. Dimitte mihi debita, æcs ingens debitorum, [Matt. xviii. 24.]

15 prolapsiones fœdas, recidivas crebras,
volutabra diutina.

Tibi, Domine, justitia, et mihi confusio faciei. [Dan. ix. 8.]

Perditio mea mihi a me est. [Hos. xiii. 9.]

20 Si iniquitates observaveris, Domine, Domine, quis sustinebit? [Psal. cxxx. 3.]
sed apud Te propitiatio, Apud Deum misericordia,

Copiosa apud Deum redemptio,

25 Et liberabit ab omnibus iniquitatibus. [Vers. 7, 8.]

Let it come to me here in the state of grace.

That in the kingdom of earthly things here

I may perform somewhat by thy grace,

That in the kingdom of heaven there,

5 I may attain to some place, even the last of all,
beneath the feet of thy saints.

3. The will { of the flesh / of man } — let them be gone from me.<sup>i</sup>

Thy will, { holy, / just, / gracious, } be done { by this earth, / upon this earth, } which I am,
10 as it is in heaven.

4. Give the things that make for { health, / peace, / sufficiency, }<sup>ii</sup>

Give the bread of Angels unto everlasting salvation.

5. Forgive me my debts,

the huge sum of my indebtedness, [Matt. 18:24]<sup>iii</sup>

15 my foul slidings-away,<sup>iv</sup>

my frequent relapses,

my long wallowings.

To thee, O Lord, belongeth righteousness, and to me confusion of face. [Dan. 9:8]<sup>v</sup>

My destruction is of myself. [Hos. 13:9]<sup>vi</sup>

20 If thou, Lord, wilt mark iniquities,

O Lord, who shall abide it? [Ps. 130:3]<sup>vii</sup>

but with thee there is forgiveness,

With God is mercy,

and with God is plenteous redemption,

25 And he shall deliver from all iniquities. [vv. 7, 8]<sup>viii</sup>

<sup>i</sup> The third petition drives off two wills the plate never references — John i. 13's neque ex voluntate carnis, neque ex voluntate viri. Then it turns the prayer's own geography onto the man saying it: fiat ... de terra hac, quæ ego sum — thy will be done upon this earth, which I am, the brace holding the clod twice, by this earth and upon it. That is §31's method entire: every clause is made particular before it is asked.

<sup>ii</sup> The fourth petition is asked twice here, and the second asking is the Eucharist: the temporal reading braced — health, peace, sufficiency — then, on its own line, Da panem Angelorum ad salutem æternam, the manna of Ps. lxxviii. 25, which the plate does not reference. The volume has never yet let this petition be simply asked (351, 352, 353); this is the fourth refusal and the only one that names what it wants instead.

<sup>iv</sup> Four figures for four failures, and levelling them loses the descent: the huge sum of debt, prolapsiones fædas, recidivas crebras (a physician's word for the sickness that returns), and volutabra diutina, long wallowings — the volutabrum is the swine's wallowing-place. From the counting-house to the sty.

<sup>vi</sup> The two verses travel together in this book and are here reversed, so that to thee righteousness, to me the shame is now answered by my destruction is of myself. And the Hosea stands in a third Latin form — mihi est ex me (35), a me est (the Evening prayers), mihi a me est (here); none conformed to the others.

Libera me, Domine, a meis,
 Libera animam meam ab inferno inferiori. [Ps. lxxxvi. 13.]
 Abyssus abyssum invocat, [Psal. xlii. 7.]
 Ut de abyssu eripiat.

5 Sed et alia, quæ minus sentio,
 Non minus gravia, fortasse graviora,
 De quibus peto illuminari, ut possim confiteri.

6. Et ne inducas,
 10 ne me induci sinas,
 ne me sinas intrare in tentationem, Memor et misertus fragilitatis, [Psal. ciii. 14.]
 et infirmitatis meæ toties exploratæ.

7. Sed libera me a malo, 15 Malo in meipso et carne, et surreptione ejus;
 Malo Dæmone et suggestionem ejus;
 Malis pœnalibus, quæ justissime dignissimeque commeritus sum; 20 Malis sæculi futuri;
 ibi parce, hic ure, hic seca, Domine.
 Malis sæculi præsentis;
 parce et hic.
 Malitia mundi hujus,
 25 et accidentium in eo;
 Malitia morbi hujus,
 quicum confictor;
 Malitia negotii, cui implicor;
 Malis præteritis, præsentibus, et futuris, 30 Ab his omnibus libera me, Domine.

- Deliver me, O Lord, from mine own,
 Deliver my soul from the nethermost hell. [Ps. 86:13]<sup>i</sup>
 Deep calleth unto deep, [Ps. 42:7]<sup>ii</sup>
 That out of the deep it may pluck me forth.
- 5 But there are others also, which I feel less,
 Not less grievous, perhaps more grievous,
 Concerning which I ask to be enlightened, that I may be able to confess them.
6. And lead us not in,<sup>iii</sup> 10 suffer me not to be led in,
 suffer me not to enter into temptation,
 Being mindful, and having pity on my frailty, [Ps. 103:14]<sup>iv</sup> and on my weakness so often proved.
7. But deliver me from evil, 15 From the evil in myself and in my flesh,
 and from its stealing upon me;
 From the evil Fiend and his suggestion;
 From penal evils, which most justly and most worthily I have deserved;
- 20 From the evils of the world to come;
 there spare, here burn, here cut, O Lord.<sup>v</sup>
 From the evils of the world that now is;
 here also spare.
- 25 From the malice of this world,
 and of the things that befall in it;
 From the malice of this sickness,<sup>vi</sup>
 wherewith I wrestle;
 From the malice of the business wherein I am entangled;
 From evils past, present, and to come,
- 30 From all these deliver me, O Lord.

<sup>i</sup> Ps. lxxxvi. 13 — the psalm says thou HAST delivered; the line asks Libera, deliver thou — the indicative prayed back as a command. <sup>ii</sup> Ps. xlii. 7 — deep calleth unto deep ... thy billows are gone over me. <sup>iv</sup> Ps. ciii. 14 — he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust, asked here as a petition

<sup>ii</sup> The verse is inverted: the psalm's cry of drowning gains a purpose-clause it lacks — Ut de abyssu eripiat, that it may pluck me out of the deep — so the second deep is God's mercy. Four lines on, the petition asks for the sins he cannot feel, and asks not pardon for them but light: ut possim confiteri, that I may be able to confess.

<sup>iii</sup> The sixth petition is re-said three times to get God out of the way of the tempting. Et ne inducas — quoted headless, with no object at all — then ne me induci sinas, suffer me not to be led in, then ne me sinas intrare, suffer me not to enter. God leading, God permitting, and at last the man walking in himself — the middle being the ancient reading Cyprian and Augustine defended, the third going past both.

<sup>v</sup> Augustine, and famous: Hic ure, hic seca, ut in æternum parcas, re-cast around the two ages as there spare, here burn, here cut.

<sup>vi</sup> The last petition descends out of theology into the man's own week and ends in the present tense. The evils are anatomised downward — flesh, Fiend, penal evils, the world to come, the world that now is — and then stop being categories: the malice of THIS sickness, wherewith I wrestle, and the business I am entangled in. Both are present indicatives about the man holding the book — the same seam as the Divisio at 347–348.

Et serva me servum Tuum in æternum, vel inter novissimos novissimum.

Obsecro Te, Domine, in omnem misericordiam Tuam,

Avertatur a me justissima indignatio Tua, [Dan. ix. 16.]

5 quia { sæpissime, gravissime / gravissime, sæpissime } peccavi Tibi, præcipue quæ { nuperrime / novissime } peccavi Tibi;

Avertatur a me, a parentibus,

fratribus, sororibus,

25 I commemorate, I offer, or I ask that thou offer,

I beseech thee, make me partaker, and apply them unto me,

<sup>i</sup> Dan. ix. 16 — Daniel in the exile: O Lord, according to all thy righteousness, let thine anger be turned away

<sup>i</sup> This sentence stands three times in Part II in three Latin dresses, and the plate tags it once — here. Printed 343 (ut auferatur ira Tua) and 373 (Ut avertatur a me justissima indignatio) are unmarked. The Hosea two leaves back behaves the same way: a concordance built on the volume's own marks finds one of three and misses two.

<sup>ii</sup> The brace makes two superlatives commute, and both limbs are printed in both orders. Domino Reverendo, familiaque is not resolved: "the Reverend Lord, and his household" may be his diocesan, his patron, or the master of a house he served in, and this witness cannot settle it.

<sup>iii</sup> §32 begins here, and its heading is a technical word. Ἀνακεφαλαίωσις is the noun of Eph. i. 10's ἀνακεφαλαιώσασθαι, to gather all things under one head in Christ — Irenæus' term, not a synonym for "summary." What it gathers is the Creed stripped to its events, Conception to Judgement, with no doctrine and no Church among them; and it closes not credo but Fac me horum participem, make me partaker of them.

<sup>iv</sup> The Interpellatio Eucharistica is the most doctrinally loaded line in Part II, and it is seven verbs long: Recolo, gratias ago, admoneo, recordor, commemoro, offero, vel peto ut offeras. Admoneo points the memorial at GOD — I put thee in mind — which is the patristic understanding of the anamnesis and not the ordinary Western one. And offerro is qualified in the same breath by vel peto ut offeras: the sacrifice is offered, and then in one word the offerer is left an open question. A whole controversy hangs on vel, and the English keeps it there and settles nothing. This leaf belongs with the anaphora at 349 in any account of what rite the book was written out of.

 Noah from the flood,
 20 Abraham from Ur of the Chaldees,
 Isaac from being slain for a sacrifice,

<sup>vi</sup> Ps. xlv. 1 — our fathers have told us, what work thou didst in their days, in the times of old

<sup>i</sup> The scripture band is nearly empty here because the plate cites almost nothing, and that is correct — §32 pleads the mysteries themselves, not texts about them, so what the leaf needs is its Greek opened. The two columns are not an antithesis — the Person on the left, the life on the right. Ἀπαρχὰς αἵματος, the firstfruits of thy blood, is the Circumcision counted as the first shedding, eight days old; ἀπαρχή is the firstfruits word of 1 Cor. xv. 20. The article is given a reason for standing in a plea about the Passion.

<sup>ii</sup> The left brace is Philippians ii turned into nouns and run BACKWARDS. Ἐκκένωσις and ταπείνωσις are the substantives of ἐκένωσεν and ἐταπείνωσεν ἑαυτόν, and after them come the enfleshing and σύλληψις ἐν γαστρὶ, the conception in the womb: from the self-emptying down to the womb, later cause to earlier — the order of descent, not of narrative. Ἐκκένωσις is rendered emptying-out, not "exinanition" — the κένωσις opened at printed 305.

<sup>iii</sup> The Son of man with nowhere to lay his head returns here doing the opposite of what it did at printed 238. There it was turned round to indict the man praying — no fit place to lay it here either, in me; here it is simply pleaded, one of Christ's own hardships beside hunger and thirst and watching. Not cross-referred and not to be conformed: this volume uses a text twice and never for the same thing.

<sup>iv</sup> Two pleas are in the words of the events themselves, neither referenced by the plate: κατάληψιν ὡς ληστοῦ, apprehension as of a thief, Christ's own complaint in the garden, and συνοχή ἕως σταυροῦ, the straitening of how am I straitened till it be accomplished. Then three places under one preposition, garden, pavement and place of a skull, left untranslated as the plate has them.

<sup>v</sup> Ἐξομολόγησις here is NOT confession of sin but the word's older sense, acknowledgement and so praise, which is why its limbs are of Grace, a Song and of Praises, a Psalm. A reader bringing the penitential sense across from §17 misreads the close of the section. The line above gives prayer an affirmative and a negative form, in Latin under Greek labels.

<sup>vi</sup> §33 opens here on one Latin line and then runs Greek to the end — twenty-one deliverances of the fathers, each a name and what he was delivered from. The argument is the psalm's own.

Ἰακώβ ἀπὸ τοῦ Λαβὰν καὶ Ἡσαΐ,
 Ἰωσήφ ἀπὸ τῆς { διαβολῆς τῆς δεσποίνης, / φυλακῆς, }

     So deliver us also, O Lord, who hope in thee.

PREPARATION FOR THE BLESSING.<sup>iii</sup>

20 Thanksgiving.

Be thou exalted, O Lord, in thine own strength:
 So will we sing and praise thy mighty acts. [Ps. 21:13]<sup>iv</sup>

<sup>iv</sup> Ps. xxi. 13 — the psalm's last verse: be thou exalted, LORD, in thine own strength: so will we sing and praise thy power

<sup>i</sup> This is the Commendatio Animæ — the deathbed prayer of the Western books — put into Greek. The Latin runs Libera, Domine, animam ejus, sicut liberasti Noe de diluvio · Abraham de Ur Chaldaeorum · Isaac de hostia · Job de passionibus · tres pueros de camino ignis ardentis, and it is among the oldest prayers the Church has, said over the dying. Andrewes keeps the form and changes three things: he turns it into Greek; he carries the roll on into the New Testament — the disciples in the storm, Peter in Herod's prison, Paul three times over; and he changes the petition from his soul to us, καὶ ἡμᾶς ῥῶσαι, so that a prayer for one man dying becomes a prayer the living say daily. The form is a Latin-West debt and the language is Greek, which is this book's whole difficulty on one leaf: it stands with the Litany at 358 and the memory-verses at 360 on one side, and with the anaphora at 349 on the other.

<sup>ii</sup> The preposition drops after David and the list runs on the bare genitive alone — ἀπὸ τοῦ Αβράν and ἀπὸ τοῦ Σαούλ, then Ἠλίαν τῆς Ἰεζαβούλ, Ἑζεκίαν τοῦ Παψάκη, and so to the end. The catalogue accelerates as it lengthens, and the English quickens with it. It is not a slip and is not restored.

Confiteantur Tibi opera, Deus;

Et sancti Tui benedicant Tibi. [Psal. cxlv. 10.]

Aperi os meum ad benedicendum nomen Tuum;

Domine, labia mea aperies,

5 Et os meum annuntiabit laudem Tuam. [Psal. li. 15.]

Peccantem me, Domine, et non pœnitentem,

ac ita prorsus indignum,

Deceret magis coram Te jacere prostratum,

ac cum fletu et gemitu

10 peccatorum veniam postulare, quam Te ore polluto laudare.

De ingenti tamen bonitate Tua confisus, do.

O, suscipe laudes quas decantare desidero.

Ego indignus peccator, certe indignus,

15 sed utinam devotus et Tibi gratus,

Tibi gratias ago, Te adoro, laudo, benedico, Teque glori-fico. Dignus es, Domine Deus, accipere laudes et gratias. [Apoc. iv. 11.]

Quem ego peccator non sum dignus invocare, nec vel

20 nominare, vel in corde cogitare.

Te invoco, adoro, Te toto cordis affectu nunc et in sæculum benedico.

Actus Spei.

In Te, Domine, speravi; ne confundar in æternum.

25 [Psal. xxxi. 1.]

Spes mea { ab uberibus matris, [Psal. xxii. 9.] / a juventute. [Psal. lxxi. 5.] }

Requiescit caro mea in spe. [Psal. xvi. 9.]

Verbum Tuum in quo mihi spem dedisti. [Psal. cxix. 114.]

Let thy works confess thee, O God;
 And let thy saints bless thee. [Ps. 145:10]<sup>i</sup>
 Open thou my mouth to bless thy Name;
 O Lord, thou shalt open my lips,<sup>ii</sup>
 5 And my mouth shall shew forth thy praise. [Ps. 51:15]
 Me, that sin, O Lord, and repent not,<sup>iii</sup> and am therefore utterly unworthy,
 It were more meet that I should lie prostrate before thee,
 and with weeping and groaning
 10 crave pardon for my sins, than that I should praise thee with a polluted mouth.
 Yet, trusting in thy exceeding goodness, I give them.
 O, receive the praises which I long to sing thee.
 I, an unworthy sinner, unworthy indeed,
 15 yet would God devout, and acceptable unto thee, give thee thanks, adore thee, praise, bless, and glorify<sup>iv</sup> thee. Thou art worthy, O Lord God, to receive praise and thanks. [Rev. 4:11]<sup>v</sup> Whom I, a sinner, am not worthy to call upon, no, nor 20 yet to name, nor to think upon in my heart.
 Thee I call upon, thee I adore, thee with the whole affection of my heart I bless, now and for ever.

The Act of Hope.

O Lord, in thee have I trusted; let me never be confounded.

25 [Ps. 31:1]<sup>vi</sup>

My hope { from my mother's breasts, [Ps. 22:9] / from my youth up. [Ps. 71:5] }<sup>vii</sup>
 My flesh also shall rest in hope. [Ps. 16:9]
 Thy word, wherein thou hast given me hope. [Ps. 119:114]

<sup>i</sup> Ps. cxlv. 10 — all thy works shall praise thee; and thy saints shall bless thee · <sup>v</sup> Rev. iv. 11 — thou art worthy to receive glory and honour and power · <sup>vi</sup> Ps. xxxi. 1 — in thee, O LORD, do I put my trust; let me never be ashamed. Also the Te Deum's last line, and the Act of Hope opens on it. · <sup>vii</sup> Ps. xxii. 9 — thou didst make me hope upon my mother's breasts; Ps. lxxi. 5 — thou art my trust from my youth

<sup>ii</sup> This is the daily office's opening versicle, and it is quoted in its own form. Domine, labia mea aperies, et os meum annuntiabit laudem Tuam begins Matins in the breviary and Mattins in the Prayer Book. The line above it asks the same thing in the imperative, Aperi os meum; the versicle then answers in the future indicative, aperies, thou shalt open. The prayer asks, and the liturgy replies that it is already granted. Another debt to the Latin West.

<sup>iii</sup> This sentence stands three times in Part II, and no two dresses agree. §24 opens with it at 345, §34 here, §41 at 384: Magis deceret · Deceret magis · magis deceret, and confidens · confisus · confido. Three sections begin by arguing he has no right to praise, and then praise. One word is not dress: 345, 374 and 384 read ingenita — thine inborn goodness — where this leaf alone reads ingenti, exceeding. The English follows the plate, and neither reading is claimed. 384 carries the office versicle too: §34 and §41 are near-twins, and are not conformed.

<sup>iv</sup> The thanksgiving is built out of two liturgies. Gratias ago, adoro, laudo, benedico, glorifico is the Gloria in excelsis — laudamus te, benedicimus te, adoramus te, glorificamus te — and the sentence that follows it, Dignus es, Domine Deus, accipere laudes et gratias, is the Apocalypse's Thou art worthy.

Habebit spem in novissimo. [Jer. xxxi. 17.]

Spes non confundit. Spe salvi facti sumus. [Rom. v.
5; viii. 24.]

5 Dominus spei repleat nos. [Rom. xv. 13.]

Si occiderit me, sperabo. [Job. xiii. 15.]

Qui salvos facis sperantes in Te. [Psal. xvii. 7.]

In nomine Tuo sacro speravimus. [Psal. ix. 10.]

In tegmine alarum, in umbra, sub pennis. [Psal. lvii. 1.]

10 Tu, Domine, spes mea, [Psal. lxxi. 5.]

DAVID'S. To see the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living:<sup>iv</sup>

Ps. 27:13.

PAUL'S. That Christ Jesus came into the world to save 20 sinners. 1 Tim. 1:15.

JOHN'S. That if any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous:

And he is the propitiation for our sins, and for the sins of the whole world. 1 Jo. 2:1, 2.

25 PETER'S. That thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. Matt. 16:16.

NATHANAEL'S. That thou art the Son of God, the King of Israel. Jo. 1:49.

<sup>i</sup> Rom. v. 5 — hope maketh not ashamed; Rom. viii. 24 — we are saved by hope. The plate turns the reference across a line, [Rom. v. and 5; viii. 24.]

<sup>ii</sup> The Act of Hope is a word-catena, not an argument: thirteen texts in a row, and spes or spero stands in every one of them. They are not steps and do not build, and the English keeps hope in every line. The band is nearly silent under them by rule — each line prints its own reference and gives its own substance (§3). Si occiderit me, sperabo — the Vulgate's Job hopes, where the AV's yet will I trust in him takes the other reading of a disputed Hebrew word.

<sup>iii</sup> Four clauses, and not one of them finishes. Vellem, si plus · Metuo, ne · Doleo, quod non · Gauderem, si. Each breaks off exactly where its object would come, and the four are set two and two, wish against fear and grief against joy. The unfinished state is the point: nothing is supplied, and the reader finishes them himself.

<sup>iv</sup> Under the Creed's own first word, Πιστεύω, stand five sentences and not one of them is a credal article. They are five men's confessions, each labelled with whose it is — DAVID'S · PAUL'S · JOHN'S · PETER'S · NATHANAEL'S, and the plate prints each man's text under his name. With §32's Ἀνακεφαλαίωσις at 363 this is the second section running that puts something else where the Creed's propositions should be — there the bare events, here other men's sentences. The band is silent on these lines by rule — the plate names its own speakers (§3). The practice of captioning a text with whose it is, which this edition's tags follow, is the author's own; see his blessings at 425.

THE SAMARITANS'. That this is indeed the Saviour of the world, the Christ. Jo. 4:42.

MARTHA'S. That thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world. Jo. 11:27.

5 THE EUNUCH'S. That Jesus Christ is the Son of God.
Acts 8:37.

THE SYNOD'S, OF THE APOSTLES AND ELDERS.

That through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we believe we shall be saved. Acts 15:11.

10 ANDREW'S. We have found the Messias, which is, being interpreted, the Christ. Jo. 1:41.

We have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified<sup>i</sup> by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law. Gal. 2:16.

15 That there is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all. 1
Tim. 2:5, 6.

That faith wrought with works, and by works is faith made perfect. Jas. 2:22.

20 THE DOXOLOGY.<sup>ii</sup>

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men. Luke 2:14.

Hosanna to the Son of David. Matt. 21:9.

Blessed is he that cometh in the name

25 of the Lord, the King of Israel. Jo. 12:13.

Peace in heaven, and glory in the highest. Luke 19:38.

Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord. Hosanna in the highest.
Mark 11:10.

<sup>i</sup> The labels stop after Andrew, and what follows is doctrine with no speaker. Five confessions are captioned with whose they are — the Samaritans', Martha's, the Eunuch's, the Synod's, of the Apostles and Elders, Andrew's — and then three sentences stand unattributed. Two of them are the crux: justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law is followed within four lines by by works is faith made perfect, with the one Mediator standing between them. A Jacobean bishop set Galatians and James side by side at the end of a creed and added no connective, no ordering and no gloss; the English adds none either. And the roll has a shape: persons, then the Church assembled, then bare doctrine.

<sup>ii</sup> The Doxology is made of the two occasions when heaven and the crowd sang — the Nativity and the entry into Jerusalem — and all four evangelists' versions of the entry stand one after another, unconfated. Luke's crowd answers Luke's angels with the terms crossed: Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace at the birth; Peace in heaven, and glory in the highest at the gate. The inversion is Luke's own, and the page prints both so that it can be seen.

Vers. 13.

10 ΤΩΝ ΜΑΡΤΥΡΩΝ. Ἡ σωτηρία τῷ Θεῷ ἡμῶν, τῷ καθήμενῳ ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου, καὶ τῷ Ἀρνίῳ. Αποκ. vii. 10.

Ἀμήν· ἡ εὐλογία, καὶ ἡ δόξα, καὶ ἡ σοφία, καὶ ἡ εὐχαριστία, καὶ ἡ τιμὴ, καὶ ἡ δύναμις, καὶ ἡ ἰσχὺς τῷ Θεῷ ἡμῶν, εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων. Ἀμήν.
15 Vers. 12.

ΤΩΝ ΚΔ'. ΠΡΕΣΒΥΤΕΡΩΝ. Εὐχαριστοῦμέν σοι, Κύριε
ὁ Θεὸς ὁ παντοκράτωρ, ὁ ὢν, καὶ ὁ ἦν, καὶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος, ὅτι εἴληφας τὴν δύναμιν τὴν μεγάλην, καὶ ἐβασίλευσας. [Αποκ. xi. 17.]

20 ἘΠΙΘΑΛΛΑΜΙΟΝ. Αἰνεῖτε τὸν Θεὸν ἡμῶν, πάντες οἱ δούλοι αὐτοῦ, καὶ οἱ φοβούμενοι αὐτὸν, οἱ μικροὶ, καὶ οἱ μεγάλοι. Χαίρωμεν καὶ ἀγαλλιώμεθα καὶ δῶμεν τὴν δόξαν αὐτῷ, ὅτι ἦλθεν ὁ γάμος τοῦ Ἀρνίου.
Αποκ. xix. 5. 7.

25 Μακάριοι οἱ εἰς τὸ δεῖπνον τοῦ Ἀρνίου κεκλημένοι.
[Vers. 9.]

Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was,<sup>i</sup> and is, and is to come. Rev. 4:8.

THE ANGELS'. Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, 5 and honour, and glory, and blessing. Rev. 5:12.

ALL CREATED THINGS'. Unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, be blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, for ever and ever. Amen.
Ver. 13.

10 THE MARTYRS'. Salvation to our God, which sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb. Rev. 7:10.

Amen: blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God, for ever and ever. Amen.

15 Ver. 12.

THE FOUR AND TWENTY ELDERS'. We give thee thanks, O Lord God Almighty, which art, and wast, and art to come; because thou hast taken to thee thy great power, and hast reigned. [Rev. 11:17]

20 THE MARRIAGE-SONG. Praise our God, all ye<sup>ii</sup> his servants, and ye that fear him, both small and great. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give the glory unto him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come.
Rev. 19:5, 7.

25 Blessed are they which are called unto the supper of the Lamb.
[Ver. 9.]

<sup>i</sup> The Sanctus opens the roll and is the one song here with no singer named; every other is captioned — the Angels' · all created things' · the Martyrs' · the four and twenty Elders' (ΤΩΝ ΚΔ', the number in Greek numerals) · the Marriage-song. The elders' which art, and wast reverses the Sanctus' which was, and is fifteen lines above, and the reversal is the Apocalypse's own — iv. 8 against xi. 17. Kept as printed; a corrector would level it.

<sup>ii</sup> The songs are taken in the Apocalypse's own order, from iv to xix, and the whole penitential sequence of Part II ends at the marriage supper: blessed are they which are called unto the supper of the Lamb. A book that began in confession closes at a table — which is where §32's Eucharistic pleading at 363 was already looking.

ORATIO THO. BRADWARDINI,

Lib. I. De Virtute, cap. i. coroll. 39.

Teipsum, Deus meus, Teipsum propter Teipsum super alia cuncta amo. Teipsum desidero. Teipsum finaliter 5 concupisco. Teipsum propter Teipsum, non aliud quodlibet, semper et in omnibus quæro. Ex totis meis præcordiis et medullis, cum gemitu et ploratu, cum labore continuo, et dolore. Quid ergo finaliter mihi reddes?
 Si non Teipsum mihi reddideris, nihil reddis. Si non 10 Teipsum mihi donaveris, nihil donas. Si non Teipsum invenio, nihil invenio. Nequicquam me præmias, sed crucias vehementer. Prius enim quam Te quæsivi, spe-ravi Te tandem invenire, et tenere. Et hac spe melliflua in omnibus laboribus meis dulciter consolabar. Nunc 15 autem si Teipsum mihi negaveris, quicquid aliud dederis, tanta spe frustratus (nec ad tempus modicum, sed in perpetuum) nonne semper amore languebo, languore mœrebo, mœrore dolebo, dolore lugebo et flebo, quia semper inanis et vacuus remanebo? Nonne inconsola-20 biliter contristabor? incessabiliter querulabor? inter-minabiliter cruciabor? Non est hoc Tuum, optime, clementissime, amantissime Deus; nullatenus congruit, nus-quam decet. Fac igitur, optime Deus meus, ut in vita præsentis semper Teipsum propter Teipsum amem præ 25 omnibus, quæram in omnibus, et tandem in futura in-veniam ac teneam in æternum.

A PRAYER OF THOMAS BRADWARDINE,

Book I. Of Virtue, chap. i. coroll. 39.

Thyself, my God, thyself for thine own sake above all things else do I love. Thyself I desire. Thyself, as my last end, I long after. Thyself for thine own sake, and no other thing whatsoever, alway and in all things I seek. Out of all mine inward parts and marrow, with groaning and with weeping, with continual labour, and with grief. What then wilt thou render me at the last? If thou render not thyself to me, thou renderest nothing. If thou give not thyself to me, thou givest nothing. If I find not thyself, I find nothing. To no purpose dost thou reward me; nay, thou dost torment me sore. For before ever I sought thee, I hoped at the last to find thee, and to hold thee. And with that honey-sweet hope I was sweetly comforted in all my labours. But now, if thou deny me thyself, whatsoever else thou givest — cheated of so great a hope, and that not for a little while, but for ever — shall I not alway languish for love, and for languishing mourn, and for mourning grieve, and for grief lament and weep, seeing I shall remain for ever empty and void? Shall I not be sorrowful past comfort? complain without ceasing? be tormented without end? This is not thy way, O most good, most merciful, most loving God; it nowise agreeth with thee, it nowhere becometh thee. Grant therefore, O most good my God, that in this present life I may alway love thyself for thine own sake above all things, and seek thee in all things, and at the last, in the life to come, find thee and hold thee for ever.

This is the one borrowed prayer in Part II set out whole and under its author's name, with book, chapter and corollary given. The contrast is the point: at printed 362 the volume took Augustine's most famous sentence — hic ure, hic seca — without a word of attribution, as it takes almost everything else. Here it stops, names a man, and gives a reference. Who he was, and the edition Andrewes is likely to have used, are in the list of sources at the back.

The prayer is built on one word, and an English that varies it destroys it. Teipsum stands thirteen times on the page — Teipsum, Deus meus, Teipsum propter Teipsum ... Teipsum desidero, Teipsum finaliter concupisco — and again in each of the conditions, if thou give me not thyself. Thyself, every time; never "thee", never "thine own self" for variety. And the lament is a chain in which every noun picks up the verb before it — amore languebo, languore mærebo, mærore dolebo, dolore lugebo et flebo: love → languish, languor → mourn, mourning → grieve, grief → lament and weep. Four links, and they must be four in English. The three unanswerable questions that follow are each carried by a five-syllable adverb: inconsolabiliter · incessabiliter · interminabiliter.

The prayer argues with God, and then tells him what would be unworthy of him. If thou render not thyself to me, thou renderest nothing; if thou give not thyself, thou givest nothing — and, having hoped, thou dost not reward me, but tormentest me exceedingly. Then the turn: Non est hoc Tuum, this is not thy way, nullatenus congruit, nusquam decet — it in no wise befits, nowhere is it seemly. The close answers the opening exactly, and in order: amem præ omnibus, quæram in omnibus, et tandem ... inveniam ac teneam in æternum — love, seek, find, hold.

The verse numeral is the 1853 editor's, supplied in his own brackets, and is kept in them.

<sup>i</sup> §36 begins here with no heading at all, in the middle of an intercession — the page opens on a bare Pro, and what stood above it is not in this book. And the list of the afflicted ends where no list of the afflicted ends: after the sick, the condemned, the widowed, the woman in travail and the man at sea comes precipue non orantibus — and chiefly for them that pray not. The last and greatest affliction is not praying, and it is the only one on the list that the sufferer cannot ask about himself.

15 THE CONFESSION OF SINS.

I. Behold me, Lord,

Behold me, of sinners { the Greatest, / the Worst, / the Most wretched ! }

(And what shall I now say, or wherein shall I open my mouth?

What shall I answer, seeing I myself have done it, have done it, have done it?)<sup>iv</sup>

20 [Is. 38:15]<sup>v</sup>

<sup>v</sup> Is. xxxviii. 15 — the plate's figure, and the same verse the leaf before drew bitterness of soul from

<sup>i</sup> Two technical terms stand in one brace and neither is a metaphor. The city of refuge is Deuteronomy's, where the manslayer lives; secunda tabula is the second plank after shipwreck — Jerome's secunda post naufragium tabula, the standard scholastic name for penance as the remedy left to a man who has already been baptised. "A second chance" would destroy it, and so would translating the plank as an image rather than a term.

<sup>ii</sup> God is made the suitor, and the page counts the ways. And God, for his part, sueth to us — then six gerunds, each with its text and set two to a line: by proclaiming · by complaining · by swearing · by waiting · by promising · by threatening. The pairs read across, and they are not opposites but degrees: the proclamation answered by the complaint, the oath by the waiting, the promise by the threat. It is an argument that God has exhausted every means of persuasion.

<sup>iii</sup> The two tables under it are the old catechism's, and they are meant to be read across. Prayer, fasting and almsgiving offer up the soul, the body and our goods; the same three overcome the devil, the flesh and the world, and are owed to God, to ourselves and to our neighbour. Three works, three faculties, three enemies, three debts — the medieval scheme of satisfaction, set down without a word of explanation because none was needed.

<sup>iv</sup> Hezekiah said it of God; here it is said of the man praying, and said three times. The Vulgate's quid respondebit mihi, cum ipse fecerit — what shall he answer me, seeing he hath done it — becomes cum ipse fecerim, fecerim, fecerim: seeing I myself have done it, have done it, have done it. One letter changes the person, and the repetition is the confession. It is the volume's constant method at its sharpest — a text turned round on its speaker — and the English must strike the verb three times. Part III has the twin and it differs twice: cum ipse hæc fecerim — once, not three times — and under a chapter figure one numeral short. Identical Latin gets identical English; the divergences stand and neither recension is conformed to the other.

Recogitabo Tibi omnia peccata mea

In amaritudine animæ meæ:

O utinam in amaritudine amarissima. [Ibid. et Vers. 17.]

Domine, si sic vivitur, et in talibus est vita spiritus mei,

5 corripies me et vivificabis me. [Vers. 16.]

Ecce enim in pace mea

10 Deprecor autem Te, Domine, in omnem misericordiam Tuam,

Ut avertatur a me justissima indignatio, et furor Tuus,

Quia peccavi, idque graviter, peccavi Tibi,

Graviter et sæpe peccavi Tibi.

II. O Pater misericordiarum,

15 Obsecro paterna viscera miserationum Tuarum,

Et ne { Vermem immundum, / Canem mortuum, / Cadaver putridum, } ne me despice.

Quin respice me, Domine,

Oculis illis respice

quibus { Magdalenam in convivio, / Petrum in atrio, / Latronem in patibulo; }

20 Ut cum { Petro defleam, / Latrone confitear, / Magdalena diligam; }

Diligam Te multum,

Plurimum, ut cui remissa sunt plurima.

Parce, quæso, Domine; parce, parce pœnitenti;

I will go over all my sins before thee<sup>i</sup>
 In the bitterness of my soul:
 O that it were in bitterness most bitter. [Ibid. and ver. 17]<sup>ii</sup>
 Lord, if a man so live, and the life of my spirit be in such things,
 5 thou wilt correct me and make me to live. [ver. 16]
 For behold, in my peace
 my bitterness was made most bitter. [ver. 17]
 But I, like a swallow's young, will chatter,
 I will mourn as a dove. [ver. 14]<sup>iii</sup>
 10 And I beseech thee, Lord, by all thy mercy,
 That thy most just indignation and thy wrath be turned from me,
 Because I have sinned, and that grievously, I have sinned against thee, Grievously and often have I sinned against thee.
 II. O Father of mercies,
 15 I beseech the fatherly bowels of thy compassions,
 And { an unclean worm, / a dead dog, / a putrid carcase, } O despise me not.
 Nay rather look upon me, Lord, Look with those eyes wherewith thou lookedst on { the Magdalen at the feast, / Peter in the hall, / the Thief on the gibbet; }<sup>iv</sup> 20 That with { Peter I may weep, / the Thief confess, / the Magdalen love; }
 That I may love thee much,
 Yea most, as one to whom most is forgiven.
 Spare, I pray thee, Lord; spare, spare the penitent;

<sup>ii</sup> Ibid. et Vers. 17 — the plate's form, i.e. Is. xxxviii. 15 continued at verse 17: in my peace I had great bitterness ·

<sup>iii</sup> Vers. 14 — like a crane or a swallow, so did I chatter: I did mourn as a dove

<sup>i</sup> The whole leaf is one chapter of Isaiah, and it is quarried OUT OF ORDER — verse 15, then 17, then 16, then 17 again, then back to 14. Part I printed Daniel's prayer whole and in sequence; Part II mines Isaiah's, and the difference between the two habits is worth seeing. The opening line changes a word: Hezekiah goes softly all his years in the bitterness of his soul, and this goes over all his sins. Deliberate, and kept.

<sup>ii</sup> He asks for what the verse four lines below already grants him. O utinam in amaritudine amarissima — O that it were in bitterness most bitter — is a wish; and the verse then quoted says my bitterness was made most bitter. The prayer petitions for the very thing the text it is quoting reports as done, which is this volume's method running the other way for once.

<sup>iv</sup> Three penitents are named, and answered in a different order. He asks to be looked on with the eyes that looked on the Magdalen at the feast, Peter in the hall, the Thief on the cross — and then asks that with Peter he may weep, the Thief confess, the Magdalen love. The acts stay with their own people — it was Peter who wept, the Thief who confessed, the Magdalen who loved — but the sequence rotates by one, so that no name stands twice in the same place. It is not a slip and must not be tidied into parallel order. The movement closes on the reason: to whom much is forgiven, the same loveth much, which the plate does not reference and which is the Magdalen's own verse.

it. }<sup>i</sup>

Spare, Lord; be merciful.

Spare me, Lord, be merciful unto me;

Have mercy upon me,

5 Seeing it { is not hard to thy power, / nor unbecoming to thy justice, / nor unwonted to thy clemency. }

III. What, for leeks and for garlick,<sup>ii</sup>
the Bread of Angels?

What, for the husks of swine,
my Father's table?

10 Woe is me, wretched, woe is me, senseless!

Who hath bewitched me that I should so dote?

O if thou wouldst but vouchsafe to receive me,

I am wholly minded to return:

15 For then was it better with me than now.

Wholly confounded therefore,

{ Not worthy to name / Nor to call upon / Nor to think in my heart } thy Name<sup>iii</sup> but for thy inborn goodness;

Yet trusting in that,

20 { a suppliant, / abased, / prostrate, } I return unto thee;

<sup>i</sup> The scripture band is empty from here to the end of §37 — printed 374 to 379 — because the plate cites nothing on any of them, and that is correct. It is not that there is nothing to cite. These two pages are made of unmarked allusion — Egypt's leeks, the prodigal's husks, Paul's who hath bewitched you, Jacob at the ford — and after §36, where nearly every line printed its own reference, six unmarked leaves running are themselves worth noticing. The notes open what the plate leaves unmarked.

<sup>ii</sup> Two bad bargains, and both are exchanges of a table for a trough. What, for leeks and for garlick, the Bread of Angels? is Israel in the wilderness craving what it ate in Egypt, set against the manna; What, for the husks of swine, my Father's table? is the prodigal. Panem Angelorum is the phrase from printed 361, where the fourth petition asked for the Angels' bread instead of daily bread. There he asked for it; here he asks how he came to trade it away — the same words doing opposite work, which this volume does constantly and never marks. The two lines that follow turn other men's words on the speaker: who hath bewitched me is Paul's rebuke of the Galatians, and then was it better with me than now is Hosea's adulterous wife resolving to go back to her first husband. The prodigal, the Galatians and the wife all say I will return.

<sup>iii</sup> This sentence has stood before, at printed 366, and it is worth the comparison. There: whom I, a sinner, am not worthy to call upon, nor yet to name, nor to think upon in my heart; here the same three verbs are braced and reordered — not worthy to name · nor to call upon · nor to think in my heart — and the clause that answers them is the same in both, but for thy inborn goodness. And that settles a question raised at 366. The volume reads ingenita, inborn, at 345, here, and at 384; printed 366 alone reads ingenti, exceeding. Three witnesses to one. Still kept as printed, and still nothing claimed — but the odds are now on the page.

Nec peto ut facias

Nisi quod fecisti sæpissime,

Et facis libentissime;

Quod nisi facturus etiam atque etiam,

5 Non subsistet ulla caro,

Nemo sustinebit.

Miserere peccatoris, peccatoris maximi,

Ac proin maxima misericordia indigentis.

Et Tibi maxima est,

10 Et ad celos usque pertingens,

Et eripiens de inferno inferiori.

Mirifica est.

Mirifica misericordiam Tuam erga me:

Quam si vis glorificare in immensum,

15 Prætende mihi eam.

Nunquam ea, nunquam ea in peccatoris cujusquam venia

Magis gloriosa { aut fuit, / aut futura est. }

Domine, si vis ut recedam a Te, da mihi alium Te,

Alioqui non dimittam Te.

20 Spiritus veritatis doceat me veritatem.

IV. Tibi, Domine, confiteor

(Quia, si volo, abscondere non possum);

Tibi peccata mea plurima, maxima, gravissima.

Profiteor et dolere me, quod et Tu nosti.

25 Sed peccasse me plus magis prout dolor est,

Qui mihi adjacet quo peccata defleam.

Deest mihi dolor tantus, deest plane.

Longe absum ab eo quam par est esse.

Multum peccare possum;

Nor do I ask that thou do aught but what thou hast done most often,
     And doest most willingly;
 Which unless thou wert to do again and again,
 5     No flesh should stand,
     None should abide it.
 Have mercy upon a sinner, upon the greatest of sinners,
     And therefore upon one that needeth the greatest mercy.
 And thine is the greatest,
 10     And reacheth even unto the heavens,
     And plucketh out of the nethermost hell.
     Marvellous it is.<sup>i</sup>
 Shew thy marvellous mercy toward me:
     Which if thou wilt glorify beyond measure,
 15     Hold it out to me.
 Never, never in the pardon of any sinner
     More glorious { either was it, / or shall it be. } Lord, if thou wilt that I depart from thee, give me another Thee,<sup>ii</sup> Else will I not let thee go.
 20     Let the Spirit of truth teach me the truth.
 IV. To thee, Lord, I confess (Because, if I would, I cannot hide them);
     To thee my sins, most many, most great, most grievous.
 I profess also that I grieve for them, which thou too knowest.
 25     But that I have sinned more than I grieve, which grief lieth by me, that I might weep for my sins.
 So great a grief I lack, I lack it utterly.
 Far am I from being what it is meet I should be.
     Much can I sin;

<sup>i</sup> One word does duty twice, as adjective and then as imperative, and the English must let it. Mirifica est — thy mercy is marvellous; Mirifica misericordiam Tuam erga me — make it marvellous toward me. The psalm's shew thy marvellous lovingkindness is behind both, and the page takes the description of what mercy is and asks for it as a thing to be done. It is the volume's commonest movement — the indicative prayed back as a command — turning here on a single word instead of a whole verse.

<sup>ii</sup> The boldest sentence in the section, and it is Jacob at the ford. Lord, if thou wilt that I depart from thee, give me another Thee; else will I not let thee go. The last clause is Jacob's own — I will not let thee go, except thou bless me — and the condition before it is impossible on purpose: there is no other Thee to be given, so the departure cannot be consented to. A refusal is being made to look like an obedience, and the English keeps the bargain intact and does not soften da mihi alium Te into a wish.

Multum dolere non possum.
 Ariditas mea, ariditas mea! vae mihi!
 Non possum multum, sed cupio multum.
 Scio enim nec multum, satis multum esse.

5 Utinam is dolor suppeteret mihi;
 utinam vero et major.

Sed nequeo impetrare a me.
 Exarui, exarui velut testa.

Vae mihi!

10 Tu, Domine, { adauge, quem habeo, / supple, quem non habeo, } fontem lacrymarum, liquefactum cor, gemitus inenarrabiles.

Interim, cum mihi promptus sit animus,
 Acceptum habeas me secundum id quod habeo,
 Non secundum id quod non habeo.

15 Extendam autem, quia intendere non possum magis,
 Per omnes annos vitae meae.

V. Sed toties relapsus, qua fronte, qua mente Reverti nunc potero?

Nulla. Totus enim confusus,

20 Confusione mea opertus { incedo, / sedeo, / jaceo. }
 Nec auderem facere,

Nec facerem, quin plane desperarem penitus,
 Et, quod desperantes faciunt, facerem,
 Nisi quia spes adhuc reliqua.

25 Quæ spes?

Usque ad septuagies septies Porrigere Te misericordiam Tuam.

- Much can I not grieve.
 My drought, my drought! woe is me!<sup>i</sup>
 I cannot much, but I desire much.
 For I know that not much is much enough.
 5     Would God that grief were at hand for me;
       yea, would God a greater.
       But I cannot obtain it of myself.
       I am dried up, dried up like a potsherd.<sup>ii</sup>
       Woe is me!
 10   Thou, Lord, { increase that which I have, / supply that which I have not, } a fountain of tears,
       a melting heart, groanings that cannot be uttered.
 Meanwhile, seeing the spirit is willing with me,
       Accept thou me according to that I have,
       Not according to that I have not.
 15   But I will lengthen it out, since I cannot strain it further,<sup>iii</sup> through all the years of my life.
 V. But having so often fallen back, with what face, with what mind shall I now be able to return?
       With none. For wholly confounded, 20   Covered with mine own confusion, I { walk, / sit, / lie down. }
 Nor durst I do it,
       Nor would I, but that I should despair outright,
       And do that which they do that despair,
 Save that there is yet hope left.
 25   What hope?
 That unto seventy times seven
       Thou reachest forth thy mercy.

<sup>i</sup> The volume's own earlier page is the key to this unmarked one. Ariditas mea, ariditas mea! vae mihi! is the shape of Isaiah's my leanness, my leanness, woe unto me, with the book's own noun set into it — and printed 335 is where that noun was fastened to that verse, in a brace reading woe is me { for my dryness, [Is. xxiv. 16] / for my hardness of heart, / for the drought of my eyes, [Jer. ix. 1] }. Two of the three come back on this leaf with no reference at all — the dryness here, the fountain of tears eight lines down. A concordance made from the plate's marks would join neither.

<sup>iii</sup> A pun carries the surrender, and English has no single word for it. Extendam autem, quia intendere non possum magis — he cannot strain the grief any tighter, so he will stretch it out instead, through all the years of my life. Depth being impossible, he offers duration. The plea just above it is 2 Corinthians' — accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not — the one measure in Scripture that asks nothing beyond a man's means, and the second time this volume has reached into that chapter for it.

Mihi toti peccato, / Peccato καθ' ὑπερβολήν, }
O, cui nunquam sine spe veniæ supplicatur!
VI. Ille vero ut propitius sit, at tu non doleas?
Non peto.
Doleo enim utcunque;
25 Metuo quidem ut satis.

And beyond,
 For this is the measure thou hast commended to us.<sup>i</sup>
 To us, that we should render it among ourselves,
 And thou thyself not render the same?
 5 Nay, thou wilt render it, and much more.
 God forbid thou shouldest will more perfection to be in us than is in thyself.
 That thou shouldest will us to forgive unto seventy times seven,
 And thyself be unwilling,
 10 For thy mercy surpasseth ours,
 as far as thou surpassest us.
 Trusting therefore in that,
 yea, in thy mercy that pardoneth four hundred and ninety<sup>ii</sup> times over,
 15 Standing afar off I cast myself down,<sup>iii</sup>
 And most abjectly, as is meet, and most humbly
 Smiting that heart of mine
 (Which smiteth me not enough),
 { I say / and say again } over and over,
 20 Be merciful, { Lord, to me a sinner, / to me the most wretched sinner, / to me the chief of sinners, / to me that am all sin, / to sin exceeding sinful, }
 O thou to whom none ever sueth without hope of pardon!
 VI. But that he should be merciful, and thou not grieve?
 I ask it not.
 For grieve I do, after a fashion;
 25 I fear indeed that it is but enough.

<sup>i</sup> The prayer argues God into consistency with his own commandment. This is the measure thou hast commended to us — seventy times seven — to us, that we should render it among ourselves, and thou thyself not render the same? Then the hinge: Absit enim ut plus in nobis perfectionis esse velis, quam in Teipso est — God forbid thou shouldest will more perfection to be in us than is in thyself. The forgiveness Christ commanded of Peter is turned into a claim upon God, and the claim is that he cannot require of us a mercy he will not show. It is an argument, not a plea, and the English must not soften it into one.

<sup>ii</sup> And the page does the arithmetic. Seventy times seven is left as a figure of speech everywhere else; here it is multiplied out — four hundred and ninety times over — and the mercy is trusted for the whole sum. A rhetorical number made a countable one, which is the same literalism that made the Lord's Prayer's earth his own body at 361.

<sup>iii</sup> The Publican is quoted and then bettered. Standing afar off and smiting his breast are Luke's; the escalation of the cry — to me a sinner · to me the most wretched sinner · to me the chief of sinners — is not. And one parenthesis is the sharpest thing on the leaf: he smites that heart of mine — which smiteth me not enough. The organ that ought to accuse him has to be struck from outside.

- Cuperem ut magis;
Gauderem si magis;
Doleo, quia non magis.
Cupio enim ut magis possem, et 5 Doleo quia magis non possum.
Fateor dolendum dolorem meum,
Et doleo ipse tam dolendum.
Et, O quis mihi det, ut plus magisque possem?
Ego, si penes me esset, præstarem.
10 Sed penes me non est;
In potestate mea non est.
Penes me quidem est appetiari quod plus magis;
Velle etiam ut plus magis.
Velle mihi adjacet; perficere autem non invenio.
15 Tu, Domine, da, penes Te est ut des.
Tu qui vertis vel silicem in aquas stagnantes.
Da lacrymas; da fontem capiti meo.
Da gratiam lacrymarum.
Rorate, cœli, desuper,
20 Et rigate ariditatem deserti mei.
Da, Domine, gratiam hanc,
Nullum mihi donum gratius,
Non si opes multas,
Non si terrena vel optima;
25 Quam si mihi lacrymas;
Quales Davidi olim, vel Jeremiæ:
Quales Magdalenæ, vel Petro indulsisti.
Saltem stillantem oculum,
Ne totus sim silex.
30 Non ut stratum meum lavare possim,

I would desire it were more;
 I should rejoice if it were more;
 I grieve that it is not more.
 For I desire that I might more, and 5 I grieve that more I cannot.
 I confess my grief is to be grieved for,
 And I grieve myself that it is so much to be grieved for.
 And, O who shall give me that I might more and more?
 I, if it lay with me, would perform it.
 10 But with me it lieth not;
 It is not in my power.
 With me indeed it lieth to prize that which is more;
 yea, to will that it were more.
 To will is present with me; but to perform I find not.<sup>i</sup> 15 Thou, Lord, give: with thee it lieth to give.
 Thou that turnest even the flint into standing water.<sup>ii</sup>
 Give tears; give a fountain to my head.
 Give the grace of tears.
 Drop down, ye heavens, from above,
 20 And water the drought of my desert.
 Give, Lord, this grace,
 No gift were welcomer to me,
 Not great riches,
 Not earthly things, no, not the best;
 25 Than if thou give me tears;
 Such as thou grantedst David of old, or Jeremiah:<sup>iii</sup>
 Such as thou grantedst the Magdalen, or Peter.
 At least a dropping eye,
 that I be not all flint.
 30 Not that I may wash my bed,

<sup>i</sup> Romans vii. 18 stands here word for word and unmarked — velle mihi adjacet; perficere autem non invenio, to will is present with me; but how to perform I find not. The same verb was already doing the work four leaves back at 375, where the grief lieth by me, qui mihi adjacet. Paul's word for the will that lies to hand seeds the whole movement, and the plate marks it in neither place.

<sup>ii</sup> Two water-miracles are asked upon one heart, and the leaf ends on the first of them. Thou that turnest even the flint into standing water is the psalm's rock struck in the wilderness — and twenty lines later, that I be not all flint. The miracle is requested on himself. Between them stands Rorate, cæli, desuper, the Advent introit, with its object changed: the heavens are not asked to rain down the Just One but to water the drought of my desert. Ariditas, the drought, is the word of 376 and the word printed 335 fastened to Isaiah — it threads three leaves and is marked on none of them.

<sup>iii</sup> Four weepers, and they are not the four of two leaves back. David and Jeremiah, the Magdalen and Peter — where 373 asked for the eyes that saw the Magdalen, Peter and the Thief. The Thief is gone, because the Thief did not weep; the company changes with what is being asked for.

20 O Servator mi, Christe, Servator mi,

Quis mihi det, ut prius moriar

quam Te denuo offendam,

Christe Servator mi, O Servator mi?

O Domine, novum supervenisse Spiritum

25 Nova vitæ ratio demonstret;

Nam poenitentia vera, nova vita,

Et vera confessio, sine intermissione poenitere,

- Not that I may water thy feet,
 Not copiously, as Jeremiah,
 Not bitterly, as Peter,
 (Though O, that it were so!)
- 5 Yet one little tear at the least
     And a second supply thou;
     Which thou mayest lay up in thy bottle,
     Which thou mayest enter in thy book.
 But if I obtain not even this — ah, pumice-stone!<sup>i</sup>
- 10 Ah me, very quicklime! seething in cold water, Without, where it less behoveth, without fervour,
     Where it behoveth not, grieving enough,
     Where it most behoveth, cold, dry, dead,
 At least of the tears of thy Christ<sup>ii</sup>
- 15 Impart to me some,
     Which in the days of his flesh he shed abundantly.
 Impart, O impart to me of them.
     There is left over in him for me what in myself is lacking to me.

A Short Prayer after Confession.<sup>iii</sup>

- 20 O my Saviour, Christ, my Saviour, Who shall grant me that I may die
     before I offend thee again, Christ my Saviour, O my Saviour?
     O Lord, let a new manner of life
- 25 shew that a new Spirit is come upon me;
 For true penitence is a new life,
 And true confession is to repent without ceasing, keeping a perpetual sabbath

<sup>i</sup> The self-accusation is a piece of chemistry, and it does not work without it. Ah, pumex! — pumice, the stone that will not hold water — and then vere calcem, in aqua frigida ferventem: quicklime, which seethes when cold water is poured on it. The three lines that follow spell the point out: fervent where it least behoves, grieving enough where it behoves not, and cold, dry and dead where it behoves most. The image is of a substance that reacts violently to the wrong thing and not at all to the right one, and an English that makes calx merely "lime" loses the heat.

<sup>ii</sup> His tears having failed, he asks for a share in Christ's. Of the tears of thy Christ impart to me some, which in the days of his flesh he shed abundantly — and then the ground: Supersunt in illo mihi, quæ in me mihi desunt — there is left over in him for me what in myself is lacking to me. That is a treasury-of-merits sentence in a Church of England bishop's private book, applied not to satisfaction but to tears. Rendered plainly and unsoftened, which is the edition's rule; expect it to be noticed, as the prayer for the departed at 359 will be.

<sup>iii</sup> §38 opens on the same page, and defines its terms: true penitence is a new life, and true confession is to repent without ceasing — keeping a perpetual sabbath. The section that has just spent six leaves failing to weep ends by making penitence a manner of living rather than an act, and the new life is asked as the evidence of a new Spirit, not the cause of it.

A Preparatory Prayer.

- 5 Lord, my heart is ready:<sup>ii</sup>
 (so saith the Psalmist, Psal. cviii. 1.)
 But, Lord, I fear that mine is not;
 Desire it I surely do, and grieve if it be less.
 Would God it were ready! woe is me, that it is not!
 10 Lord, I dispose myself, and prepare.
 Help my disposing, and supply my preparation.
 I will set my sins before me,
 That they be not before thee.

- 15 A Caution before Preaching, with a Prayer,<sup>iii</sup> out of Fulgentius, Bk i, to Monimus.

Let the preacher labour to be heard willingly, understandingly, and obediently. And let him not doubt that he can do this more by the piety of his prayers than by any faculty of speech. Praying for himself and for those he is to speak to, let him be one that prays before he is one that teaches; and drawing near devoutly, before ever he puts forth the tongue that is to utter, let him lift up his thirsting soul to God; that he may pour out what he has there drunk in, and shed forth what has filled him.

Therefore I cease not to ask of our true Lord and Master that he would vouchsafe to teach me those things — whether by the words of his Scriptures, or by the conversation of the brethren, or by <sup>i</sup> The sentence begins on the leaf before, and its middle word is a term of art. Fomite is the fomes peccati, the tinder left in a man after baptism — the schools' name for what remains when the guilt is gone. Not a third word for temptation, which is what stands on either side of it: the sabbath is kept from the occasion that offers, the kindling that catches, and the danger that follows.

<sup>ii</sup> He quotes the psalm, credits it to another man, and unsays it in the next line. The plate puts the attribution in the running text — (sic Psaltes, Psal. cviii. 1.) — so that my heart is ready is David's and I fear that mine is not is his own. It is the volume's habitual movement inverted: everywhere else an indicative of God's is prayed back as a command and claimed; here an indicative of man's is quoted and declined. The three verbs following are the four-verb frame's third setting — metuo ... cupio ... doleo si minus — after the empty frame at 367 and §37's filled one at 378.

Ecclus. vii. 17. Humble thy spirit greatly: for the vengeance of the ungodly man's flesh is fire and worms.

John iii. 27. A man can receive nothing, except it be given him.

15 Cyprian. If He prayed who was without sin, how much<sup>iv</sup> more ought a sinner to pray.

The same. But God is a hearer, not of the voice, but of the heart.

Augustine. More is wrought by groanings than by speeches.

<sup>i</sup> The prayer changes its addressee in mid-passage. Veritas is feminine, and the Latin slides from cleaving to the truth, to of this very Truth I ask, to Ipsam rogo — Her I entreat. The section's longest petition is addressed to Truth, who is Christ; our English capitalises from the address onward, or a reader takes the close for a prayer to an abstraction.

<sup>ii</sup> §40 begins here, and it is not a prayer. It is three catenæ of authorities — ἀφορμαί, handles for meditation — one set before each of three offices. The band is empty from here to 384 because every entry prints its own reference in its own line (§3a). The macaronic heading's word-order will not stay still: Greek first here, Latin first at 382 and 383. Kept as printed.

<sup>iii</sup> The catena opens with the proof-text of the page above it. Fulgentius has just said let him be a pray-er before he is a teacher; the first two entries are Martha's one thing is needful and Acts vi. 4, we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word — prayer first and the word second, the order the Twelve chose when they had to choose. Nothing marks the join, and §39 and §40 sit on two halves of one page.

<sup>iv</sup> The fathers enter by name and nothing more, where every scripture above carries chapter and verse — a saying was to be known by its author, not looked up. And the first three answer §37. After six leaves in which the penitent could not weep: if He prayed who was without sin, how much more ought a sinner to pray · God is a hearer, not of the voice, but of the heart · Augustine's more is wrought by groanings than by speeches.

<sup>i</sup> A Latin imperative governs a Greek infinitive, and the line is one sentence. Perge igitur ἀγωνίζεσθαι ἐν προσευχαῖς — go on therefore to strive in prayers. The Greek is Colossians' own, where it is a participle describing somebody else: Epaphras, ἀγωνιζόμενος ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν ἐν ταῖς προσευχαῖς, always striving for you in prayers. A report of what one man did is turned into the reader's own command — the volume's habitual movement, taken here on a participle rather than an indicative, as it was on the Baptist's ὁ αἶψων at 334. He did not think of himself as changing tongue mid-line, and the English keeps the sentence whole.

<sup>ii</sup> A thanksgiving text opens the Intercessions, and Augustine's reading is the reason. Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift is 2 Corinthians', and almost every reader will take the gift to be Christ. Augustine takes it to be the mutual intercession itself — the gift is that very many succour one another with mutual offices, and pray one for another, and give thanks. Without that turn the first entry of the set has nothing to do with intercession at all, and the catena beneath it is built on the reading.

<sup>iii</sup> The one place in Scripture where a failure to intercede is named a sin, and it stands at the centre of the set. Samuel, at the end of his rule, to the people who have asked for a king in his place: God forbid that I should sin before the Lord, in ceasing to pray for you. The men he will not stop praying for are the men who have dismissed him. The verse comes in Greek, the Septuagint's, and only the hand that names it is Latin — inquit Samuel.

לך דומיה תהלה — unto thee silence is praise, — praise is silent unto thee, or the Psalm is,<sup>iii</sup>

<sup>i</sup> Augustine refuses the devotional reading of Romans viii. 26, and the refusal answers six leaves of §37. Is thy spirit, or mine, unutterable — which is oftentimes no spirit at all, oftentimes cold? The groaning that cannot be uttered is not the individual's. It is the whole Church's, pooled: because they all make up one Dove, one besought fervently and another lukewarmly, hence come the unutterable groanings ... out of the groanings of all in common. After §37, where the penitent spent six leaves unable to weep, this is the consolation the book had been withholding — the intercession that counts was never his to produce.

<sup>ii</sup> The catena on praise opens by disqualifying the man who is to praise, and each entry after it takes something further away, until even the talkative are dumb shuts both doors at once, speech and silence together. And the one beatitude among them is narrowed to fit: the Septuagint blesses the people that know the joyful sound, ὁ λαὸς ὁ γινώσκων ἀλαλαγμόν; the plate drops ὁ λαός and gives the plural, so the blessing falls on the single man who knows them. A catena for a private book, made private in the quoting.

<sup>iii</sup> The section ends in Hebrew because no Latin or English Psalter will say what it needs. לך דומיה תהלה — Psalm lxv. 2 in the Hebrew numbering — to thee silence is praise, with the 1853's own literal gloss set beside it, tacet tibi laus vel Psalmus. The Vulgate takes the same consonants from another root and gives Te decet hymnus, praise befitteeth thee; the Prayer Book has Thou, O God, art praised in Sion. Either would destroy the entry, which exists to say that praise falls silent — so the Hebrew stands and the English follows it. It is unpointed in the plate, without vowel or accent, and is the second Hebrew in Part II, after the Hosanna at 274.

So the mind of man, as it must be roused in the morning, so at evening must be called back, as by a recall, unto itself and unto its own captain,

<sup>i</sup> The silence is given a mouth, and that closes the argument the leaf has been making. Andrewes glosses his own Hebrew gloss — it reacheth not thy works, it hath more of silence in it — and then, out of the mouth of sucklings, with the psalm named. Praise fallen dumb is not a failure of praise but the infant's kind of it, and Psalm viii. 2 is the verse that has God perfecting praise out of exactly that mouth. A catena that opened by calling praise unseemly in a sinner's mouth ends by finding the one mouth that will serve.

<sup>ii</sup> The plate reads double where the Septuagint reads tenfold, and it is kept. Baruch's δεκαπλασιάσατε, seek him ten times over, stands here as διπλασιάσατε, seek him double. The figure is not ornament: the verse is built on an exchange — as it was your mind to go astray ... so, being turned — and Andrewes' own line beneath does the same sum, as before we abounded in sins, so now ... in good works. Doubling keeps the two halves level; tenfold would not.

<sup>iii</sup> Two trumpet-calls, and English has one word for both. ἐγκελευστικός is the charge, the call that sends men forward; ἀνακλητικός is the recall, by which the stragglers are fetched back. The evening exercise is the second of them — the mind roused in the morning is at evening called back ... unto itself and unto its own captain, which is what makes the set an evening one. The brace is the plate's own and is kept: two calls set against one occasion.

The Search and Inquisition, or Examination.

- 5 Aug. A good man had rather know his own weakness than

But that knowledge of his own weakness is not come by

- 10 Cicero. There are many lurking-places in the mind, and many recesses, &c.
- Seneca.* Thou must catch thyself before thou canst mend thyself.
A sore unknown goeth from bad to worse, and is left

- 15 Jer. xvii. 9. The heart is deep beyond all things.<sup>i</sup>
The heart is deep, and crooked.
The old man is covered over with a thousand wrappings.
Therefore πρόσεχε σεαυτῷ — take heed unto thyself.
And this above all is to be inquired into;

- 20 { Done, | { Read,<sup>ii</sup>
{ Said, | { Written.
{
- What to-day { { that { may beseech a Christian, a priest, thou hast { which { a father, &c.
- 25 { { may confirm faith and obedience,
{ { increase knowledge.
{ { or the governance of { the mind,
{ { { the body.
{ { may work salvation { thine own,
30 { { { others?.

<sup>i</sup> One verse is quoted twice over in two languages, and the English Bible has neither reading. The Greek is the Septuagint's Jeremiah — βαθεῖα ἡ καρδία παρὰ πάντα, the heart is deep beyond all things; the Latin line under it adds the Vulgate's tortuosum, crooked. The Authorised Version has deceitful above all things, which is a third thing again, and would put out both lights at once. The two readings are not a doublet but a stack, and the line beneath them needs both: the old man is covered over with a thousand wrappings — wrappings answer the depth, and the thousand of them answer the crookedness. The English keeps the two lines distinct and conforms neither.

<sup>ii</sup> The brace is four levels deep, and its depth is its argument. What to-day thou hast governs the day's four acts — done and said, read and written — and then four heads under which each is to be asked after: what beseeches a man's calling, what confirms faith and obedience, what governs mind or body, what works salvation in himself or in others. Every one of the four acts is questioned under every one of the four heads, which is what the tall brace means and what any collapsing of it into a list would lose. Sixteen questions are being asked, not eight.

- 25 fenced with the arms and garrison of prayer.

Rightly therefore saith Rab. J., of repentance that is not to be put off till the morrow,

ראה חזתלת התועלת והתשובה נכזבה — so the plate; read ראה תוחלת התועלת

והתשובה נכזבה —†<sup>ii</sup>

See, the hope of the profit and of the deliverance is proved false.

<sup>i</sup> The evening examination is described in two borrowed vocabularies, and both are secular. First accountancy: Cato required of himself an account of the day's business — rationem exigere, a steward's audit — and he stands beside God reviewing each day's works, beside Pythagoras, and beside David, four precedents with no apology and no ranking. Then criminal law: in this Areopagite and nightly trial — Athens' homicide court, which sat after dark, so the figure fits the hour as well as the business — shew thyself not the advocate of thy sins, but their judge, at the bar of thine own mind. And the sentence asked for is his own addition: Ecclesiasticus prays for scourges over the mind, and Andrewes adds that they spare not my sins.

<sup>ii</sup> A whole Hebrew word is wrong in the plate, and it is wrong in a script the reader cannot check for himself, so the page shows both. The second word stands as חזתלת, which is not a word; the sentence requires תוחלת, hope. The ground is Andrewes' own Latin on the facing page — Ecce spes fructus et salutis, behold the hope of profit and of salvation — and the compositor's slip is legible as such: two sorts transposed and a zayin set for a vav, near-identical sorts in a line of upside-down work for a man with no Hebrew. It is the plate's and not the scan's: a second copy reads the same five letters. Kept exactly as printed, with the reading it requires set beside it and named as a reading.

(i. e.) Ecce spes fructus et salutis falsa sibi erit in æternum, nisi animam tuam etiam hac nocte eripueris.

Et hujusmodi examen si per aliquot dies aut unum saltem mensem fiat (cum pœnitentia), sufficiet ut

5 perfectus virtutis habitus generetur.

(that is) Behold, the hope of fruit and of salvation shall be false to<sup>i</sup> itself for ever, unless thou rescue thy soul this very night.

And if such an examination be made for some days, or for one month at the least (with repentance), it will suffice that 5 a perfect habit of virtue be bred.

---

There followeth the Morning Hymn, of most ancient use in the<sup>ii</sup> Church, out of the Alexandrine MS. of the King's Library. There is added the Evening Hymn also, because it is old. Concerning 10 both, the Rev. Ussher is to be consulted, pp. 41, 43, Book of the Creeds.

<sup>i</sup> This is the sentence that settles the garbled Hebrew opposite, and it also sets the term of the exercise. Behold, the hope of fruit and of salvation shall be false to itself for ever — Andrewes' own Latin for the rabbi's line, and its spes, hope, is what the plate's Hebrew ought to read (386). Then the clause the whole Monita has been driving at: unless thou rescue thy soul this very night. And the discipline is given a dosage — some days, or one month at the least — after which a perfect habit of virtue is bred. An examination prescribed like a course of physic, with a term and an expected cure.

<sup>ii</sup> The voice changes here, and it is no longer Andrewes'. The paragraph is the 1853 editor's own note, printed at the seam and set in italic: the morning hymn follows out of the Alexandrine MS. of the King's Library — the canticle-appendix of the Codex Alexandrinus — the evening hymn is added because it is old, and Ussher's Book of the Creeds is to be consulted on both. It is apparatus, not devotion, and is set as apparatus here; a reader who takes it for the book's own voice will think Andrewes is citing a seventeenth-century archbishop after his own death.

THE MORNING HYMN.*

GLORY be to God on high,<sup>i</sup> and on earth peace,
 good will among men.

5 We praise thee,
 we bless thee,
 we worship thee,
 we glorify thee,
 we give thanks to thee,
 10 for thy great glory,
 O Lord, heavenly King,
 O God the Father Almighty,
 O Lord, the only-begotten Son,
 Jesu Christ,
 15 and O Holy Ghost.<sup>ii</sup>
 O Lord God,
 the Lamb of God,
 the Son of the Father,
 Thou that takest away the sins of the world,
 20 have mercy upon us.
 Thou that takest away the sins of the world,
 receive our prayer.
 Thou that sittest at the right hand of the Father,
 have mercy upon us.

25 * This is perhaps that Hymn which C. Pliny makes mention of, in the<sup>iii</sup> Epistle xxvii. of book x., in these words: "That the Christians were wont on a set day to meet before daylight, and to sing a Hymn to Christ as unto God, by turns among themselves."

<sup>i</sup> The facing Latin is not a translation of this Greek: they are two recensions of one hymn, set side by side. The Greek is the Gloria in excelsis as the Codex Alexandrinus carries it; the Latin opposite is the received Western Gloria, which is why it will not construe line for line. Our English follows the Greek, and the divergences stand where they fall: good will among men is nominative, not the Vulgate's to men of good will; and O Lord, heavenly King has no God in it, where the Latin and the Prayer Book both do. The Φῶς ἱλαρόν two leaves on is the opposite case, its Latin a close rendering of its Greek — only here are the columns two texts.

<sup>ii</sup> The Holy Ghost is named here, and the 1853 marks the fact in the other column with a row of asterisks. And O Holy Ghost stands in the Greek among the persons addressed; the Western Gloria has no such clause, and the editor sets asterisks on the Latin leaf at exactly that line. Two leaves on the mark is reversed — the Latin has cum Sancto Spiritu where the Alexandrine Greek does not, and the asterisks stand in the Greek column. The two rows fall on opposite sides of one question: where in this hymn the Spirit is named. They are apparatus, neither ornament nor a gap in the text, and both rows are kept.

<sup>iii</sup> The footnote is the 1853 editor's, and its conjecture is offered as one. He thinks this may perhaps be the very hymn Pliny described to Trajan — Christians meeting before daylight on a set day to sing a Hymn to Christ as unto God, by turns among themselves. The letter is Ep. x. 96, not the xxvii printed here, almost certainly a misprint for xcvii; kept as printed, with the volume's other uncorrected references.

THE EVENING HYMN.<sup>ii</sup>

O GLADSOME light of the holy glory of the immortal Father, heavenly, holy, 10 blessed, O Jesu Christ,
 we, being come to the setting of the sun,
 beholding the evening light,
 praise in hymns the Father,
 and the Son,
 15 and the Holy Spirit of God.
 Worthy art thou at all times to be hymned with holy voices, O Son of God,
 thou giver of life.
 20 Wherefore the world doth glorify thee.

---

<sup>i</sup> The Greek Gloria stops a clause short of the one the reader knows. It ends unto the glory of God the Father, with no thou only art most high — and the Latin opposite agrees with it, so here the extra clause is the Prayer Book's, not the Latin's. Nothing is supplied.

<sup>ii</sup> The relation between the two columns changes here, and a reader who has just crossed the Gloria must be told. The Φῶς ἱλαρόν — O gladsome light, the oldest Christian hymn still in common use — is faced by a Latin that really is a rendering of it, tracking the Greek line for line and indent for indent. On the Gloria the columns were two recensions (388); here they are text and translation in the ordinary way, which is why no asterisks stand between them. One divergence from the received text is kept: ἄξιόν ἐστιν, it is meet that thou be hymned, stands here as ἄξιός εἰ, worthy art thou — the second person, and the Latin's Dignus es agrees, so it is the recension and not a slip.

Quoniam Tu solus sanctus,
Tu solus Dominus, Jesu Christe,
cum Sancto Spiritu,
5 in gloria Dei Patris. Amen.

strike a solemn hymn

to the King upon his cross.

O Treasure of wonders, unsated and unbounded:

10 What shall I say to thee, and what first?

I would tell a thing unspeakable to mortals,

and a riddle to the blessed spirits,<sup>i</sup>

How, being God, thou didst die!

I would tell the untrackable deeps

the Father gave the Son.

I would cry aloud on high

the oracled triumph

and death subdued by death.

But the hill of Skulls roars round about me, and mine ears are full of a many-voiced clamour,

of them that destroy, and them that perish.

25 Leap forth to the hill, mine eyes;

who is it hangeth in the midst of three,

(how nothing like unto the two!)

<sup>i</sup> Twice on this leaf the facing Latin is the only guard against a plausible misreading of the Greek. Μακάρεσσι δαίμοσι would give demons to anyone without the Latin's Beatisque Angelis — in this Homeric register δαίμονες are the blessed spirits, and "demons" would be a serious and pious-looking error. The next line carries the graver case: the poem's most famous cry stands set as Πᾶς, Θεὸς ὢν, ἔθανες — πᾶς cannot be construed at all, and the Latin's Qui, Deus immortalis, mortuus es? gives the interrogative. Πῶς, how: a wrong sort, kept as printed. Unlike the Hebrew at 386 this leaf survives in a single photograph, so there is no second copy to confirm it from.

<sup>ii</sup> And three lines later the Latin must be refused. The Greek has the Father give the Son for a ransom ὑπ' ἐχθρῶν, at the hands of enemies; the Latin opposite reads pro hostibus, for enemies — the familiar theology of Romans v. 10. ὑπέρ does not elide to ὑπ', so the Greek cannot be read as the Latin reads it. The English follows the Greek and leaves the crux standing, immediately after the same column twice rescued it.

and is stretched out upon the four-yoked stock?
     his gentle head
     sweetly bowed down,
 and the holy strength of his arms 5 spread abroad athwart, with pitiless nails
 pierced through on this side and on that!
 Wretched man, dost thou look on this unmoved?
     Wail sore,

     and smite thy breast,
     and tear thy hair,
     and stir thy bowels.

 30      To shed some few tears —
     what grudging is that, O mortal?

<sup>i</sup> A breathing is wrong here, and the sense turns on it. The line opens Ἡ οὐχ ὁράας with a rough breathing, which makes it the feminine article and cannot stand before οὐχ; what is wanted is ἦ, the interrogative particle. The Latin gives it plainly — Nonne cernis?, dost thou not see? — and the English follows. Kept as printed: a compositor's mark, not the poet's.

<sup>ii</sup> Two words are torn in half across a line-end, and the tearing is the poet's, not the printer's. ἀλ- / λ' breaks here, in the middle of the blood; χέαν- / τ' breaks thirteen lines on, in the middle of the pouring out. These are not the turned-line hyphens of a justified measure: the lines end far short of the measure, and the Latin opposite keeps the same lineation without splitting a word of its own. A word broken where the blood breaks — kept open, never closed up.

PART III — CONFESSIO FIDEI AND AFTER

ORATIONIS fundamentum et basis est fides. Theophylact.

Fidei fundamentum est Dei promissio.

Sursum corda.

Qui fecit vivere docuit et orare.

5 Ecl. xxxv. Oratio humiliantis se nubes penetrabit.

Oratio cum Deo collocutio est.

Ponam peccata meam coram me, ut non sint coram Te.

Domine, paratum est cor meum.

Domine, metuo ne non sit.

10 Utinam esset paratum.

Hei mihi quod non est.

Domine, dispono me et præparo.

Adjuva dispositionem, et præparationem meam supple.

THE foundation and ground of prayer is faith. Theophylact.<sup>i</sup>

The foundation of faith is the promise of God.

Lift up your hearts.

He that made us to live taught us also to pray.

5 Ecclus. xxxv. The prayer of him that humbleth himself shall pierce the clouds.

Prayer is a speaking together with God.

I will set my sins before me, that they be not before Thee.<sup>ii</sup>

Lord, my heart is ready.<sup>iii</sup>

Lord, I fear that it is not.

10 Would God it were ready.

Woe is me, that it is not.

Lord, I dispose myself, and prepare.

Help my disposing, and supply my preparation.

CONFESSIO FIDEI.

CREDO, Domine, adjuva incredulitatem meam,

In Deum,

1. Patrem,

5 2. Omnipotentem,

3. Creatorem cœli et terræ.

In Patrem, naturalem affectionem,

Omnipotentem, potentiam salvificam,

10 Creatorem, Providentiam, ad conservationem,

gubernationem,

perfectionem, vel

consummationem,

omnium.

15 In Jesum

Christum,

Filium suum unigenitum,

Dominum nostrum,

Magnum pietatis sacramentum, pro

20 nobis hominibus et salute nostra

manifestum in carne Deum,

Hominem Deum,

THE CONFESSION OF FAITH.

I BELIEVE, Lord; help Thou mine unbelief;<sup>i</sup>

In God,

1. The Father,<sup>ii</sup>

5 2. Almighty,

3. Maker of heaven and earth.

In the Father, a natural affection,

In the Almighty, a power that saveth,

In the Creator, a Providence,

10 unto the preserving,

the governing,

the perfecting, or the consummating

of all things.

15 In Jesus

Christ,

His only-begotten Son,

Our Lord,

The great mystery of godliness, who for 20 us men and for our salvation was

God manifest in the flesh,

Man that is God,

<sup>i</sup> The Confession of Faith opens by confessing unbelief. I believe, Lord; help Thou mine unbelief is the father of the epileptic boy's cry in Mark ix. 24, and it is set before the first article, as the door into the Creed. The Creed is not being recited but prayed, which is why every article below will be followed by what it is for.

<sup>ii</sup> Each article is numbered and then immediately told what it gives. In the Father, a natural affection · in the Almighty, a power that saveth · in the Creator, a Providence — faith here is not assent to the articles but the thing each article yields, and the third yield is opened again into four: preserving, governing, perfecting, consummating. Creation is thereby made continuous with providence rather than an act finished in the past.

2. Natum esse, ut purgaret immunditiam nativitatis naturæ nostræ.

Ut resuscitaret secum una Naturam nostram, primitiæ

- The Son of the Father,
 The Christ of the Spirit,
 Our Lord,
     because { Creator, / Redeemer, }<sup>i</sup> 5   1. That He was conceived, to purge<sup>ii</sup>
     the uncleanness of the conception of our nature.
   2. That He was born, to purge the uncleanness of the nativity of our nature.
   3. That He suffered 10      what we must have suffered,
     that we should not suffer it.
   4. Crucified,
     To take away the curse of the law.
   5. Dead,
 15      To take away the sting of death.
   6. Buried, to take away the corruption
     Of our bodies in the grave.
   7. That He descended into hell, whither we must have gone,
 20      that we should never go down thither.
   8. That He rose again from the dead,
     To raise up together with Himself
     Our nature, being made the firstfruits of them that slept.
 25   9. That He ascended into heaven,
     To prepare a place for us,
     where we had no right at all.
   10. That He sitteth at the right hand of the Father,
     That He may appear without ceasing

<sup>i</sup> The lordship is given two grounds and the brace holds them equal — Our Lord, because Creator and because Redeemer. Neither is subordinated to the other, and the brace is the plate's own.

<sup>ii</sup> Every article of the Creed is given a purpose, and each purpose is exactly reciprocal to us. Conceived, to purge the uncleanness of our conception · born, to purge our nativity · suffered what we must have suffered, that we should not suffer it · descended into hell, whither we must have gone, that we should never go down thither · ascended, to prepare a place for us, where we had no right at all. The pattern is not decoration but the section's method: each thing done is set against the thing it excused us, so the Creed is read as a ledger of exchanges. The English keeps the parallel clauses parallel, at whatever cost in elegance.

Et intercedat pro nobis.

11. Inde rediturum,

- And make intercession for us.
 11. That He shall return from thence,
     To receive us.
 12. That He shall be Judge
 5       At the consummation of all things.
3. In the Holy Ghost,
     And in Him
     A power from on high that sanctifieth,<sup>i</sup>
     And quickeneth unto immortality, 10     From without and invisibly, but

     Us working,
         By the enlightening of righteousness,
         By the infusion of grace,
 15     In reproof,
         doctrine,
         long-suffering,
         succour,
         testimony;
 20         The gifts,
         The fruits,
         of this Spirit.
4. The Holy Catholic Church,<sup>ii</sup>
     The mystical body of Christ the head,
 25     Of them whom the Spirit calleth
     Out of the whole world,
     Unto the faith of divine truth,
     Unto holiness of conversation,
     Of all the members of this body

<sup>i</sup> The Spirit's manner of working is stated in a pair of adverbs, and the pair is the doctrine. From without and invisibly, but effectually and manifestly in us working — the source outside the man and hidden, the effect inside him and plain to see. The offices that follow are equally exact, and gifts are kept distinct from fruits: the one given, the other grown.

<sup>ii</sup> The preposition drops at the fourth article, and its dropping is the whole of the ancient distinction. The Latin has In Deum, In Jesum Christum, 3. In Spiritum Sanctum — and then 4. Sanctam Catholicam Ecclesiam, accusative, with no in. We believe in God; we believe the Church — a difference the Fathers made much of and this page makes without a word of comment. The Church is then defined by what the Spirit does: them whom the Spirit calleth out of the whole world. The English keeps the preposition where the Latin has it and drops it where the Latin drops it.

 I believe, Lord; supply the defects of my faith;<sup>i</sup>
 10    That Thee
       As Father I may love,
       As Almighty revere;
 That to Thee, as unto a faithful Creator, I may commit my soul.   1 Pet. 4:[19]
 15    That to Thy Word and only Son
 I may give thanks with unceasing remembrance,
 As to the cleanser of our nature,
       in { conception and / nativity; }
 As to the deliverer of our persons, in 20       His Passions, Cross,
       Death;
 As to the conqueror<sup>ii</sup>
       over hell, in His Descent;
 25       over death, in His Resurrection;
 As to our Forerunner,
       in His Ascension;
 To our Advocate,

<sup>i</sup> The Creed begins again here, and this is the second of three passes over it. I believe, Lord; supply the defects of my faith answers the opening help Thou mine unbelief at 399 — and what follows is no longer what each article is, but what each Person is owed: the Father loved, the Almighty revered, the Creator trusted with a soul, the Son thanked. The articles have not changed; the verbs have.

<sup>ii</sup> The two conquests are kept apart, and each is given its own event. Conqueror over hell, in His Descent · conqueror over death, in His Resurrection — where a looser hand would have let one victory cover both. The series then runs on past the conquests into offices — Forerunner in the Ascension, Advocate in the Session, finisher of our faith in the second Advent — so that every clause of the Creed is doing a distinct piece of work, and none is left as mere narrative.

in sessione;

rentes ea quæ sursum sunt, et viciniora salutem;
30 Judicio, nosmetipsos dijudi-

in His Session;
 To the finisher of our faith,
 in His second Advent.
 That Christ Himself may be formed in us,<sup>i</sup>
 5 that we may be made conformable
 To His Image in works,
 To His Conception in faith,
 To His Nativity in humility;
 For His Passions,
 10 To have a fellow-feeling with Him,
 as with one suffering for us;
 To suffer for His sake when it is His good pleasure.
 To have an antipathy against sin,
 15 as the cause of these His sufferings.
 To avenge,<sup>ii</sup>
 To crucify,
 To mortify,
 To bury 20 the sin that is in us.
 That we be made conformable
 To His Descent into hell,
 By frequent meditation into hell going down;
 25 To His Resurrection, unto newness of life rising again;
 To His Ascension, being wise, and seeking those things which are above, and nearer to salvation;
 30 To His Judgment, judging ourselves,

<sup>i</sup> And here the Creed is run a THIRD time, now as a pattern to be reproduced. That Christ Himself may be formed in us — after what the articles are (399–402) and what they are owed (402), what they must become in the believer: the Conception answered by faith, the Nativity by humility, the Passion by a fellow-feeling, the Descent into hell by frequent meditation going down into it, the Resurrection by newness of life, the Ascension by seeking the things above. Three passes over one Creed is the section's whole architecture, and a reader who takes the numbered clauses for a list will miss that the list has been begun over twice.

<sup>ii</sup> Four verbs for one object, and the fourth completes the parallel. To avenge, to crucify, to mortify, to bury the sin that is in us — the burial is what makes it conformity rather than mere severity: the sin is not only killed but put where Christ's body was put, and the next clause goes down into hell after it. The English keeps all four and lets none absorb another.

that with the world
     we be not condemned.
 When we are cold in prayer,<sup>i</sup>
     and stand in need of some grace
 5      and of heavenly consolation,
     To remember
     The Throne,
     The Appearing,
     The Intercession
 10      that are Thine.
 When we teem with affection,
     And with evil concupiscence,
     Never to forget Thy dread
     And terrible judgement-seat, and 15      unceasingly in our ears to sound the sound of the last trump.
 That for Thy Christ's sake, of Thee
     the Father only-begotten,
     We may receive 20      Thine Unction,
     The grace that bringeth salvation,
     Of the Holy Ghost,
     Thine unspeakable gift,
     In saving compunction,
 25      Clear knowledge,
     Fervent prayer,
     The shedding abroad of charity.
 That I never quench the Spirit,<sup>ii</sup>
     Nor strive against Him,
 30      Nor grieve Him,

<sup>i</sup> Two opposite diseases are given two opposite remedies, and the same Christ is the medicine for both. When we are cold in prayer — remember the Throne, the Appearing, the Intercession, which are the consoling things. When we teem with affection and with evil concupiscence — never forget the dread and terrible judgement-seat, and let the sound of the last trump sound unceasingly in the ears. Comfort against coldness, terror against heat, and the prescription is symmetrical down to its clause-structure. A physician's page, and the parallel is the diagnosis.

<sup>ii</sup> Four sins against the Spirit, and each is a different verb from a different book. Quench is 1 Thessalonians v. 19 · strive against is Stephen's ye do always resist the Holy Ghost, Acts vii. 51 · grieve is Ephesians iv. 30 · do despite is Hebrews x. 29, hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace. A reader with only the English will hear a rhetorical heap where the plate has four distinct scriptural offences, gathered from four books and set in ascending order of gravity. None is a synonym for another.

<sup>i</sup> The communion of saints is opened out into four things, and only the first of them is people. Holy persons, actions, prayers, liturgies — the fellowship is with acts and rites as much as with men, which is the wider of the two senses the phrase has always carried, and the page takes it by enumerating rather than by arguing. Note also that the line above hangs Catholica at the head of its own line, where the Latin has it agreeing with the Church — in thy Catholic Church, not "called Catholic." The plate's lineation is kept and the sense is given here.

<sup>ii</sup> The faith asked for is defined by four counterfeits before a single positive word, and every one of the four is a New Testament controversy. Not dead — James ii. 17 · not for a time — the believers of Luke viii. 13, who for a while believe · not hypocritical — the faith unfeigned of 1 Timothy i. 5 · not destroying the Law — Romans iii. 31, do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid. Only then the positive, and it is Galatians and James together: working by love, working together with works. A section that opened by confessing unbelief closes by ruling out the four ways of believing wrongly — and the Creed it has run three times is left standing on a faith that must be shown to be alive.

THE CONFESSION OF SINS.

I CONFESS unto Thee, O Lord,<sup>i</sup>

That I was conceived in unclean seed, Job xiv. 14.<sup>ii</sup> warmed in iniquity

5 in my mother's womb, Ps. li. 6.

A root of bitterness, Deut. xxix. 18.

A wild vine of Sodom, Deut. xxxii. 32.

A generation of vipers, Matt. iii. 7.

A shoot of the wild olive, Rom. xi. 24.

10 A child of wrath, Eph. ii. 3.

A vessel of destruction, [Rom. ix. 22.]

Having a rebellious heart, like a deceitful bow, [Hos. vii. 16.]

A mouth as an open sepulchre, [Ps. v. 11.]

Bubbling out follies, [Prov. xv. 2.]

15 Having polluted lips, [Isa. vi. 5.]

A tongue that is a world of iniquity, [Jas. iii. 6.]

Wicked eyes, prone to lusts, [Ecclus. xxxi. 13.]

Uncircumcised ears, like the deaf adder, [Jer. vi. 10.]

A whore's forehead, like brass, [Jer. iii. 3.]

20 A hard neck, like an iron sinew, [Isa. xlvi. 4.]

Hands slack unto good, [Heb. xii. 12.]

Feet swift unto evil. [Prov. vi. 18.]

Whatsoever I have done<sup>iii</sup>

Is either a spider's web, [Isa. lix. 5.]

25 Or a cockatrice' egg. [Ibid.]

<sup>i</sup> The confession is an anatomy, not a list of sins. After the origin — conceived in unclean seed, warmed in iniquity in my mother's womb — the accusation goes down the body in order: heart, mouth, lips, tongue, eyes, ears, forehead, neck, hands, feet. Ten members, each with its own text, and no deed named anywhere: what is confessed is not what the man did but what he is made of. The scripture band is empty on this leaf by decision — the plate prints a reference against almost every line and our English keeps it there, so a tag beneath would repeat the line above it (§3a).

<sup>ii</sup> The reference here is wrong, and the volume corrects it eighty-three pages earlier. That I was conceived in unclean seed wants Job xiv. 4 — who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? not one — where the plate prints xiv. 14, which is if a man die, shall he live again? Printed 323 cites the same verse rightly, as Job xiv. 4. The corroborating witness is the book itself, and both places stand as printed.

<sup>iii</sup> The whole inventory is concluded out of a single verse, split in two. Whatsoever I have done is either a spider's web, or a cockatrice' egg — both halves are Isaiah lix. 5, and the plate's Ibid. on the second is what shows it. The two images are not a doubling but a division: the web is what is futile, woven and clothing nobody; the egg is what is lethal, and hatches. Every work is one or the other, and there is no third case.

 Sins
Isa. lii. 8. Broad,

<sup>i</sup> Jeremiah's landscape of idolatry is turned inward and made the man's own. Upon every green field, under every leafy tree is the prophets' standing phrase for the high places, where the nation's whoredoms were committed — here it locates his own sins, so that the ground the idols stood on is himself. The figure beside it works the same way: as a fountain its waters, so my heart its sins — not a man who sins but a spring that cannot help it.

<sup>ii</sup> The page's argument is a hardening in three stages, and each stage has its own proof-text. First into a habit — scarlet (Isaiah i. 18, the dye that will not wash) and sold (Ahab, who sold himself to work wickedness, and Paul sold under sin). Then into a nature — the leopard's spots and the Ethiopian's skin, Jeremiah's two things that cannot be changed. Then the third stage, which has no image because there is nothing left to compare it to: until I am myself not a sinner, but sin — sealed with Micah i. 5, where the prophet does not say Samaria has sinned but that Samaria is the sin. Act, habit, nature, identity: the English keeps the four steps distinct and lets none blur into the next.

Rom. vi. 21. For what fruit have I now in those things whereof I am ashamed?
 [Jer. ii. 13.] Empty cisterns, that hold no water.

<sup>i</sup> Sin is measured here, and the measures are all physical. Broad · hard · great in quantity · long, from my mother's breasts · thick, cords of iniquity · deep · heavy as a burden, as lead — seven magnitudes, each with its text, and the reader should notice the plate has now moved its references out of the line and into a column down the left margin, where before they ran inline. The series then breaks its own pattern: the last item is not an eighth measure but a sound — reaching to heaven itself by their cry. What could not be measured any further is heard instead.

<sup>ii</sup> The aggravations are each headed Quia, because, and they mount to one that cannot be exceeded. Because for nothing, for vanities · because for a handful of barley, for a morsel of bread · because with greediness · because with a hard forehead · because to the offence of others · because ungrateful · the sow to her wallowing — and then the last and shortest: Quia Christianus, because a Christian, under Galatians ii. 21, I do not frustrate the grace of God. The heaviest aggravation in the catalogue is two words long, and it is the only one that is not a description of the sin but of the sinner.

<sup>i</sup> This leaf carries two wrong references, and the volume gives the right reading for both of them elsewhere. My days are consumed in vanity, and my years in anguish of heart stands here under Psal. xl. 9; the verse is Ps. lxxviii. 33, and printed 25 cites that same half-verse correctly. The second is at the foot of the page (see below). Both are kept as printed. The corroborating witness in each case is this book, three hundred and eighty pages apart, which is a stronger warrant than any conjecture and is why neither is mended.

<sup>ii</sup> The second twin of §37, and it differs from its Part II fellow twice over. The chapter figure reads Is. xxxiii. 15 — he that walketh righteously, which is the opposite of what the line wants. The verse is Hezekiah's, Isaiah xxxviii. 15, and printed 372–373 cites it rightly. And the sentence itself has changed. Both recensions turn the Vulgate's cum ipse fecerit — when He hath done it — into fecerim, when I have; but §37 stammers it, fecerim, fecerim, fecerim, three times and with no object, where here it is said once and given one: cum ipse hæc fecerim. Where Part II could not get past the word, Part III names the thing done. Neither recension is conformed to the other, and the triple stands as a triple there.

 Lord, hear my voice.
 If Thou, Lord, wilt be extreme to mark iniquities,
 O Lord, Lord, who may abide it?
 Enter not into judgment with Thy 10 servant, for in Thy sight shall no man living be justified.
 I appeal therefore, O Lord, from Thee<sup>i</sup> unto Thee,
 From Thee the just,
 15 Unto Thee the merciful,
 From the seat of justice,
 Unto the throne of grace,
 From Thee the judge,
 Unto Thee the Father in Christ.
 20 Admit, O Lord, this peaceable appeal.

<sup>i</sup> An appeal is lodged from God to God, and it is a formal legal act. I appeal therefore, O Lord, from Thee unto Thee — from Thee the just, unto Thee the merciful · from the seat of justice, unto the throne of grace · from Thee the judge, unto Thee the Father in Christ. The court appealed from and the court appealed to are the same court, and what makes the appeal lie is not a second judge but the Incarnation: it is the Father in Christ who receives it. The forensic habit runs through the whole book — the Allegatio of §7, the Interpellatio of §32, the Areopagus at 386 — but this is the boldest of them, and the English keeps the legal words as legal words.

<sup>ii</sup> The ground of that appeal is God's own stated will, cited back to Him. Who wilt have all men to be saved (1 Timothy ii. 4) and who wilt have no man perish (2 Peter iii. 9) are set as a pair — two declarations of what God wills, entered as evidence against His justice and in favour of His mercy. The line above them is the disciples' carest thou not that we perish?, printed under Marc. iv. 28; the verse is iv. 38, and the volume cites it rightly at printed 286 and again at 294. Kept as printed, the third such figure in two leaves.

<sup>i</sup> The first plea is a chain of titles, and every one of them is conceded before it is held onto. A servant, and a waster, yet a servant · bought with the price of the blood of Thy Son · though a naughty son, and a prodigal, yet a son for all that · though I have lost the free birth of a son, yet Thou hast not lost the pity of a Father. The form is the same each time — the accusation admitted in full, and the relation held anyway — and it is what keeps the page from being either self-excusing or despairing.

<sup>ii</sup> And then the plea leaves the man's account altogether and rests on God's property. Spare Thine own work, spare Thine own Name, spare the price of Thine own blood — if Thou wilt not spare us. The last clause concedes the whole case and asks anyway, on the ground that the thing to be destroyed belongs to the one destroying it. What is at stake is stated as God's loss, not the sinner's, which is the argument the three preceding titles were laid down for.

Ps. cxli. 4. I excuse not excuses in sin.

<sup>i</sup> A brace pairs three names with three properties, and the pairing is the argument. Dust · Wind · Flesh stand against frail · light · dissolved — each noun answered by what it cannot help being, so the confession of what he is made of doubles as the reason he cannot be held to account for it. The two texts beneath press it: Thou wilt not pursue the stubble is Job's, addressed to God; wilt Thou chase a flea? is David's, addressed to Saul. A word spoken to a king is here spoken to God, which is this book's habit and is done without a mark.

<sup>ii</sup> Three human kings are entered as precedents binding upon God, and the argument mounts to the worst of them. David spared Shimei who cursed him — and David was a man after Thine own heart, so the standard is one God set himself. Then the kings of Israel, who are merciful — which is not Israel's estimate of them but Ben-hadad's servants', a pagan's reckoning quoted with approval, and answered is there any King of Israel more merciful than Thou? And last, Ahab — who had sold himself unto sin — Thou didst spare him when he humbled himself, spare me also. The final plea is that God should not do less for this man than He once did for Ahab.

<sup>i</sup> Having appealed away from the judgement seat, he sets one up himself. But I judge myself · I think upon it again · I pronounce the sentence · I take vengeance myself upon myself. This is the other half of the appeal at 410: justice was asked to stand aside there, and here the man supplies it in his own person, so that nothing is asked to be waived, only moved. If we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged was quoted at printed 386 as a counsel; here it is an act performed — the same verse twice over and never for the same thing. Note the plate cites it there as 1 Cor. xi. 31 and here as xi. 30; the volume gives its own right figure, and both stand as printed.

<sup>ii</sup> The plea changes hands here and becomes Moses'. Shall the enemy upbraid Thee, that Thou didst create us to slay us ... or because Thou canst not save? is the argument from Numbers xiv — what the Egyptians will say — and it is joined to Joshua's and to the psalmist's the enemy hath reproached the Lord. What is offered is no longer the sinner's need but God's standing among those who are watching. Remember what my substance is returns here as well: the fifth place in this volume for Psalm lxxxix, and in none of the five is it doing the same work.

5. Wherefore spare me, that desire to return into favour.

<sup>i</sup> This line is a cento of three places in Job, and it passes through three different texts of them without a mark. The infant of one day is Job xiv. 4 as the Septuagint reads it — not one, even if his life be but one day upon the earth — which the Vulgate does not say at all, its verse asking only who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean. Andrewes uses the phrase in his own voice in a Pentecost sermon and names his authority there: infans unius diei super terram, as the Seventy read it. Augustine had given it in the same Latin, nec infans cuius est unius diei vita super terram. The middle clause is Vulgate verbatim and from another chapter — Job xxv. 5, stellæ non sunt mundæ in conspectu ejus, with ipsæ added and ejus turned to Tuo. The last clause is Job iv. 18 and is not the Vulgate either: that reads in angelis suis reperit pravitatem, found depravity, where this has respexisti insipientiam, folly, which is the Hebrew's word and the Authorised Version's. Whether he took it from a Latin made out of the Hebrew or turned it himself is not settled. The plate's figure covers none of the three: Job xxv. 3 is is there any number of his armies? Kept as printed. Brightman's margin supplies the two outer references and none for the stars. And Job xiv. 4 is the verse this book cites rightly at printed 323 and misnumbers at 406 as xiv. 14 — quarried here a third time, with no page marking the other two.

<sup>ii</sup> Three questions, and each asks what God himself stands to lose. What wilt Thou do unto that great Name of Thine? is Joshua's after the defeat at Ai · what unto those riches of Thy mercy? · what unto the blood of Thy Son? Shall He die for nought? That last is Galatians ii. 21 — the very verse that six leaves back was the heaviest charge against him, where sinning because a Christian frustrated the grace of God. Here the same text is turned round and pleads for him. Never the same work twice, and the two places do not refer to one another.

6. Nay, if I know Thee well, O Lord, and<sup>ii</sup>

15 Thou art good to the good and to them that deserve well, gracious to strangers and to them that deserve nothing, merciful to the evil, and to them that deserve ill.

Upon this last I take my stand.

Isa. xliii. 24. When for no man's sake Thou canst, 20 When for nothing's sake, for Thine own sake Thou forgivest sins,
 So easy art Thou to pardon.

7. But David the prophet durst pray thus,

Ps. cxix. 29. Have mercy upon me out of Thy law; as though 25 the law itself proclaimed Thee gentle.
 And so indeed Thou art;

Thy law from Thine own mouth soundeth thus.

Exod. xxxiv. [6, 7.] The Ruler, the Lord God, merciful and gracious, longsuffering and of much compassion,

<sup>i</sup> Four texts in a row make one argument, and it is an argument from God's own loss. What profit is there in my blood? · shall any in death give Thee thanks? · shall Thy wondrous works be known in the dark? · the grave shall not confess Thee, neither shall Death praise Thee. A dead man cannot praise, so the praise is what God forfeits by killing him — the same reckoning as the three questions at 414, now made out of the Psalter alone. It closes on the one thing the dead cannot say: the living, the living, he shall confess Thee, as I do this day.

<sup>ii</sup> Goodness is divided into three, and the division exists so that its worst class can be claimed. Good to the good and to them that deserve well · gracious to strangers and to them that deserve nothing · merciful to the evil, and to them that deserve ill. Then, in five words, the whole use of the taxonomy: Upon this last I take my stand. He has sorted God's kindnesses in order to put himself in the lowest bin and claim it as his own — and the ground offered is not desert but its absence: when for no man's sake Thou canst, when for nothing's sake, for Thine own sake Thou forgivest sins.

who keepeth mercy for thousands, who taketh away iniquity and wickedness.

Num. xiv. 7. And by this very word of Thine did Moses afterward adjure Thee, that Thou wouldest pardon the people.

5 8. But Esaias and Abacuc dare,<sup>i</sup> for this cause, to call it Thine own work to shew mercy:
 As though to punish and to chastise were a strange work,
 and abhorrent from Thy disposition.

9. Nor was it the law and the prophets only,<sup>ii</sup>
 10 nature itself persuaded Job of this, by the leading of Thy Spirit.

Job xxxiii. 23. If there be with him an Angel speaking, one of a thousand, to declare unto man
 Thy righteousness,
 He will have mercy upon him, and say, Deliver him,
 15 that he go not down into corruption;
 For I have found wherein I may be gracious unto him.
 Then shall he pray unto God, and He will be favourable.

Ps. xxxiv. 6. O taste and see how gracious is 20 the Lord:

1 Pet. ii. 3. Blessed is the man that hopeth in Him.

HIS MERCY.

Ps. cix. 20. Sweet,

[Ps.] lxix. 17. Pleasant,

25 [Ps.] lxiii. 4. Better than life.

<sup>i</sup> Punishing is made God's strange work and mercy His own. Isaiah and Habakkuk are cited to call it Thine own work to shew mercy: as though to punish and to chastise were a strange work, and abhorrent from Thy disposition — Isaiah's own phrase for it, his strange work, his strange act. The asymmetry is doctrinal, not rhetorical: mercy belongs to God's nature and judgement is something He is put to.

<sup>ii</sup> The witnesses are climbed in numbered steps, and the last step is nature — but not left standing alone. The law (7), the prophets (8), and then nature itself persuaded Job of this — immediately qualified, by the leading of Thy Spirit, so that even the argument from nature is referred back to grace. And the text chosen answers the leaf before it. At 413 Job ix. 3 was the impossibility of reply — not one of a thousand could answer God. Here Job xxxiii. 23 makes one of a thousand an angel who answers for him, and says Deliver him ... for I have found wherein I may be gracious. The same phrase, twice, and never the same work.

THE FATHER OF MERCIES.<sup>ii</sup>

- 1 Cor.* i. 3. Natural unto Him.
Ps. lix. 18. Mercy itself is called God.
 20 August. O Name, under which no man may despair.
Chrysos. Great is the gulf of my sins, but greater is the deep of the mercy of God.
 1. But of what kind it is in particular:

<sup>i</sup> Mercy is measured, and this is the third time the volume reaches for measurement — but not with the same measures. Printed 315 took Paul's length, breadth, depth to measure a wound, and 319 took the same three to measure mercy. Here breadth and depth return, height is added — unto the heavens, then above the heavens — and length is made time: everlasting, before and after. Then the two things measured against: over our sin (Romans v. 20) and over His own justice (James ii. 13, where mercy rejoiceth against judgment). The second is the harder claim and the page makes it without argument.

<sup>ii</sup> Mercy is not an attribute God has but a name God is, and the point is made by citation rather than argument. Natural unto Him · Mercy itself is called God · Augustine's O Name, under which no man may despair · Chrysostom's great is the gulf of my sins, but greater is the deep of the mercy of God. The two fathers are set to answer the two things the section has been afraid of — the name that forbids despair, and a depth measured against the gulf just confessed.

- { Patient, / Longsuffering, / Slow to anger, / Long refraining Himself, }<sup>i</sup>
Wisd. xi. 23. Winking at the sins of men that they may repent.
Ps. xcvi. [10.] Bearing with them forty whole years
 5 [Ps.] lxxviii. 38. But He was so merciful, and so gracious was He, and soon appeased, that He destroyed them not.
 Yea, many a time turned He His wrath away,
 and would not suffer His whole displeasure to arise.
 10 [Luke xix. 42.] O if thou also knewest.
 [Lam. iii. 22.] It is of the mercies of God that we are not all consumed.
2. Gentle in the very chastising,<sup>ii</sup> so that not even His judgment is 15 void of mercy.
 The punishment is a part of the mercy,
Ps. lxxxix. 32. I will visit their offences with the rod, Yet My mercy will I not take from him.
 [Ps.] ciii. 10. He hath not dealt with us after our sins, nor 20 rewarded us according to our wickednesses.
 For a great sin a little punishment sufficeth a father.
Hos. xi. 8. How shall I smite thee, Ephraim?
3. Easiness to be entreated. Because readily.
 25 Ps. ciii. 9. He is appeased, neither will He be alway chiding, nor keep His anger for ever.

<sup>i</sup> Four near-synonyms are braced together, and the point of the brace is that they are not quite synonyms. Patient · Longsuffering · Slow to anger · Long refraining Himself — the last is not a temper but an act, something God does to God. Beneath them the Vulgate's dissimulas: God winking at the sins of men, that they may repent — a pretence of not seeing, held for the sake of the outcome.

<sup>ii</sup> Judgement is folded inside mercy rather than set against it. Not even His judgment is void of mercy — and then the sentence the whole head turns on: The punishment is a part of the mercy, with the psalm's I will visit their offences with the rod, yet My mercy will I not take from him. Two leaves back the argument was the opposite way about, where punishing was God's strange work and foreign to His disposition (416). Here it is not foreign but instrumental, and for a great sin a little punishment sufficeth a father. Neither statement is qualified by the other, and the book leaves both standing.

in the day of their trouble those who in the time of their peace despised Him.

<sup>i</sup> Here, in its own words and its own tense, is the verse this book everywhere turns into a command. David said, I have sinned, O Lord. Nathan answered, The Lord also hath put away thy sin, thou shalt not die. It is an indicative, and it is somebody else's — a prophet's word to a king, reported as narrative. Elsewhere the volume takes exactly this sentence and prays it back as Transfer, put thou away; here it is left standing as the thing that was said. A reader who has crossed Part II will recognise the raw material of the book's commonest movement, printed once in the state it was found in.

<sup>ii</sup> The fourth property of mercy is fellow-suffering, and it is not softened. Though we deserve it, yet He grieveth with us in our calamity — and the name for it is Zacharias' tender bowels of His mercy, the viscera misericordiae, which is an organ and not a sentiment. The close answers a concession made eight leaves back: at 411 the plea had granted that God heareth not sinners — John ix. 31, in the mouth of the man born blind. Here: who not only heareth sinners, but also, in the day of their trouble, those who in the time of their peace despised Him. The objection is not argued down; it is simply outlived.

forsook Him, the thief that blasphemed, and the Jews that 25         crucified Him.

Luke vi. 35. He is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil.

6. And not pardon only, but grace also

---

<sup>i</sup> Two fathers take back two sons, and the pardons are deliberately unequal. David brought Absalom back — yet at the first that he should not see his face, and at the last admitted him to the kiss: a pardon in stages, with the face withheld. The prodigal's father not only forgave him, but made ready the best robe and the ring, and the fatted calf — everything at once, and nothing withheld. The head being illustrated is lavish pardon, so the first example stands as the measure the second exceeds.

<sup>ii</sup> The law is quoted in full and then overruled by the lawgiver, and the contradiction is left on the page. Jeremiah states the rule and its inescapable answer: a wife put away who become another man's is defiled — shall she return unto him again? Deuteronomy says she shall not. Then, without a word of reconciliation: but thou hast played the harlot with many lovers; yet return again unto Me, saith the Lord. The list beneath it climbs by the same logic — the disciples that forsook Him, Peter that forsook Him, the thief that blasphemed, and the Jews that crucified Him — each pardon harder than the last, and the series stops only at the worst case it can name.

9. And He is merciful not by practice only, but by promise.

25 Ps. cxix. 49. Thus David speaketh, O think upon Thy word

<sup>i</sup> Grace is given three motions in a brace, and the three are a doctrine in three words. Preventing — going before, the gratia praeveniens of the schools · Following · Compassing about, on every side. Before, behind and around, so that no approach is left for the man to have made himself: the sequence forecloses the question of who moved first.

<sup>ii</sup> God is said to have learned mercy, and to be practised in it. He is merciful not by nature only, but by practice ... He hath learned to shew mercy, and hath had the practice of it from of old. The numbered heads are climbing a ladder of grounds — nature, then practice, then promise, then Christ — and each is meant to be harder to doubt than the last. The denials beneath are three prophetic figures for a God grown incapable, all refused: not a spring dried up, not a hand shortened, not an ear made heavy.

Son of David, who forgave Shimei that blasphemed,

and was his sworn enemy,

<sup>25</sup> Do Thou also, O Lord, forgive;

Christ, hear us;

Christ, intercede with us;

Christ, intercede for us.

Do away our sins,

<sup>i</sup> Three men who would not take back a word, and the argument gains force as the witnesses lose worth. If Isaac would not change his word — the blessing got by fraud, yea, and he shall be blessed · if the Persian would not, a heathen — Darius, bound by the law of the Medes against his own friend · if profane Pilate would not — what I have written I have written. Then: Surely God never will. The series descends in dignity while ascending in strength, and ends on the man who condemned Christ. It is the same move as the appeal to Ahab at 412: the argument is strongest where the example is worst.

<sup>ii</sup> The plea is that one memory must not drive out another. Augustine: Lord, look not so upon my sin that Thou shouldest therefore forget Thine own Name. And the Name is not incidental to the argument — Jesu, this is His name, because He saveth us from our sins, so that to remember the Name is already to have granted the request. Shimei returns here from printed 412, where David sparing him was offered as a precedent; now it is the title that carries it — Son of David, who forgave Shimei ... do Thou also forgive.

25 And not for ours only, but for the sins of the whole world.

Nor in vain shalt Thou Thyself have said,<sup>ii</sup>

Matt. xi. 25. Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will refresh you.

<sup>i</sup> The apostles are called as witnesses in a numbered series, and one of them is never announced. Thine Apostle is Paul, then the second Apostle is Peter, then the fourth is John — but James stands between them, quoted and not counted: mercy rejoiceth against judgment, in its place in the order and without a heading of its own. Reported as it stands; nothing is supplied.

<sup>ii</sup> The last witness called is Christ himself, and the series was built to end there. Nor in vain shalt Thou Thyself have said, Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden. After the apostles, the one they were witnesses to — and the tense is the point: shalt Thou have said, so that the whole chain of quotations is set as evidence of something that would be void if the invitation failed. The figure printed against it is Matt. xi. 25, where the words are xi. 28; kept as printed.

5 Ps. xciv. [19.] Wherefore in the multitude of the sorrows in my heart, these Thy comforts have refreshed
my soul.

[Heb. iv. 16.] Wherefore let us come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and 10 find grace to help in time of need.

Dan. ix. 17. Now therefore hear, O Lord our God, the prayer of Thy servant, and his supplications, and cause Thy face to shine.

[Luke xviii. 13.] God be merciful to me a sinner.<sup>ii</sup>

15 [Ps. cxliii. 7.] Hear me, O Lord, and that soon, for my spirit waxeth faint.

<sup>i</sup> The verdict clause of the whole argument, and then the turn from proving to asking. These things were not said in vain, they cannot be — everything quoted since 415 has been entered as evidence, and this is the finding upon it. Three wherefores then mark the change of business: wherefore ... these Thy comforts have refreshed my soul · wherefore let us come boldly unto the throne of grace · now therefore hear, O Lord. The case rested, the petition begins, and the throne appealed to is the one named at 410.

<sup>ii</sup> Twenty leaves of argument end on the shortest prayer in the Gospels. God be merciful to me a sinner — the publican's seven words, reached only after the law, the prophets, nature, the apostles and Christ have each been called. The disproportion is the point: the whole apparatus was built to earn the right to say the one sentence that needed none of it.

hath visited and redeemed His people.

2 Cor. i. 3. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord

25 Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God [ver. 4] of all comfort, who comforteth us in all our tribulation.

Ps. cxi. 1. I will confess unto Thee, O Lord, with my whole heart, privately among the just, and in the congregation.

<sup>i</sup> The catena tags each blessing with whose it was, and one of the tags does not fit its text. Blessed be the God of Jethro is exact — Exodus xviii. 10 is Jethro's own blessing. But Let us sing unto the Lord of Isaac and of the Israelites is Exodus xv. 2, the song at the Red Sea, which is Moses' and Israel's, and Isaac has no part in it. Whether the name is a compositor's slip, a scribe's, or a compression of something else cannot be settled, and nothing is claimed here. Transcribed as printed and left as a question.

<sup>ii</sup> Four apostolic blessings are set in a row and three of them open with the same words. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ stands three times — from 1 Peter, from Ephesians, from 2 Corinthians — with Zacharias' Blessed be the Lord God of Israel set among them. The repetition is not accidental and is not reduced: one formula, four grounds — a new birth, a spiritual blessing, a visitation, and comfort in tribulation.

- 25 Ps. lxvi. 8. O bless our God, ye peoples, [ver. 9] and make the voice of His praise to be heard, who suffered my feet to be moved.

- [Ps.] xcii. 4. For Thou, Lord, hast made me glad through Thy 30 work, in the operations of Thy hands will I rejoice.

<sup>i</sup> The thanksgiving begins before birth, and it is the exact counterpart of the confession at 406. Psalm cxxxix and Job x are laid together to make one embryology: my substance in the lower parts of the earth · Thine eyes did see my imperfection · Thou hast milked me out as milk, and curdled me like cheese · clothed me with skin and flesh, and fenced me with bones and sinews. Printed 406 began at the same place — conceived in unclean seed, warmed in iniquity in my mother's womb — and then went down the body member by member. The same body is catalogued twice in this Part, once as filth and once as workmanship, and neither page mentions the other.

<sup>ii</sup> Jacob is here for the third time in this volume, and each time it is a different clause of the same night. Here it is his prayer before meeting Esau — I am not worthy of all Thy mercies ... with my staff I passed over this Jordan, and now I return with two bands, the whole of a life measured by what he set out with. At 422 it was I will not let Thee go, except Thou bless me; at printed 375 the wrestling was turned into a refusal — give me another Thee; else will I not let Thee go. One night at the ford, quarried three times and never for the same thing.

<sup>i</sup> One wrong numeral here drags four more references after it. The line above is rightly Psal. ciii. 1; this one is printed cxiii. 2 — but forget not all His benefits is Psalm ciii. 2, and so are the four verses beneath it, which the plate cites by bare figure alone (3 · 4 · 5) and which therefore hang from the wrong psalm. Five references, one slip. And the volume gives cxiii. 2 correctly on the very next leaf, at 428, for Blessed be the Name of the Lord from this time forth — which is what that psalm does say. All kept as printed.

<sup>ii</sup> The thanksgiving is made almost entirely out of other men's words. From here to the end of the leaf there is scarcely a clause that is not the Psalter's, and the plate marks the continuations by bare verse-figure — ver. 19 · 21 · 22 — so that whole psalms are walked up rather than quoted from. The one image worth halting on is a resurrection borrowed for a life: Thou ... broughtest me from the deep of the earth again.

<sup>i</sup> The doxology is compiled out of four separate visions, and it is longer than any of them. Glory, honour, blessing, power, Godhead, wisdom, might, dominion, salvation, love, thanksgiving, praise — drawn from Revelation iv, v, vii and xix, whose ascriptions each carry seven terms or fewer. No one company in heaven says all of this; the page gathers what the four said separately and offers it unto the holy and undivided Trinity. The heavenly liturgy is compiled, not quoted.

<sup>ii</sup> The list of benefits begins at bare existence and works outward, and its first three steps are meta-physical before they are social. That I am · I live · endued with reason — being, then life, then mind, which is the old ladder of the soul — and only then a citizen, a Christian, free, free-born, of an honest stock. Nothing is too fundamental to be thanked for, and the first item on the list is that there is anybody to make it.

<sup>i</sup> Three kinds of good, and the third has no classical counterpart. Of nature, of fortune, of grace — the first two are the philosophers' division of what a man may possess, and grace is added as a third that no philosopher could have supplied. The form of the pagan scheme is kept and its sufficiency denied, in three words and without argument.

<sup>ii</sup> God's acts and the man's own responses are thanked for in one undivided list. Redemption, Regeneration, Catechizing, Calling — and then, in the same brace and on the same footing, Thy Patience beside My Compunction, with the hope of pardon and if we do anything well after them. His own repentance is counted among the gifts received, not offered as something brought — which is why the possessives can sit next to each other without a seam. The English keeps them adjacent and keeps both capitals.

 15      I confess unto Thee and will confess,
     I bless, | | I will bless,
     I give thanks, | and | I will give thanks,
         All the days
         Of my life.

<sup>i</sup> Seven channels of benefit are braced together, and the last one is not like the others. Writings · Sermons · Discourse · Prayers · Examples · Reproof · Injuries — thanks is rendered for the men who have wronged him, in the same list and on the same footing as those who taught him, and the plate makes no distinction between them.

<sup>ii</sup> The page is set in three columns and the middle one carries a single word that changes. Six pairs stand opposite each other — known / unknown · manifest / hidden · which we remember / which we forget, then I confess / I will confess · I bless / I will bless · I give thanks / I will give thanks. The word between them is or through the first three and and through the last. The switch is where the page turns from what was received to what is rendered: the benefits are alternatives, of which some are hidden — but the thanks are cumulative, present and future both. The middle column is doing grammar, not decoration, and must survive into both layers.

MATUTINÆ PRECES.

Psal. lxxiv. 6. DOMINE, Tuus est dies, et Tua est nox, Tu fabricatus es auroram et solem.

cxix. 81. Ordinatione Tua perseverat dies, nam omnia Tibi serviunt.

lv. 17. Vespere, mane, et meridie, orabo, idque
instanter, et Tu, Domine, exaudies vocem orationis meæ.

v. 3. Ad Te, Domine, orabo, mane astabo Tibi, et exaudies vocem meam.

Benedictus es Tu, Domine, qui con[civ. 30.] vertis in mane tenebras, et renovas faciem terræ.

xc. 5. Qui liberasti nos a terrore nocturno, a [6.] negotio perambulante in tenebris;

[xiii. 3.] Qui illuminasti oculos nostros, ne ob-dormiant in morte.

cxxxiv. 4. Qui transire fecisti somnum ab oculis nostris, et dormitationem a palpebris nostris.

Is. xlv. 22. Dele, Domine, ut nubem noctis iniqui-tates nostras, et quasi matutinam nebulam peccata nostra.

1 Thess. v. 5. Fac nos filios diei, et lucis.

25 [Rom. xiii. 13.] Da, ut caste ac sobrie ambulemus, sicut in die.

[Te Deum.] Dignare, Domine, nos hodie absque pec-cato custodire.

THE MORNING PRAYERS.

Ps. lxxiv. 6. O LORD, Thine is the day, and Thine is the night,
Thou hast made the dawn and the sun.

[Ps.] cxix. 81. By Thine ordinance the day abideth, for all things serve Thee.

[Ps.] lv. 17. At evening, and morning, and at noonday will I pray, and<sup>i</sup> that instantly; and Thou, O Lord, shalt hear the voice of my prayer.

[Ps.] v. 3. Unto Thee, O Lord, will I pray; in the morning will I stand before Thee,

and Thou shalt hear my voice.

Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who turn-

[Ps.] civ. 30. est the darkness into the morning, and renewest the face of the earth.

[Ps.] xci. 5. Who hast delivered us from the terror by night, from [ver. 6] the thing that walketh about in darkness;

[Ps.] xiii. 3. Who hast lightened our eyes, that we sleep not in death.

[Ps.] cxxxiv. 4. Who hast made sleep to pass from our eyes, and slumber from our eyelids.

Isa. xlv. 22. Blot out, O Lord, as the cloud of night our iniqui-<sup>ii</sup> ties, and as the morning mist our sins.

1 Thess. v. 5. Make us children of the day, and of the light.

[Rom. xiii. 13.] Grant that we may walk chastely and soberly, as in the day.

[Te Deum] Vouchsafe, O Lord, to keep us this day without sin.

<sup>i</sup> The book's last section returns to its first argument. At evening, and morning, and at noonday will I pray is the psalm the volume opened on at printed 2, where the canonical hours were built out of Scripture — a text found for each hour at which somebody in Scripture is praying — rather than inherited from a breviary. Four hundred pages later the hours are simply kept, without the argument, which is what it looks like when a case has been made and is being lived on.

<sup>ii</sup> Isaiah's promise is prayed back as a command for the third time in this volume, and here it is fitted to the hour. God says I have blotted out thy transgressions as a cloud; the prayer answers Blot out, O Lord, as the cloud of night our iniquities, and as the morning mist our sins. The cloud has become a night cloud and the mist a morning one — the figure adapted to the office it is being said at. The same verse stands at printed 22 already turned into a petition, and at printed 332 in God's own indicative, untouched. Three settings, and no page marks the other two.

Psal. xci. 5. Serva nos a sagitta volante interdiu, ab incursu, et a dæmone meridiano.

[3.] Libera nos a manu venantium, et a verbo aspero, a malitia diei hujus.

5 [Luc. xix. 9.] Hodie sit salus et pax domui huic.

Psal. cxliii. 8. Auditam fac mihi misericordiam Tuam, quia in Te speravi.

9. Notam fac mihi viam in qua ambulem, quia ad Te attollo animam meam.

10 10. Eripe me, Domine, de inimicis meis, ad Te enim confugio.

11. Instrue me facere, quæ placita sunt in conspectu Tuo, quia Deus meus es Tu.

15 12. Spiritus Tuus bonus deducat me in terram rectam.

xc. 16. Respice in servos Tuos, et in opera ipsorum, et sit gratia ac splendor Domini Dei nostri super nos.

Et opera manuum nostrarum dirige super nos; et opera manuum nostrarum dirige.

20 [cxli. 3.] Pone, Domine, custodiam ori meo, ostium circumstantiæ labiis meis.

Col. iv. 6. Sermo meus sit in gratia sale conspersus, ut sciam quomodo oporteat unicuique respondere.

25 [Psal. xix. 14.] Complaceant colloquia oris mei, et meditatio cordis in conspectu Tuo semper, Domine, Redemptor meus.

30 [cxxi. 8.] Dominus custodiat exitum et introitum nostrum ex hoc et in sæculum. Amen.

<sup>i</sup> One psalm is quarried across two leaves to cover the whole of a day. Psalm xci gives the night terrors on the leaf before — the terror by night, the thing that walketh about in darkness — and gives this leaf its daylight ones: the arrow that flieth by day, the assault, and the noonday devil. That last is the Vulgate against the Prayer Book, which reads the sickness that destroyeth in the noon-day, and is one of the places where our English follows the Latin because Andrewes did; it was the same at printed 24. Morning, noon and night out of a single psalm.

<sup>ii</sup> The book ends on the pair it began with, and this time the reference is right. Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth and let my speech be with grace, seasoned with salt stood together in the same order at printed 26, near the volume's opening. There the plate cited the psalm as cxli. 8, where the words are verse 3; here it prints cxli. 3. The volume corrects itself across four hundred leaves, and both figures stand as printed.

VESPERTINÆ PRECES.

Psal. cxxxiv. 3. IN noctibus extollite manus vestras in sanctuario, et benedicite Domino.

lv. 17. Vespere, mane, et meridie, orabo, idque
instanter, et Tu, Domine, exaudies vocem meam.

xlii. 10. In die mandavit Dominus misericordiam suam, ideo nocte apud me cantabam laudes Ejus, et oratio mea ad Deum vitæ meæ.

cxli. 2. Dirigatur oratio mea sicut incensum in conspectu Tuo; et elevatio manuum mearum, sicut sacrificium vespertinum.

Benedictus Tu, Domine, Qui creasti vices diei, et noctis, et das lassis requiem, et languenti virtutem renovas.

Job. xxxv. Qui das carmina de nocte,

Psal. lxxv. 8. Et facis ut exitus auroræ et vespers laudent Te.

xc. 5. Qui liberasti nos a sagitta volante interdiu, ab incursu, et a dæmone meridiano.

Is. xxxviii. 14. Qui non præcidisti, quasi textor, vitam nostram, et de mane usque vesperam non abstulisti nos.

Domine, sicut dies super dies,
peccata super peccata adjicimus.

THE EVENING PRAYERS.

Ps. cxxxiv. 3. IN the night seasons lift up your hands in the sanctuary, and bless the Lord.

[Ps.] lv. 17. At evening, and morning, and at noonday will I pray, and that instantly; and Thou, O Lord, shalt hear my voice.

[Ps.] xlii. 10. The Lord hath granted His loving-kindness in the<sup>i</sup> day-time, therefore in the night season did I sing His praises, and my prayer was unto the God of my life.

[Ps.] cxli. 2. Let my prayer be set forth as incense in Thy sight; and the lifting up of mine hands, as the evening sacrifice.

Blessed art Thou, O Lord,
Who hast made the courses of the day and of the night, and givest rest to the weary, and renewest strength to the fainting.

[Job 35] Who givest songs in the night,

Ps. lxxv. 8. And makest the outgoings of the morning and of the evening to praise Thee.

[Ps.] xci. 5. Who hast delivered us from the arrow that flieth by day, from the assault, and from the noonday devil.

Isa. xxxviii. 14. Who hast not cut off, like a weaver,<sup>ii</sup> our life, nor from the morning even unto the evening made an end of us.

O Lord, as day upon day,
so sin upon sin do we add.

<sup>i</sup> Two references on this leaf are right only on the Prayer Book's numbering, and that is the hardest evidence in the volume about which Psalter was physically on the desk. The Lord hath granted His loving-kindness in the day-time is cited xlii. 10, and the outgoings of the morning and of the evening lxxv. 8 — figures that answer in the Coverdale Psalter and not in the Authorised Version. Everywhere else the question is settled by wording, which can be remembered; here it is settled by a numeral, which has to be looked up. Somebody had the Prayer Book open.

<sup>ii</sup> Hezekiah's psalm returns for the evening office, and it is being thanked rather than prayed. Who hast not cut off, like a weaver, our life, nor from the morning even unto the evening made an end of us — the sick king's I have cut off like a weaver my life, turned from complaint into a benediction for the day survived. Isaiah xxxviii carried the whole of §37's confession and the twin at 409; here it does a third thing, and none of the three places refers to the others.

Pro. xxiv. 16. Septies in die impingit justus, nos vero (miseri peccatores) septuaginta septies.

Hodie quoque suum [malum] habuit, et suum merebi[tur.]

Sed revertimur ad Te, et omnia ossa nostra dicunt, Pœnitet, Nec occidat sol
super iram Tuam.

Domine, universa opera nostra bona Tu operatus es in nobis.
Quicquid recte egimus, Propitius respice.

Domine, peccatum et perditio nostra ex nobis sunt.
Quicquid deliquimus,
Clementer ignosce,
Respice bonum, Malum condona.

Benedictus es Tu, Domine,
Qui das dilectis Tuis somnum suavitatis, et timentibus Te dormire fiducialiter.
Illumina oculos nostros, ne obdor-miremus in morte.

Libera nos a terrore nocturno,
a negotio perambulante in tenebris.
Ecce non dormitabit neque dormiet,
Qui custodit Israel.

Dominus custodiat nos ab omni malo, etiam custodiat animas nostras Dominus.

Prov. xxiv. 16. Seven times in the day the just man stumbleth,<sup>i</sup> but we (miserable sinners) seventy times seven.

This day too hath had its own [evil],
                                           and shall deserve its own.

Yet we return unto Thee, and all our bones say, It repenteth us,
                                           And let not the sun go down<sup>ii</sup> upon Thy wrath.

O Lord, all our good works
                                           Thou hast wrought in us.
                                           Whatsoever we have done aright,
                                           Look Thou graciously upon.

O Lord, our sin and our perdition are of ourselves.

Whatsoever we have done amiss,
                                           Mercifully forgive,
                                           Look upon the good,
                                           Pardon the evil.

Blessed art Thou, O Lord,
 Who givest Thy beloved the sleep of sweetness,
                                           and to them that fear Thee to sleep in confidence.
 Lighten our eyes, that we sleep
                                           not in death.

Deliver us from the terror by night,
                                           from the thing that walketh about in darkness.
 Behold, He shall neither slumber nor sleep,
                                           Who keepeth Israel.

The Lord preserve us from all evil, yea, the Lord preserve our souls.

<sup>i</sup> The Gospel's measure of forgiveness is taken over to count sins instead. Seven times in the day the just man stumbleth is Proverbs — but we (miserable sinners) seventy times seven. At printed 377 that figure was what God was required to forgive, and the page there multiplied it out to four hundred and ninety to make the demand exact. Here the same number counts the falls. The measure of mercy has become the measure of need, and neither page mentions the other.

<sup>ii</sup> A precept given to men is turned round and prayed to God. Let not the sun go down upon your wrath is Paul's rule for the Ephesians' quarrels; here it is let not the sun go down upon Thy wrath. The command is God's own, given back to Him as a petition — and at the evening office the sun going down is not a figure but the hour the prayer is being said at. The English keeps the second person and does not soften it into a wish.

Domine, ego dormiam, sed
Cor meum vigilabit.

Visita me, Domine, visitatione
sanctorum, et revela mihi aurem in visionibus noctis.

Sit somnus meus, ut laboris,
sic peccati cessatio.

Ne quid vel per insomnia cogitem, quod Te offendat, vel me polluat.

Da, Domine, recordari apud Te noctem non esse noctem, et tenebras esse instar lucis meridianæ.

Da, Domine, fugiente somno ab oculis meis, nocte recordari nominis Tui,
ut custodiam legem Tuam.

Da meditari nocte cum corde,
et excruciarī, et scrutari spiritum meum,
et increpationem renum non negligere,

Quid recte, quid rectius, Quomodo Tibi magis acceptus, Quomodo hominibus magis gratus;
Semitas meas, et lectum meum,
Te circumdare,

Te possidere Vias meas:

Lucerna ardente videre Te,
Lucerna exstincta videre Te.

Da, Domine, cogitare Somnum longum,
Somnum mortis,
Lectum sepulchri,

O Lord, I shall sleep, but
 My heart shall wake.
 Visit me, O Lord, with the visitation of saints, and uncover mine
 5 ear in the visions of the night.
 Let my sleep be, as a rest from labour,<sup>i</sup>
 so a rest from sin.
 Let me think nothing, even in my dreams,
 that may offend Thee, or defile me.
 10 Grant, O Lord, that I may remember before Thee that the night is no night, and that the darkness is as the light of noonday.
 Grant, O Lord, when sleep fleeth from mine eyes,
 to remember Thy Name in the night,
 15 that I may keep Thy law.
 Grant me to commune by night with mine own heart,
 and to be pierced, and to search out my spirit,
 and not to neglect the chastening of my reins,
 What is right, what is more right,
 20 How I may be more acceptable unto Thee,
 How more pleasing unto men;
 That my paths and my bed,
 Thou dost compass about,
 That Thou possessest my ways:
 25 By the lamp burning, to see Thee,<sup>ii</sup>
 By the lamp quenched, to see Thee.
 Grant, O Lord, to think upon
 The long sleep,
 The sleep of death,
 30 The bed of the sepulchre,

<sup>i</sup> The examination of conscience is carried on into unconsciousness. Let my sleep be, as a rest from labour, so a rest from sin — and then further in: let me think nothing, even in my dreams, that may offend Thee, or defile me. Sleep is asked for as a moral condition and not merely a bodily one, which is where §41's evening Scrutinium was always heading; the search does not stop when the searcher does.

<sup>ii</sup> One line said twice with a single word changed, and the book turns on it. By the lamp burning, to see Thee · By the lamp quenched, to see Thee. The lamp put out is the bedside candle and it is also the life, and the next lines say so plainly — the long sleep, the sleep of death, the bed of the sepulchre. The petition is identical on both sides because the request does not change when the light does.

Stramentum vermium, Operimentum pulveris.

In pace in idipsum dormiam et requiescam;

5 Quia Tu, Domine, singulariter in spe constituisti me.

In manus Tuas, Domine,

Commendo spiritum

10 meum, quia Tu

redemisti me,

Domine Deus.

The litter of worms,<sup>i</sup>
 The covering of dust.
     In peace, in the selfsame, will I sleep<sup>ii</sup>
 and take my rest;
 5      For Thou, Lord, only hast set me in hope.
 Into Thy hands, O Lord,
     I commend my spirit, for Thou 10          hast redeemed me,
         O Lord God.

<sup>i</sup> Four names for the grave, and every one of them is a bed. The long sleep · the sleep of death · the bed of the sepulchre · the litter of worms · the covering of dust — the figure begun at the pillow is carried all the way down and never changed for another.

<sup>ii</sup> The book ends on the sentence a man says going to sleep and says dying, and it has said it once before. In peace, in the selfsame, will I sleep and take my rest is the Compline psalm, in idipsum; and the last words of all are Into Thy hands, O Lord, I commend my spirit, for Thou hast redeemed me. That verse stood at printed 26, among the morning prayers, where the plate cited it on the Prayer Book's numbering. The volume opens its day and closes its life with one sentence, and the lamp two lines above has just made the two the same act. Nothing on either page marks the return.

APPENDIX

Some of the sources Andrewes drew on

This note is illustrative and not a source apparatus. It names enough of what Andrewes gathered to show the kind of book he was making, and stops well short of what a full accounting would require.

Three sorts of attribution are mixed in what follows, and they are not of equal weight. Some authorities are printed in the 1853 itself, standing in the margin at the head of the sentence they belong to — Cyprian., Beda., Seneca. Some are the 1853 editor's own identifications, which he set in square brackets, and which are printed here in brackets for that reason. And some were identified neither by Andrewes nor by his editor but by F.E. Brightman in 1903, working from the sources; where a line below rests on Brightman it says so. The page numbers are the 1853's, as printed on the inner edge of every leaf here.

SCRIPTURE, BEFORE ANYTHING ELSE. The 1853 prints better than two thousand scripture references. That number is the plainest fact about this book: it is a cento, and the greater part of what Andrewes prays is quotation. The text he quotes is the Septuagint and the Vulgate, not any English Bible — which is why the translation here reaches for Coverdale's Psalter ahead of the Authorised Version, as the preface explains. The Prayer of Manasses is drawn on at printed 171 (the editor's identification, [Orat. Manassis.]).

THE LITURGIES. The Liturgy of S. Chrysostom is named twice in Part I, at printed 33 and 55, in the plate itself. The Sursum corda that opens the epigraph leaf of Part III at printed 398 is older than any of the liturgies Andrewes could have held: it stands in the Hippolytean canons and in Cyprian's treatise on the Lord's Prayer, an identification we owe to Brightman.

THE CREEDS AND THE PRAYER BOOK. The Nicene Creed is named in the plate at printed 177. The Te Deum is drawn on at printed 25 and again at 431, on the editor's identification. And at printed 199 the margin reads [Litan. Angl.] — the English Litany. A bishop's private book, kept in Greek and Latin, quietly quoting the vernacular liturgy he had to lead on Sundays.

THE GREEK FATHERS. Chrysostom again at printed 417. Theophylact opens Part III at printed 398, and Brightman located the passage exactly: the commentary on S. Luke xviii, where the Greek βάθρον καὶ κρητὶς is rendered by the Latin fundamentum et basis — foundation and ground — which is the first line of that leaf. Gregory of Nyssa stands in the catena at printed 386, from the first homily on the Lord's Prayer.

THE LATIN FATHERS. Part II gathers them in a short space, each named in the plate at the head of its sentence: Cyprian at printed 381, then Bede, Arnobius and Jerome at 382, then Augustine twice at 383 — once from contra Maximinum and once from the first book of the Confessions — and Augustine again at 417 and 422.

One of these is worth a note of its own. At printed 380 the plate attributes a passage ex Fulgentii l. i. ad Mon., to the first book of Fulgentius of Ruspe to Monimus. Our own reading suspected the passage was Augustine's, and the attribution was kept as printed rather than mended. Brightman, working independently from the sources, gives Fulgentius too. The plate was right and the doubt was ours.

A MEDIEVAL ARCHBISHOP. Printed 370 opens Oratio Tho. Bradwardini — Thomas Bradwardine, archbishop of Canterbury for five weeks in 1349. Brightman identifies the work as de causa Dei contra Pelagium, and the edition Andrewes is likely to have used as Savile's, London 1618.

PAGAN ANTIQUITY, AND NO APOLOGY FOR IT. Cicero is named in the plate at printed 385 and again at 386, the second time for Cato, who called himself to account each night for the day's business — de senectute, on Brightman's identification. Seneca is named at printed 385. At 386 Andrewes cites Ausonius out of Pythagoras, a quotation at one remove and marked as such.

Two things about this stretch repay attention. The first is that nothing in the page ranks these authorities below the Fathers or above them. Bede, Augustine, Cicero and Seneca stand in one column, each with his sentence, and the reader is left to make of that what he will. The second is smaller and more human: the sentence Seneca gives — that you must catch yourself out before you can mend yourself — Seneca himself had from Epicurus. The chain is Epicurus to Seneca to Andrewes, and a reader coming on that page would very likely take the thought for a Father's.

JEWISH AND CONTEMPORARY. At printed 386, in the middle of his own sentence rather than in a margin, Andrewes writes Recte igitur Rab. J. — rightly, then, Rabbi J. — on not putting repentance off until tomorrow. Hebrew stands in his text in more places than the 1853 prints; what it left out is recorded in the apparatus, and the preface says why it has not been restored here. On the following page, printed 387, he cites Rev. Usserius — James Ussher, then a contemporary — with page numbers, as one cites a book lately read.

A CAUTION ABOUT THE MARGINS. The attributions printed in the plate are not always exact, and they have been left as they are. The clearest instance is the Seneca. at printed 385, which stands at the head of two sentences. The first is Seneca's, from the twenty-eighth moral letter. The second — that a sore never found festers and goes uncured — is not in that letter and has not been located anywhere else. It may be Andrewes' own amplification of Seneca's metaphor; it may equally come from a collection of sentences of the kind he plainly used. The honest statement is that it is unattested elsewhere, and that one margin covers two sentences of which only the first is certainly Seneca's. A margin in this book is a pointer, not a warranty.
